In meeting Curley he was meeting one of the best boxers of the day in England, and a boy who also possessed a hefty punch.

The fight was a slaughter for the first fifteen rounds, Curley hitting Roberts with everything and when he chose.

As the fight progressed odds of 10 to 1 were freely offered that Curley would win, and at times as much as 1 to 1 that Roberts would not last for another round.

Roberts took fearful punishment, it is doubtful if "Bat" Nelson ever took more, and in the fifteenth round Curley had fought himself out, and Roberts by a supreme effort put him out two rounds later.

The men were light weights, and it was about the finest example of sheer bull-dog grit ever witnessed.

EX-CHAMPION TOM BURNS IS SEEKING DIVORCE FROM WIFE

Noah Brusso, known throughout the sporting world as Tommy Burns, has launched two great adventures. One is the signing on for the Canadian army, the other is a simultaneous move for a divorce. Tommy asks for a divorce from Julia V. Brusso whom he married in Los Angeles in 1906. Tommy claims that his wife is cruel; that her cruelty is sufficient, in fact, to cause him to seek legal separation and divorce. The application for divorce was filed in the California courts just before Tommy left for Vancouver, where he is to join the Canadian overseas forces. It is alleged in the papers in connection with the case that Mrs. Brusso has a violent temper, that she displayed this temper on occasions to the great physical danger of the one-time world champion. It is specifically alleged that in one instance the Los Angeles girl hurled a knife at the former prize fighter.

Noah Brusso was born in Preston, Ont. His wife is a convent educated girl. The union, though married by incompatability of temper, was blessed by two children.

Military News

Permanent and non-permanent militia are to be immediately merged with the Canadian Expeditionary Force, according to the latest orders from Ottawa. Officers and men of the permanent active militia or attached to headquarters or any military staff in the district, must in future consider themselves a part of the C.E.F., each holding the rank which they at present enjoy. Military regiments are not considered as being on active duty, so will not be concerned in the latest order, but the new decree will affect the Canadian Engineers, Army Medical Corps, Army Service Corps and Royal Canadian Dragoons. These permanent militia units have helped materially in perparing drafts to be sent overseas. The matter of pay will be much simplified by the change.

Recruiting in Cobourg.

It is reported in Kingston that Cobourg and vicinity contributed more men to the C.E.F. battalions than any other part of M.D. No. 3. Her depots were permanent units and provided drafts for battalions organizing in the other parts of the district.

"A" Men Called.

There have been no orders issued of late requiring draftees to report for service as the number available is now very small. All of category "A" men have been called so that only category "B" men remain, and it has not been decided how their services are to be utilized. A number of appeal cases are yet to be disposed of by the central appeal judge.

It is always safe to send a Dominion Express Money Order. Five dollars costs three cents.

INTERVIEW WITH A SUPER-PRUSSIAN

(By Captain R. P. P. Rowe.)

I have had the opportunity of conversation with many German prisoners. For the most part their talk has had merely a human interest, and such light as it has shed on the world problem with which we are faced has been indirect. But there was one exception—a Prussian who revealed very clearly the evil spirit by which he was possessed. It is hard to ascribe the workings of his mind to any other inspiration. The prisoner in question a man of undoubted intelligence, spoke English fluently. He had held some post at a University, I believe. The following, as nearly as I can remember it, was the gist of our conversation.

"I do not wish to insult you," he announced, in response to some remark of mine, "but you English are well-intentioned fools. To be accurate, I must withdraw 'well-intentioned.' There is nothing good about folly; it is the one thing evil."

"Then you would alter the human dictionary," I asked "leaving out the words that imply good and evil?"

"You jump to my meaning. Since you are intelligent, I will speak with you frankly. Until Kultur has prevailed, I would let them be. They are the money of fools, and for that reason of value to the wise."

"Their value is deceit?"

"It is one way of putting it. The way I look at it is this. They serve an ultimate purpose—our purpose, which is the new Right and the new Truth. We who govern in Germany are not like you. We govern the fools; the fools govern you."

"Your principles are sweeping. To come down to practice, what have you to say about the guilt of beginning the war?"

"Guilt? It was a glory. I claim it for Germany."

"That is hardly your official view."

"The official view is for the fools."

"But you believe in the Prussian purpose behind all this?"

"I do, as in nothing else. The Prussian purpose is God. There is no other. Prussia will rend the veil of the temple, but she will destroy to create. Against Prussian might the world as it exists to-day will fall in ruins, but Prussia will build a better and more virile work in its place. Strength only will survive. The life of men is naturally a fight. The strongest in force and cunning will live."

"It will be going back to the Flood."

"Prussia is the Flood."

"And when the old world is drowned, virtue and all such weaknesses will go with it?"

"The old virtue. It was womanish. The new virtue is strength."

"In that blessed future will war reign triumphant?"

"Life is war—all of life that is healthy. Peace is only striving for mastery with other weapons. That is the law of nature."

"So everyone will fight till everyone is dead?"

"The weakest will go under. They are the disease. The stronger will live; and after that the stronger and stronger, till there is perfect health."

"But it may be that Prussia will keep a few slaves?".

"Certainly. Those who care not to fight that they may rule are in their nature slaves."

This was unadulterated Prussianism with a vengeance. I had had enough of it; it was nauseating. But the man was genuine in his beliefs and so obsessed by his elementary notion of vidility that it was a waste of time to argue with him. His conceptions were quite definite and not a doubt assailed him. The hideous world of his vision seemed to him a natural and a glorious world.

When I went to sleep that night (after eating tinned lobster) I had a disgusting nightmare. I was compounded of teeth and claws and everybody else was similarly fashioned. We were crawling and fighting and eating each other, all striving to reach the top of a pyramid of dead and dying. I woke up and was physically sick. That brought relief; but I lay awake for some time, disturbed in mind as well as body. I speculated on the futility of words to avail against this madness. The man's views were Prussianism in an extravagant form, perhaps, but they were no more than the logical expression of all that Germany stands for.

THE S. O. S. OF THE TRENCHES

By Signaller J. R. Heron of Peterboro

The silence of the dismal morning hours was broken only by the distant boom of heavy guns behind and the intermittent crackle of machine guns in front. It was three o'clock and the darkness could almost be felt. The rain descended in a steady drizzle making the chalky ground treacherously slippery.

We were up forward to see what we could of the attack that was expected that morning at daybreak and we intended staying with the advanced field guns, those fast firing pieces which throw with such deadly effect their hornet like balls of death into the Hun ranks. We had wandered about in the inky darkness for an hour after leaving the road without finding the cunningly hidden lairs of these sleeping cannon.

Many swift slides to the bottoms of none too dry shell holes and oft repeated imprecations on the barbed wire which caught at use from all sides were the only variations in a dismal walk.

An occasional Hun shrapnel shell whistled past to burst over the road we had just left, and with his high explosive shells he seached for batteries where something suspicious showed to his observers.

Suddenly out of the darkness ahead glowed a cigarette, and a voice enquired our identity. It was with something approaching relief that we hailed the voice and hastened towards the spot where our interrogator stood.

"A JOLLY NIGHT."

"Rather a jolly night, isn't it?" drawled the voice of the unseen friend from above our heads as we halted before a bank of earth on which he stood. His voice was fresh despite the dreary hour and surroundings.

I enquired about battery positions and the unseen owner of the voice and cigarette admitted cautiously that there might be some battery positions around that part of the country, and in fact that he himself was a gunner on guard. Having explained to his satisfaction our business there my companion and I were admitted into his comparitive confidence. Yes, we had guessed right, an attack was expected that morning. Yes, the guns were near, he was standing on the roof of a gun pit. Sure we could see the guns, later on.

Nothing could persuade him to take us into the gun pits then, and his refusal rather piqued me.

In answer to my question he called me up beside him. On my complying he pointed to the front some few thousand yards off where an occasional star shell flared ghostly white in the surrounding darkness, and sank to obscurity as suddenly as it had burst forth.

"OUT THERE"

"Out there," said the gunner, "are infantry men looking over the parapet for the first signs of the Hun attack.

To you those flares mean simply that the infantry are illuminating the space between the lines but to me they convey more. That occasional light shows that the men are on their toes in the front line of defence.

I have been on duty for two and a half hours and I have two to do yet. I am sleepy, but that flare tells me what is expected of me.

I, too, must keep on my toes, for at any minute a flare of another color may go up there, and my turn to act will have come. When the call for artillery support goes out the S.O.S. of the trenches— it is as binding on me as is the call of a steamer in distress on a sister ship.

I depends on my quickness in getting the guns into action whether our barrage is put down in time to catch the Huns advancing, or whether they get through intact on our infantry. On these guns, of whose crews I am the only one awake, may depend the lives of many men, and even the seaboard and England. So you see why I cannot leave my post long enough to show you the guns."

Behind us with exasperating reiteration a heavy gun barked and in front the star shells flared regularly. I tried to pierce the darkness for a glimpse of the gunner's face, but all I could see was his cigarette end pointing always toward lines where his comrades of the infantry watched as vigilantly as he.

SIGNALLER J. R. HERON,

CITY WILL HOLD WOOD SUPPLY FOR THE WINTER NEEDS

That the city keep its supplies of wood for a winter reserve, was a passing suggestion at the meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night.

"Let the dealers sell their wood first, and if there comes a pinch we can turn the city's supplies into the market," one of the aldermen thought aloud.

"What will you do if they bring on a pinch?" was asked.

Mayor Duncan — "They surely would not see the people go short?"

"They did last winter. There were dealers who refused to sell wood they had in their yards."

Ald. McIntyre—"We can use our judgment when the occasion arises. In the meantime we can hold whatever wood we buy."

Ald. Dobbin stated that there was plenty of mill wood obtainable for the summer, and it was practically decided by the committee to keep the city wood until cold weather blows in.

The committee deliberated upon several offers of wood for sale, and finally decided to buy one lot of 400 cords, most of which will be mixed wood, at a price which will be made public when the contract is signed. This supply is in the Stoney Lake district, and will be towed down the canal to Peterboro. The other proposal has not sufficiently matured for a present decision, and further negotiations will be carried on with the owners.

It was also intimated that the city might be able to secuure wood on government lands without any other cost than that of transportation. Mr. Arthur Stevenson has been assisting the committee in this matter. He is well acquainted with the locations in the northern districts. He will probably be asked to accompany Mr. Giles Stone, a lumber expert, in a trip to survey the tracts under consideration, and estimate the quantity of wood available, and the cost of cutting and hauling it to Peterboro.

COAL STORAGE.

The committee inspected the Mann cheese Box Factory Building at the C. P. R. station last night, and outlined certain improvements that are regarded as necessary for the storage and delivery of the coal the city has ordered. This building was puurchased from Mr. Buck a short time ago, and the purchase of the lease of the land is the next step in the committee's plans. The floor of the building will likely be cemented in order to facilitate the future work, and other minor alterations will be made.

A SURE CURE FOR WHOOPING COUGH

M.D.P. The whooping cough cure you refer to was published on November 7th, 1912, and read as follows: Take 1 cup flax seed, 1 lemon (sliced), 2 oz. rock candy, 2 oz. honey, 1 quart water. Mix and simmer slowly four hours; then strain. This should make one pint; if not, add sufficient water to make one pint. Dose for adults—one tablespoon four times a day. For children—one dessertspoonful as often as cough is troublesome—when it begins. Mr. R. W. Neville, who supplied the recipe, and who speaks from 30 years' experience of its beneficial effects, says that it never fails to relieve or stop the whooping, and that if taken at the beginning of the attack it will cure quickly.

SEVERAL OF THEM REPORT LOTS OF HELP.

Casual conversation with a number of the farmers at the market this morning unearthed the fact that none have had any trouble with the help problem. All reported "plenty to do but someone ready to do or doing it." and in many cases the fact that women are adapting themselves splendidly to conditions and working in the field. "We won't need any help to take in the hay because there is none this year but the grain crops are splendid. Potatoes are exceptionally promising," was the general opinion. The farmers are confident that, unless we have unusually strong winds, the apple crop will be good.

Late Despatches

A GIANT STRUGGLE.

(By The Associated Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, July 20.—The battle zone along the front of the Allied counter attack between the Aisne and the Marne is being extended further south towards Chateau Thierry than the region previously affected, according to information early this morning. The Franco - American forces are continuing the steady pounding of the northern part of the line near Soissons, although the movement is lacking the dashing advance which characterized the first days of the attack. The attempts of the Crown Prince's generals to rally their forces to meet the steady movement of the Allies, has resulted in such a strengthening of opposition as to indicate that the battle is approaching a point when the armies will soon be locked in a giant struggle. Both on the northern end of the line and further south, reinforced Germans are making a desperate effort to hold their positions.

AFFILIATE WITH BOARD OF TRADE

Playgrounds Association Met Last Evening

At a well attended and enthusiastic meeting of the Playgrounds Association held last night in the Public Library, it was decided that, through Mrs. W. R. Morris, the association will endeavour to interest such women's societies in the city as would probably be in sympathy with the work, and ask them to appoint delegates to the executive of the board. The Association is considering affiliation with the Board of Trade. Mrs. J. W. Worth will take up the initiative in the latter.

A partial list of accounts were passed, all of which were satisfactory and very encouraging.

Mr. Roberts occupied the chair.

Piece of Impudence By Chief Constable Says Labor Man

Hamilton, July 19. — The Trades and Labour Council organization committee has plans under way for the formation of a local policemen's union. It is whispered that the matter will be broached at to-night's regular session of the central labour union. Several members of the committee intend to introduce to the delegates the resolution passed by the Chief Constables' Association of Canada relative to the government being asked to enact legislation making it an offence for members of any police force to become affiliated with any trades union or kindred organization.

Ex-Ald. H. J. Halford, financial secretary of the Trades' Council, discussing the matter to-day, said that the police chiefs had a nerve to pass such a resolution. "What are those chief fellows talking about?" he said to the reporters. "They have an organization of their own to protect themselves and yet they don't want other people to organize to better and improve their working and wage conditions. Its a glaring piece of impudence and inconsistency and the police chiefs should mind their own business."

General Organizer Edward O'Dell, International Boot and Shoe Workers Union, told the scribes that in London, Ont., there was a policemen's union which affiliated with the Trades Congress of Canada. The local is making headway, he said. He mentioned every member of the force excepting Chief Wiliams, was a member. And even the chief was in harmony with the men and union. "Take it for granted it won't be very long before every police force throughout Canada will be organized," he said.

PHYSICIAN KILLED WHEN FIRE PATROL WRECKS MOTOR CAR

NEW YORK, July 20.—A fire patrol speeding at more than forty miles an hour struck an automobile runabout and killed it occupant, a physician, who was on his way to see a patient. The patrol then dashed upon the sidewalk and into a crowd of pedestrians injuring four, two of them seriously.

The accident occurred at Columbus avenue and Cathedral Parkway (110th street). Fire patrol No. 5, which is located at No. 305 West 121st street, was responding to an alarm of fire in a dry goods store at No. 858 Columbus avenue and was rushing down Manhattan avenue.

As it approached 110th street, or Cathedral Parkway, intent on turning on that thoroughfare and then to run into Columbus avenue, the driver, George Rodecker, of No. 305 East Seventy-fourth street, was a Columbus avenue car and on automobile omnibus in front of him. He turned to avoid them as they had come to a dead stop on hearing the fire siren and turned into the north bound car tracks.

PATROL AND AUTOMOBILE CRASH

Near the corner and coming west on 110th street was Dr. Gottfried Merckel, of No. 124 East Eighty-first street, who was running about ten miles an hour. When he saw the patrol he tried to avoid the big machine. Rodecker, the driver of the patrol, saw him at the same time. The crash was inevitable and the physician's smaller car was hurled to the northeast corner of Manhattan avenue and Cathedral Parkway where he was thrown out and killed.

Rodecker swung his machine around, in an endeavor to avoid further catastrophe, and the car dashed into the northwest corner of Cathedral Parkway into a crowd of passersby.

Still going at high speed the fire patrol crushed through the crowd, knocking pedestrians down right and left. After running about fifty feet it was brought to a stop against the iron railing of the Cathedral Parkway apartment house and then all four tires blew out with a loud report, bringing scores of persons on the run to the scene of the accident.

Sergeant George A. Lalor was in command of the patrol and he and his men jumped down to assist in getting at the injured. Persons in automobiles ran up and the wounded were hastily placed in these cars and rushed to nearby hospitals before an ambulance reached the scene.

Dr. Thomas A. Gonzales, of the Medical Examiner's office, is making an investigation with the police of the 100th street station. No arrests were made. Sergeant Lalor said the accident was unavoidable and that he was blowing his siren as hard as he could.

The Mark Street Methodist Church Sunday School Picnic

The Mark street Methodist Sunday School held their annual picnic on Tuesday, July 16th to Hiawatha, per steamer Stoney Lake. It was an ideal day for a Sunday school outing and the large number of young people who came fully enjoyed the trip. It was remarkably well patronized by the grown-ups, who took as much if not more pleasure out of the day than the young—and that is saying something. The usual Stoney Lake courtesy was in evidence, and the genial captain lent himself to making the trip a pleasure.

The booth was ably managed by Mrs. Speer and her able assistant, Miss Whattam.

TO SHIP SALMON PACK.

LAST YEAR'S ACCUMULATION GOING TO BRITAIN.

Ottawa, July 22. — The government has made arrangements with the British Ministry of Food for the shipment of the remainder of the 1917 salmon pack on the Pacific Coast. For some time shipments have been held up owing to lack of transportation. This morning a cable was received as follows: "We are granting shipping permits remainder 1917 pack sold in England in vessels leaving Pacific Coast."

This means that one hundred thousand cases of last year's pack will be shipped to England in vessels built in the Pacific Coast.

Arrangements are now being made to make certain that there will be a market for this year's pack including inferior salmon, known as chum salmon. Chum salmon in the past has been sold principally in Italy and France, and it has been impossible to get transportation. However it is hoped now that the 1917 pack is disposed of the packers will be in a position to put up all possible salmon this year.

QUICKLY CURED BY DR. FOWLER'S
EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY.

Mrs. J. Fawcett, Hopewell Hill, N. B., writes: "I am writing you of my experience with Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Last summer I was taken so very sick with cramps and pains across my stomach that I sent for the doctor. He said I had summer complaint and gave me some medicine, but it did me very little good. As I was reading your B. B. B. Almanac, I saw Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry advertised, so I asked my sister to go to the store and get me a bottle, and before I had taken all of it I was a well woman, and have not had the slightest return of the trouble since. I cannot say enough for your valuable medicine, and always keep a bottle in the house."

You run absolutely no risk when you buy Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, as it has been a standard remedy on the market for the past 72 years. Ask for "Dr. Fowler's" and insist on getting it, as the cheap imitations are dangerous to your health. Price, 35c. Put up by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

HELEN IS DELIRIOUS

CHAPTER CXXIV.

I never knew when the doctor came. They told me, afterward that I became delirious almost immediately after giving consent that he be sent for, Celeste told me that I raved terribly, crying that I wanted my baby and couldn't be happy in having it because I would lose my husband's love.

"It was frightful, Madam, to hear you," she said, "it made us all weep."

Toward morning, my baby was prematurely born, born dead. I was very ill for some time, too ill to even think. Mother came and either she or George were with me day and night, as well as the nurses. I recall that I used to wonder, in a detached sort of way, why George stayed home so much; why he wasn't with some one else. I took mother's being there for granted, and asked no questions.

No one ever has told me so, but I know that by my foolish hiding my condition from my husband, by my constantly exceeding my strength, by my dancing hour after hour, that I killed my baby.

As I grew better, I gave expression to this thought to mother; and she gently scolded me for even thinking such a thing.

A HEART TO HEART TALK

I had been sitting up for about a week, and was much stronger. George came in early in the afternoon, bringing me a wonderful bouquet of orchids.

"Do you feel well enough to talk to me—talk seriously, for a little while?" he asked, as he kissed me. I thought it was worth all the terrible pain and illness to have him so tender with me.

"Of course I do! I am almost well now," I returned, with a smile.

He brought a chair and sat down beside me, taking my hand in his.

"Now Helen, tell me what made you think I did not want children—would not love you if we had them? Tell me honestly, dear: Don't hide anything, even your thoughts about it, from me."

The tears were very near, but I forced them back. I would not cry before George, in spite of my weakness, I had not done so since the day I had said I would not. I waited so long, trying, to think what to say—just what to tell him—that he leaned over and kissed me again, saying tenderly:

"One would think me an ogre, dear. Please talk freely to me. When you were delirious, you said many things I did not understand."

"You remembed when we were at Narraganset, last year, that Mrs. Collins was also there?"

"Yes, I remember that very well. Why, what has that to do with it?"

"One day I was sitting in a sheltered part of the piazza and overheard her talking to another woman. They spoke of you and me, then they talked of children. Mrs. Collins immediately said that men who were particular—who wanted their wives to look well, and to appear in society with them—didn't want children. Then she added that it was because of children that men grew itimate with other women, and their wives were neglected; that babies took up so much of a woman's time and thought, that husbans grew away from them, and some other things which I do not recall well enough to repeat."

AN UNDERSTANDING.

"But—oh, I see. Because you overheard this conversation, you thought that I—why"—

"Why shouldn't I think you were just as she said? You had held her up as a model to me, ever since I married you; her and other women like her. Then, you enjoyed her society"—I stumbled on. (He had asked me to talk freely; I would try to. Perhaps I never would get up courage to do so again.) "You often left me alone, to spend the evening where me she was, and she seemed to know you so well—to know all about you, your likes and dislikes—even to the color you liked your neckties to be. I never said anything of that to you; but it hurt me, and let me know how intimate you must—have been with her. I wanted to be like her, not because I admired her, George, but because I thought it was the only way to please you. So, naturally when I overheard that conversation I judged she knew your feelings on that subject. When I found I was to have a baby, I hid it because I wanted to be with you, to go out with you. I was afraid you wouldn't let me, if you knew—you wouldn't love me, even a little bit."

"You poor child!" George exclaimed, as he swept me up out of the invalid chair into his arms. "You poor child," he repeated. "Why, dearest, I want children, long for them. I have been a bit disappointed that they did not come. You dear girl, to bear such a thing as that alone. How can I ever repay you? Tell me, dear, was what you said in your delirium true; that you locked yourself away to sew because you feared to have me know?"

"Yes, George. Many days, and I made such lovely things."

Tomorrow—A Better Understanding.

IT STOPPED MY SUFFERING

Said Mrs. Jaynes, Speaking of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Anderson, S. C.—"I got into an awful condition with what the doctors said was an organic displacement. I would have pains so badly that they would have to put hot clothes on me and give me morphine. The doctor said I would never be any better without an operation and I would never have any children without it. A neighbor who knew what your medicine would do advised me to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. I did so and it made me a well woman and the next September I gave birth to a healthy baby boy."—Mrs. SALLIE JAYNES, 37 Lyon St., Anderson, S. C.

The letters which we are constantly publishing from women in every section of this country prove beyond question the merit of this famous root and herb medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Dishonor Among Thieves.

Newspapers received here from Breslau, Germany, tell of a woman, whose criminal career created a sensation throughout the empire, being sentenced to six years' imprisonment for filching millions from the credulous. The court in sentencing the woman said her punishment would have been made more severe if it had not been for the fact that her dupes were also criminals, expecting to profit by violations of the law.

The woman now serving her time is the wife of a humble clerk employed in a municipal department. His name is Gohla. The woman is forty-eight years old, but still handsome and of striking figure. She was for years a regular first nighter. She would appear bedecked with diamonds worth a million marks. When her daughter was married recently she paid 100,000 marks for her trousseau.

When war broke out Mrs. Gohla branched out as a contractor. At least she claimed she had war contracts obtained for her by influential friends. On the strength of these war contracts she borrowed money by the millions. Her "business" grew in leaps and bounds. She finally went to Berlin, where she found admission into the highest circles. Here the number of her dupes increased rapidly.

At last some of her creditors became suspicious and notified the police. Her home was raided and a lot of incriminating evidence was found. It was proved that the woman had not only taken money from dupes, but also had bribed a number of officials to award contracts to her which enabled her to find more dupes.

Mrs. Gohla was found guilty of fraud in eleven cases, of bribing officials in five cases and also of violation of the lottery law. Before the trial commenced her husband sued her for divorce, but this action did not save him, for he was sentenced to one year's imprisonment as his wife's accomplice. Gohla claims to have known nothing of his wife's love affairs and blackmailing schemes.

Some high dignitaries and captains of industry are involved in these scandals, which will be aired when the divorce suit comes to trial.

A RECIPE FOR A DAY.

Take a little dash of water cold
And a little leaven of prayer,
And a little bit of morning gold
Dissolved in the morning air.

Add to your meal some merriment
And a thought for your kith and kin,
And then as your prime ingredient,
A plenty of work thrown in.

But spice it all with essence of love,
And a little whiff of play,
Let a wise book and a glance above,
Complete the well made day.

Kind words do not count much. They are quickly spoken. They do not blister the tongue that utters them. They do not keep us awake at nights. It's easy to scatter them. And oh, how much good they do!

WRITE A LETTER.

Write a letter to a soldier when you haven't much to do, it will brace up some homesick fellow who is feeling pretty blue. Oh, our boys are lion-hearted, and they will whip their weight in snakes, but they have their lonesome moments when their heart is full of aches; there are hours when they are longing for the homes so far away, and the girls they left behind them, and the parents old and gray; and a letter full of sunshine makes the melancholy shrink—therefore get your pen in action, with a demijohn of ink. Write a letter to a soldier, full of cheer and joy; let the sob stuff go to thunder—it won't help a lonesome boy. Tell the soldier that you're betting he will make the Teuton fly; tell him all is hunky-dory, and the goose is hanging high. Tell him all his friends are banking on the big things he'll achieve, let him know he's not forgotten since he took his final leave. Write a letter to a soldier ere you go to bed to-night, some poor fellw is waiting for the letter you don't write. It will take you fifteen minutes such a letter to compose, and then you'll hearten up a soldier when he's billed to face his foes. Make it bright and breezy, full of courage, smiles and snap, show the confidence you're feeling in the outcome of the scrap, and some soldier boy will bless you as he takes his little gun, and prepares to shoot the gizard from a lewd, immoral Hun.

There are abodes in every city—humble, two stories; four plain, unpapered rooms; undesirable neighbours; and yet there is a man who would die on the threshold rather than surrender. Why? It is home. Whenever he thinks of it he sees angels of God hovering near. The ladders of heaven are let down to that house. Over the child's rough crib there are the chantings of angels that look over Bethlehem. It sees angels of God hovering near is home. These children may come up after a while and they may win high positions, and they may have an affluent residence, but they will not until their dying day forget that humble roof, under which their mother sang, and their father rested, and their sisters played.

AN AGED COUPLE.

We recently spent a pleasant evening with an aged couple, and what added to the pleasantness was the fact that although the couple was basking in the sunset of a well spent life, they were as devoted to each other as when the "honeymoon" first shown in their pathway. We could not but compliment our friend upon his devotion to his aged companion, and in reply he said to us, "You mistake me if you think age has blotted out my heart." Though silver hair falls over a brow all furrowed yet I am a lover still. I love all nature and I love you aged dame. Look at her. Her face is care worn, but it has ever held a smile for me. Often have I shared the same bitter cup with her, and so shared it seems almost sweet. Years of sickness have stolen the freshness of life; but like the faded rose, the perfume of her love is richer than when in the full bloom of youth and maturity. Together we have wept over graves. Through sunshine and storm we have clung together, and now she sits with her knitting, her cap quaintly frilled, the old style kerchief crossed white and prim above the heart that beat so long and true for me; the dim blue eyes that shrinkingly front the glad day; the sunlight throwing a parting farewell, kisses her brow and leaves upon it faint tracing of wrinkles angelic radiance. I see, though no one else can, the bright, glad young face that won me first, and the glowing love of 40 years thrills through my heart till the tears come. Though this form be bowed, God imparts eternal life within. Let the ear be deaf, the eye blind, the hand palsied, the limbs withered, the brain clouded, yet the heart—the true heart—may hold such wealth of love that all flowers of death and the victorious grave shall not be able to put out this quenchless flame."

As we meandered home we could but think what a heaven upon earth this would be if devotion existed between all who had taken the marriage vow. To such a couple the mellow rays of life's sunset are the most beautiful of any on the long journey from the cradle to the grave.

THE BAND OF MOTHERS.

"There is no more splendid figure in American life to-day than a mother who has sent forth her son to the battlefield to fight for human rights," says the Evening Herald of Fall River, Mass.

"And so we admire and look up to the War Mothers of America to-day, and do them homage. It is they who have given the army that has taken the field to fight for home and country. Nor should they be permitted to merge with the general stream sweeping down through the ages unnoticed and forgotten after the fight has been won and peace has been declared.

"The organization of War Mothers of America," continues the Herald, "means much to the country and to the cause for which we are fighting. Such an organization, we believe would mean much to the mothers themselves who have sent their sons to war. Surely there could be no band of nobler women, none more deserving of honour, love and encouragement."

A Bad Reputation.

They were burying the German dead, when one Tommy called over to his mate:

"Bill, this bloke's a-moving. What shall I do?"

"Shove him in," growled Bill.

"But," went on his mate, "he says he ain't dead."

"That doesn't matter," answered Bill, "you cant believe a word the bloomin' Germans say. Shove him in!"

SELECT MEDICINE CAREFULLY

Purgatives are dangerous. They gripe, cause burning pains and make the constipated condition worse. Physicians say the most ideal laxative is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut they are exceedingly mild, composed only of health-giving vegetable extracts. Dr. Hamilton's Pills restore activity to the bowels, strengthen the stomach, and purify the blood. For constipation, sick headache, biliousness and disordered digestion no medicine on earth makes such remarkable cures as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Try a 25c box yourself.

If so, your whole system naturally gets tied up too.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Love's Sacrifice

By ELIZABETH SCHOEN COBB

Being the elder son of the family, Percival Allen, after idly wandering about the country for a year, returned home to find his father absent, and at once assumed the charge of affairs, with due pride and dignity.

John Allen, the head of the family, was a contractor, and had not been home for over six months. He had a large contract for the construction of a dam in Minnesota, which would mean his permanent enrichment if he carried it through. At an important stage of the work, however, the temporary dam broke away, causing him tremendous loss, and Mrs. Allen was aware that her husband was now struggling against fearful odds to secure the capital to continue his work and finish it by the time agreed upon.

Percival Allen did not know this, and had he done so it would have made little impression upon his shallow mind. John Allen was a generous provider for his family, they lived well; he always looked first to their welfare. He had a pride in concealing his financial affairs from his townsmen, and Percival found money in the bank, household bills provided for, and proceeded to manage affairs as though there was an unfailing source of revenue to draw from. He was meddlesome, dictatorial, and to the limit exercised his assumption of brief authority. In a week he had his indulgent mother anxious, his sister Barbara troubled and the servants by the ears.

"I wish you would not tease Barbara about Nellis Wayne," his mother said to him one day.

"Oh, Wayne will do!" responded Percival in his lordly way. "I understand his old man is about ready to pass in his checks and will leave Nellis a big fortune. Oh, yes, Wayne will do."

"Then don't interfere or comment. Barbara is very sensitive, and is by no means as yet engaged to Mr. Wayne, and she resents any allusion to her association with him."

"Just tell her that I approve the match, and to hook Wayne before some one else gets the prize," observed Percival coarsely.

Nellis Wayne was a most estimable young man, and had been paying attention to Barbara for nearly a year past.

The father of Nellis Wayne died, and he was the sole heir to the estate. The family lawyer called Nellis into his office a week later.

"Nellis," he said, "I was instructed to make a disclosure to you by your father, in the event of his death. He was, as you know, a close friend of John Allen. During the past year he advanced fifty thousand dollars to Allen to try and save his contract. In return, Allen made over to him as security all his property. Outside of his notes, your father's estate comprises only a few hundred dollars in cash and the little hardware store he hires a man to operate."

"Then if Allen fails and we take his property away from him, he and his family are beggars?"

"That's about it," the lawyer answered.

"It shall never be!" declared Nellis Wayne, and the day he received the Allen notes he burned them up. Their former existence was a secret, so far as the public was concerned. Nellis thought of Barbara, was glad of his sacrifice and started in life all over again at the little hardware store.

Percival Allen heard of this, ordered Barbara to cut the acquaintance of Nellis, and wrote a letter to the latter, informing him that his calls at the Allen home would be no longer agreeable to the family.

"Run after him, and let the people chuckle over your chasing down a man who has never spoken a word of love to you!" he subdued poor Barbara by sneering.

One day John Allen was brought home by train in a raging fever. His partner sent word that Allen had collapsed from hard work and anxiety, but assured Mrs. Allen that the contract would be finished in time. Barbara nursed her father. She was terrified when, in his ravings, he revealed the fact that he had borrowed fifty thousand dollars from the father of Nellis Wayne. She went at once to the hardware store.

"Mr. Wayne," she said clearly, "I have come to tell you of a discovery I have made. My father owes you a large sum of money. Why were we not advised of the fact?"

"Because I have canceled the debt by burning up your father's notes," replied Nellis.

"You did that!" cried Barbara. "Could I see the family of the woman I loved beggared?" spoke Nellis in a rare excess of emotion.

"Then you did it because—"

"Because I loved you. Oh, Barbara, is there any hope?"

She placed her hand in his. "Ask me that when your noble sacrifice is atoned for," she said simply.

At the end of that week there came the glad news that the contract was finished ahead of time. John Allen sent for Nellis, for there was enough now to repay him the fifty thousand dollars, besides further enriching Mr Allen.

"Is there any hope?" asked Nellis of Barbara, after that.

"There was hope all along!" whispered Barbara, placing both of her hands in his own this time.

From the Past

By WINIFRED LEE

Bartley Paine cherished the secret of a dark spot in his life. It was not ever present, for as the years went by its shadow lessened and, he hoped, would eventually vanish into the obscurity of permanent forgetfulness.

It was ten years agone when, a youth of eighteen employed as cashier by John Howe, a distant relative, that he had been speciously persuaded by two fellow clerks to borrow two thousand dollars from the funds of the house. They had shown him that they had "a tip" where that amount invested in a certain stock would quadruple in twenty-four hours. Bartley provided the money. The entire investment was lost, the two scamps fled and the next morning, a wretched but sincere penitent, Bartley went to his relative and confessed all.

"Leave my service, go and settle this matter with my lawyer and let me never see your face again!" pronounced John Howe sternly.

Robert Wiley, that lawyer! To his dying day Bartley would never forget him. He was a sinister being, with a chin like a hook and a nose like a beak.

"You will first sign a written confession of your crime," the elfish barrister had said.

"But I have already told Mr. Howe of my misstep," said Bartley humbly.

"It won't do; a signed confession, or go away and let the law take its course."

Bartley shivered, but assented. "As to the money," he said, "if you will allow me I will stay right here, get a new position and work till I have earned enough to pay the score."

"Very good," nodded the lawyer.

At the end of four years Bartley's spirits were high when he placed the last of the misapplied money before Mr. Wiley.

"And the interest?" intimated the latter.

"You will find it included," said Bartley, almost resentfully, to this human leech. "Now, then, won't you kindly hand me back the confession?"

"I am instructed by Mr. Howe to retain that," said the lawyer. "He will hold it over you as a Damoclean sword to guarantee your future good conduct."

"Why, this is positively inhuman!" cried Bartley.

"Instructions," responded the lawyer. "See that you go straight."

Then Bartley went to another city and tried to forget the power he had left in those seemingly evil hands. He prospered quite fairly in a new position. He met Lucille Driscoll—courtship, marriage, happiness. She idolized him as a model lover and husband. She believed him the most worthy of men. He winced when he thought of that dark spot in his early life, but he could not hurt her pure spirit by revealing the truth.

And now the black shadow had suddenly, blightingly come down upon his life. It was the birthday of their child, little Bertram, aged six. They were to have a quiet family celebration and Bartley had secretly deposited a package containing gifts on the front porch, had started around the house to enter by a side door, when he came to a startled halt and stood rock-rooted. His heart seemed to cease its throbbings, his brain was turned to lead, for there, in the cozy parlor, seated opposite his wife, was—Robert Wiley!

To the exaggerated mentality of Bartley it seemed as though a destroying demon had invaded the peace and sanctity of an earthly paradise. There was the old specious, wily smirk on the goblin face, the old cruel, piercing glare of the eyes. Oh, at last his sin was to be brought home to him. Only to torment, to blackmail, to ruin him, could this specter of the past have thus invaded his home!

For an instant Bartley thought of flight. Could he ever face his wife if the past was revealed to her? He actually turned to leave the spot, when little Bertram came around the house, discovering him.

"Oh, mamma!" he shouted. "Here is papa, now!" seized his hand and pulled him into the house.

"A visitor, Bartley," spoke Mrs. Paine, arising and leaving the room, and Bartley faced his Nemesis.

To his amazement Wiley grasped his hand. "Ah, Paine," he spoke chirpingly, "You are looking well—and doing well, eh? I came on a matter of business. Mr. Howe died last month."

"Yes, I heard of it," nodded Paine.

"He has left you half his fortune. You are a rich man. I advised it. You see, Paine, it is I who, under his instructions, have kept trace of your every movement for ten years. So no one knew better than I your noble fight to redeem the past. You thought him an ogre and I your evil genius, but we were human, all the same. I would like to have you call at my hotel this evening and close up your interest in the estate."

Bartley Paine stood like one in a dream after the lawyer had left. He could not realize it all. A light form glided to his side. It was Lucille.

"Bartley," she whispered, "I knew of your trouble in the past all the time. I married you knowing it. I trusted you, knowing it, and loved you more and more as you nobly redeemed yourself. The shadow has lifted. Oh, my husband! let us never again think of aught but the sunshine of life which has come to us at last."

China's Joan of Arc.

China had her Joan of Arc. Tradition tells of a maiden, Moo Len, who, in the garb of a man, led the armies of the empire to victory.

Ancient Earrings.

The great Juvenal is authority for the statement that earrings were worn by all the males residing in the Euphrates provinces.

Bore and Caliber.

The bore of a shotgun is determined by the circumference of any one of a given number of lead balls of equal weight, the total weight of which is one pound. For instance, the circumference of the barrel of a ten bore shotgun is equal to the circumference of any one of ten lead balls of equal weight the total weight of which is one pound.

The caliber of a rifle is the diameter of the bore of its barrel measured in hundredths of an inch. The diameter of the bore of a 32 caliber rifle is thirty-two hundredths of an inch.—Philadelphia Press.

A Musical Tyrant.

Gluck as a conductor is said to have been an unmerciful tyrant. Frequently the musicians would have to repeat a passage twenty times before he was satisfied. The members of the Vienna court orchestra complained of this hard usage to the emperor, Joseph II., who appeased them by agreeing to give them 2 ducats instead of 1 ducat for every performance at which Gluck should conduct.

A Prophetic Writer.

In practical science the most marvelously prophetic writer was the Marquis of Worcester, who in his "Century of Inventions," published in 1663, described the steam engine, the telegraph, the torpedo, the range finder, the hydraulic press, portable military pontoons, matches and many other things which have come into use within the last hundred years.—St. James' Gazette.

The Wretch!

The general joker was watching a suffragette and anti playing anagrams.

"Here is one women should know how to use," said the genial joker, giving them the letters otave.

"It's votes!" cried the suffragette.

"Guess again," said the anti. "It's stove."—Judge.

Politeness.

"How is it that a man can carry an umbrella over another man's wife more satisfactorily than he can over his own wife?" "He cannot. He just thinks he can because the other man's wife is too polite to tell him what she thinks of his clumsiness."—Houston

A Commercial Tree.

A wonderful tree, known as the shea, is beginning to attract commercial attention in Western Africa. It supplies the natives not only with nuts, which they highly prize, but with a butter that may become an article of commercial importance. It is already exported to Europe, where makers of artificial butter find use for it. On the nuts that this tree produces there is a soft covering with a smooth skin that comes off easily when the nut ripens. This pulp is sweet and wholesome. Almost two-thirds of the nut is vegetable butter. The tree begins to bear when it is fifteen years old and reaches its prime in twenty-five years. Chocolate manufacturers could easily utilise the product. It might also be of use in making candles and soap.

Homemade Silver Polish.

To make the best silver polisher and cleaner known, take a bottle of ammonia as sold in most grocery stores, and to this add two ounces of whiting, and just a few drops of oxalic acid. In this way you will procure for the expenditure of 15 cents as much of the best silver polish as can be purchased for $1 in most of the prominent drug stores. This same polish is so cheap when homemade that the housewife will not find it too expensive to use it in polishing all of the cutlery and also the brass doorknobs or any other bright metal fixtures about the house.—National Magazine.

Fed Semi-Annually.

Gladys, the 20-foot python in Lincoln Park, Chicago, received her semiannual meal recently. Twelve keepers, with the aid of a sausage stuffing machine and a five-foot pole, treated her to 30 pounds of ground beef, followed by a 12-pound piece of beef.

An Emery Wheel.

A hand-operated emery wheel which can be clamped to any tree has been invented to sharpen the tools of men working in forests.

SPECIFIC FOR BRONCHITIS.

The turpentine used in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is not the ordinary commercial article, which is little used because of the unpleasantness of taste, but is specially extracted from tamarac and spruce gum and so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be at the same time pleasant to use and wonderfully effective in the cure of affections of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs.

HOW THE CAPTAIN GOT HIS REVENGE.

By MARTHA B. DARGAN.

[Copyright, by American Press Association.]

In the "good old colony days"—they were not so good as the present by any means—a young sailor named Witridge, who was not so infatuated with his religion that he must needs wish to make a bonfire of those who disagreed with him on doctrinal subjects, came out to Boston from England and stayed long enough to fall in love with Patience Hartshorne, the daughter of a Puritan. Patience was engaged to be married to Aminadab Longshanks, a young man of a sanctimonious air and a nose that was very blue. As soon as the jack tar made his appearance she became fascinated with his devil may care ways and forthwith, as we would put it today, shook the said Aminadab and married the sailor. Aminadab afterward married Consecration Smith, but he never forgave Witridge for cutting him out.

Time came when Witridge got a ship of his own and sailed away with the products of the soil of Massachusetts—skins of wild beasts—to visit foreign lands and bring back such things, pots and kettles principally, as were needed in the colonies. He bade adieu to his wife and a little boy and girl who had come to him since his marriage with a sad heart, for he was not to meet them again for three years and was in the meanwhile to encounter the perils of the sea. It was a long three years for them both.

But it is a long road that has no turn, and one Sunday morning the captain, who had arrived in port the night before, just as the sun was rising and Patience was preparing breakfast, rushed into the house and with the windows all open, for it was summer, caught her and the children in his arms. Few people were in the street at that early hour, and the captain, who suddenly remembered that it was Sunday and that a man was not permitted to kiss his wife on that day, thought no one had seen him. But Patience disabused his confidence. When her husband kissed her she was facing the window and saw the lank form of Aminadab Longshanks go by and a corner of his eye turned toward the house.

The next day Captain Witridge was taken before a magistrate and convicted of "lewd and unseemly conduct" in kissing his wife on the Lord's day. He was forced to pass two hours in the stocks and to pay a fine of five pounds. It was not known except to the Witridge family who was the informer, and the captain charged his wife to say nothing about her having seen Aminadab go by the house at the time the "lewd and unseemly conduct" was enacted. The fact that the informer had been Mrs. Witridge's betrothed would place her husband in an unenviable position if Longshanks chose to deny complicity in the matter.

Witridge made several voyages after that, accumulating a snug property. He was happy except for one thing—he had not got even with the informer. One Saturday night, when he was ashore, Patience told him that Truth Hollister had told her that Eunice Trotter had told her that Aminadab Longshanks was hurrying with preparations to go to New Amsterdam on important business. It struck the captain that possibly the business might be so consequential that his enemy would be tempted to travel on the Lord's day. He would not likely start, however, till after sunset, which closed the Sabbath. The captain wished in his heart that his enemy might go earlier in the day, that he might be tempted to kiss his wife before starting and that he (Witridge) might catch him in the act.

The next afternoon Captain Witridge took a walk about the town. Something prompted him to turn his steps toward the Longshanks dwelling. He passed it about the hour of sunset. He saw Aminadab come out of the house and glance at the sun. His horse was before the door, held by a negro. Mrs. Longshanks came out, and the two looked at the sun together. The atmosphere was murky and it was impossible to tell whether the sun was setting beneath the horizon or a cloud. When it disappeared Mrs. Longshanks put her arm about her husband's neck and their lips met in a kiss. Then Aminadab mounted his horse and rode away.

Several persons saw the act and they were uncertain whether or no the sun had set beneath the horizon or a cloud. They watched for a matter of five minutes, when the lower limb of a dull red ball protruded beneath the clouds.

When Aminadab Longshanks returned from New Amsterdam he was met by a charge of having kissed his wife on the Lord's day and was fined and put into the stocks.

While Aminadab was in the stocks Captain Witridge—and this was not known to any one in the colony except Mrs. Witridge—placed shavings in his chimney, made a spark near them with flint and rushed down the street crying fire. The citizens rushed in the opposite direction. When the captain reached the spot where his enemy was sitting in the stocks he found the culprit alone, all having gone to the fire. Approaching his enemy, the captain deliberately and with malice aforethought proceeded to tickle the bottoms of Longshanks' feet. This unholy revenge he kept up for half an hour, when, hearing footsteps approaching, he departed.

But there is nothing of the finale of this story in the records of blue law cases in the commonwealth.

Wigs.

A passage in Polybius has been cited to prove that Hannibal wore a wig. Wigs were probably invented about the time of the first Roman emperors, for we are told that Otho had a scalp of fine leather with locks of hair upon it so well arranged as to seem natural.

Sadly Mixed.

"These potatoes taste strongly of gasoline, my dear. What recipe did you use?"

"I must have got my recipes mixed," answered the young wife after some reflection, "and used the one for cleaning velvet."—Exchange.

How She Knew.

"M-my dear," said the muddled citizen, "I 'sure you I wouldn't been s'late, but footpad stopped me."

"And you were so scared your tongue clove to the roof of your mouth."

"How'd you know that?"

"I smell the clove."—Chicago News.

REFUGEES IN RICH ATTIRE

English Writer Describes Grotesque Figures He Saw During the Italian Retreat.

Amid all the chaos of the Italian retreat one kept on meeting utterly incongruous figures, for alongside of others road-worn, shabby and dirty, to be clean and well dressed is to be grotesque.

Amid this multitude of haggard, unwashed, unshaven, dead beat males, I noticed two Italian ladies treading delicately over the rough ballast of the railway track. They had naturally brought with them in that flight the most valuable of their possessions, which were of a kind conveniently carried on their persons. Against this gray background of mud and rubbish and a disbanded army their two figures glittered with a brilliance that would have been conspicuous in the Rue de la Paix.

Heavy sable furs and muffs almost bowed their shoulders; each finger had two or three rings that flashed in the light; round their necks were gold chains hung with pendants, and yet instead of the air of self-satisfied ostentation that might well have gone with a display so lavish, they were only two pathetically little, frightened, perplexed faces, and an uncertain gait that did not promise much further progress along that ankle-wrenching railway line.—G. Ward Price in the Century Magazine.

Cavite Flashes Time Over Pacific.

Since October 1 the radio station at Cavite, co-operating with the Philippine bureau of posts and the Manila observatory, has been sending the time signals of the 120th meridian east of Greenwich at 11 a. m. and 10 p. m. every day, says Science.

For the purpose of sending time signals, the transmitting clock of the Manila observatory is connected with the Cavite wireless station through the bureau of posts. Manila observatory time signals begin at 10:55 a. m. and 9:55 p. m., standard time of the 120th meridian east of Greenwich, and continue for five minutes. During this interval every tick of the clock is transmitted, except the 28th, 29th, 54th 55th, 56th, 57th, 58th and 59th of each minute.

The situation of Manila in the Pacific makes this service of the greatest importance to the mercantile and naval fleets that ply upon that ocean.

ROME'S COLISEUM.

It Got Its Name From a Nearby Gigantic Statue of Nero.

While thousands annually visit the Coliseum, few seem to question the origin of its unusual name, which is derived from a statue of Nero that stood near by. Being a great height, it was known as the colossus of Nero, so the vagaries of pronunciation of many hundred years created this unique name from "near the colossus." The Coliseum was founded A. D. 72 by the Emperor Vespasian. His son, Titus, completed it eight years later. Gaudentius is supposed to have been its architect, and by a cruel fate he was one of the many Christian martyrs whose blood has consecrated and made this glorious building sacred to posterity.

Twelve thousand captive Hebrews were employed in its building. During the progress of the shows that were given in this great amphitheater an awning was stretched on poles, and some of the brackets for the support of these are still to be seen. A few numbers are yet visible by which the arches could be reached by the spectators, having tickets of similar numbers.

One arch of extra width is thought to be the one under which the emperors of old Rome entered. An entrance similar on the opposite side had a subterranean passage leading to the Palatine. Four rows of cells were the domicile of the wild beasts, and during a series of shows given in honor of the Emperor Hadrian's birthday a thousand of these animals were slaughtered. Gladiatorial combats were also eagerly watched, and in these even women would sometimes take part. Of the many Christian martyrs the Coliseum has claimed the most noted was St. Ignatius, bishop of Antioch. Closely following this crime 115 Christians were shot down with arrows, and, as usual, this hideous sight was viewed by a sanguinary horde.—Baltimore American.

PURE PRUSSIC ACID.

Just a Smell of This Deadly Poison Would Kill Instantly.

The discoverer of prussic acid was instantly killed by inhaling one whiff of his own handiwork.

Pure prussic acid is never sold or handled. The smell of it is always fatal. It kills not in three minutes or half an hour, but the instant it enters the lungs as a gas. The mixture ordinarily sold as prussic acid is 98 parts water to two parts of the drug. Even in this form it is very deadly. A 20 per cent mixture of the acid would kill nearly as quickly as if pure.

Atropine, though it has no harmful odor, is so deadly that as much of it as would adhere to the end of a moistened forefinger would instantly cause death.

Cyanide of potassium has a pleasant smell which is not injurious, but a small quantity swallowed kills at once.

Pure ammonia if inhaled would cause death almost as quickly as prussic acid.

When a carboy of nitric acid is broken some one has to suffer. It will burn wood, eat through iron plates and destroy whatever it touches. Such an accident once happened in an acid factory. Every one ran away, leaving the acid to amuse itself by setting fire to things. Soon it was seen that the building would be destroyed and hundreds of people thrown out of work, and four men volunteered to put out the fire in the acid room. They succeeded and came out all right. Five hours later all were dead.

Aged Tree Is Dying.

The original navel orange tree, planted 44 years ago, producer of the first navel oranges grown in the United States and parent of millions of trees now growing in California, is believed to be dying. Horticultural experts have begun efforts to diagnose the disease that threatens it in the hope of prolonging its life.

This tree, the most noted in the citrus industry of California, came originally from Bahia, Brazil. It was planted in 1873 by Mrs. C. L. Tibbetts, who obtained it from the botanical gardens in Washington, D. C.

Helping the Physicians.

Traveling in the train with my friend the doctor, writes a correspondent in the Manchester Guardian, I observed a fellow passenger earnestly reading a "popular" medical work issued in parts. "That kind of thing must be bad for your trade," I suggested, but the doctor smiled and denied my statement. "Quite the contrary," said he. "The first part has brought me nineteen cases of imaginary appendicitis, and I anticipate bronchitis and Bright's disease of a similar mild type will be prevalent among my patients when part B is issued, with all the more easily pronounced ailments to follow as the publication goes on."

Separated In Death.

It seems a strange irony of fate that Elizabeth Browning, the most devoted of wives, should be separated in death from her spouse. Though Robert Browning died in Venice, he was buried between Cowley and Chaucer in Westminster abbey, while that sweet mind that gave to a grateful public the "Sonnets from the Portuguese" enjoys its last sleep at the cemetery in Florence.—Baltimore American.

Practical Proof.

"Yes, my son, I want you to make yourself ambidextrous. I want you to be able to use one hand just as skillfully as you do the other."

"That's me, dad. I can lick any boy in my class with either hand."—New York World.

STABBED IN STREET FIGHT

Lindora Marcatulio in St. Joseph's Hospital With Grave Wounds and His Alleged Assailant Charged With Attempted Murder.

ON PARNELL STREET

LINDORA MARCATULIO in a serious condition from two knife wounds in the back.

LOUIS MARCATULIO, his cousin, slightly wounded on the hand.

NICHOLAS DEBERARDINI, in jail on a charge of attempted murder.

Stabbed twice in the back, Lindora Marcatulio lies dangerously wounded in St. Joseph's hospital; and, charged with wounding or causing bodily harm with intent to commit murder, Nicola Deberardini is in jail, following a fight on Parnell street last night about 11 o'clock. One of Marcatulio's wounds is high up between the shoulder blades, and the other, the more serious of the two, is under the left arm and it is feared that the left lung was pierced. Dr. Malcolm McCulloch, who is attending him, preferred to withhold for the present the results of his examination, but speaking generally he said that the man's condition was none too satisfactory this morning.

From the police reports, the scrap developed out of what seems to have been trifling causes. In the afternoon a number of Italians were playing cards for soft drinks at Luigi Marcatulio's store on George street, north of Sherbrooke street. The stakes were soft drinks, and it is stated that Deberardini refused to pay his share. Words were passed, but the incident blew over without any portent of the evening's trouble. Luigi Marcatulio is a cousin of the injured man.

The Aftermath.

In the evening the Marcatulios were sitting on the verandah of Lindora's house at 471 Parnell street, the police learned. A little group of friends and relatives were with them, when Deberardini approached.

It is alleged that the latter stopped in front of the house and uttered in Italian a threat against Lindora Marcatulio and all his relatives. From that point things broke fast and furious, and in a clamour of shouting.

The stories the police gathered seem to lack coherence in some details, probably because the darkness obscured the progress of the fray to the eyewitnesses, but in the principal features the reports dovetail closely. Marcatulio fell first with a wound between his shoulders. His cousin, Louis, dealt Deberardini a smashing blow on the head with a chair and sent him sprawling in the middle of the road.

By this time quite a crowd had gathered. The excitement was at a fever point. To the shouts of the men were added the cries of the women when they saw a dark, sinister stain spreading on Lenodra Marcatulio's shirt. It seems to have been the women who helped him to rise, and as they supported him up the steps of the house, Deberardini, who had recovered from the blow with the chair, struggled from the dust, and rushing up the steps is said to have stabbed Lindora Marcatulio the second time, the knife entering his body below the left arm. Louis Marcatulio closed with Deberardini and tried to wrest the knife from him, but in the attempt was cut on the hand and quickly resorted to the chair again. He brought it down on Deberardini's head, and with that the hostilities ceased.

Police Called.

P. C. McIntosh was on duty at the corner of George and Charlotte streets at 11 p.m. when Samuel Gentile arrived with the news of the scrap. P. C. McIntosh hurried to the south end and found Lindora Marcatulio on a chair in his home at 471 Parnell street. He ordered the man put to bed and rendered first aid. Sergeant Reid and P. C. Dalnnard located Deberardini at Nicholas Febbo's house, 493 Parnell street and placed him under arrest. The police searched for the weapon which the accused is charged with using, but were unable to find it.

Deberardini was remanded for a week by Magistrate Rush this morning.

Blood stains on his head indicated the wounds caused by the chair with which Louis Marcatulio hit him twice.

Lindora Marcatulio's blood-soaked undershirt shows two punctures, each about one inch wide, which coincide with the wounds. The clothing is all of fine quality, including silk shirts that would make a fitting display when new in any smart haberdasher's shop.

P. C. McIntosh's first aid is said to have saved the man's life, as he was bleeding freely and was sitting on a chair with the blood gushing at every breath.

A RICH HAUL

Canadian Press.

PARIS, July 22.—Strong counter attacks delivered last night by the Germans on the front between the Ourcq and the Marne were broken by the Allies, the war office announced today. Allied positions have been maintained.

Enemy counter blows were delivered in region of Grisolles seven miles north west of Chateau Thierry and Bezu—St. Germain and four miles north of Chateau Thierry. North of the Ourcq and between the Marne and Rheims the enemy reaction was limited to artillery fire.

Violent Storms.

PARIS, July 22.—Violent storms in many districts in France have done serious damage to crops. The thermometer in Paris yesterday was 91.

BRITISH OFFICIAL

LONDON, July 22. — Further ground has been gained by the British in the Hebuterne region on the front between Albert and Arras, the war office announced today. The British likewise in conjunction with the French carried out a successful enterprise to the south of Villers—Bretonneaux east of Amiens in which prisoners were taken. German trenches were entered during the night by British raiding parties at several points on the front including Neuville, Vitasse and north of Bailleul and Prisoners were taken.

Germans Fall Back.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 22.—South of River Ourcq yesterday under pressure from the west and from Franco-American troops which crossed the Marne, Germans fell back rapidly and last night the Allies were on a line marked by the villages of Grisolles and Epieds, representing advance of five miles from west and three miles from the south. South of the Marne the Franco-Americans made rich haul of material. Germans evidently mean to hold on at all costs to their flanking positions in the mountain of Rheims and on the plateau above Soissons. On the main field between Aisne and Marne, the Germans were seen driven back a considerable distance. They been pushed back over the Soissons - Chateau Thierry road at several points.

Between Marne and Rheims, the British, French and Italians took two towns and a number of prisoners.

STILL ADVANCING

WASHINGTON, July 22.—General Pershing's communication says, the Americans by actual count took seventeen thousand prisoners and five hundred and sixty guns and are still advancing steadily.

LONDON, June 22. — American troops yesterday crossed the river Marne between Charteves and Gland east of Chateau Thierry and captured wood of Barbillon.

Call for Help

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 22—Crown Prince has been obliged to call for help from his cousin Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria.

German divisions from army in north has been hurried down to protect the western flank of the defeated army which has been drives back over the Marne and ejected from Chateau Thierry by the Franco-American troops.

Using Gas Shells.

LONDON, July 22.—Germans are stubbornly resisting the French crossing of the Marne, but the French have succeeded in getting two elements over at Mezy and Courcelles which are constructing footbridges under heavy fire. Germans are using gas shells in large number.

DECISION OF SUPREME COURT IS BINDING ON ALL PARTIES

Principle Laid Down Has to be Followed by Courts of Inferior Jurisdiction—R. B. Bennett Leaves Ottawa.

DESTINATION UNKNOWN

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, July 22.—The decision of the Supreme Court on Friday in the Gray case is a matter of common practice and is binding, on all courts or judges below. In any case where the Supreme Court lays down a principle it has to be followed by courts of inferior jurisdiction, whether or not they may concur in it. The only court which could reverse the judgment of the Supreme Court is the Privy Council.

R. B. Bennett, K.C., left the capital on Friday last without divulging his intentions regarding the habaas corpus proceedings initiated by him at Calgary. In a general way he had no apology or excuse to offer for having precipitated a controversy which compelled a special session of the highest tribunal in the land.

"The plighted word of a nation should be kept," said the former member for Calgary. Some of Mr. Bennett's friends and associates at Ottawa showed an undoubted coolness towards him ,but that did not appear to disturb his equanimity, however, the judgment once delivered, he left on the first available train, it is believed here for the West via Toronto. It is not in the power of Mr. Bennett, to have the judgment in the Lewis case in Alberta referred to a higher court for the Alberta tribunal gave a verdict in favor of his client.

The government here contemplates appealing the case to the Supreme Court in October though doubt still remains as to their power to do so. It is not customary for the crown to appeal a habaas corpus judgment when that judgment is given in favor of the applicant. That is why C. C. Robinson, K.C., of Toronto, was directed by the justice authorities to find a case in Ontario which could be brought direct to the Supreme Court for adjudication and that is why Messrs Chrysler and Geoffrion were employed to plead the case for Gray who himself bore no part of the expense. A speedy judgment was desired so that the validity of the order-in-council might be established. It will be for the Supreme Court in October to say whether it has jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the Bennett case. Meanwhile the working of the regulations cannot materially be interfered with.

THE WEATHER

Sunday was a warm day, the warmest we have had this season, and probably with as high a temperature as we will have this summer. Ninety-five degrees in the shade were the official figures. Saturday's' were 87. The lowest temperature last night was 64 degrees, as compared with 50 to 55 degrees, the usual figures reached.—W. P.

The Germans Used Cavalry

A Formidable Force of German Horsemen Wiped Out.

(United Press Despatch.)

(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 22.—American troops, facing their first cavalry charge of the war, utterly wiped out a formidable force of German horsemen east of Rheims and defeated what apparently was an ambitious attempt to cut the Allied lines and reach Chalons.

So far as is known it is the first time the enemy has employed cavalry since the counter offensive began.

Broke Up Attack.

Immediately afterward the same American unit broke up a combined attack of infantry and tanks. The Americans held an important sector on a slight rise behind a chalk coloured hill, over which were the enemy positions. When the German cavalry topped the hill and swept down upon the Americans they ran into a unit which has a remarkable record for sharpshooting.

Opening up with machine guns, automatic rifles and Lee-Enfields, the Americans quickly dropped men and horses. The artillery joined in, adding to the slaughter. The cavalry dwindled until only a handful remained. These galloped back over the hill to the German lines.

STRIKE IS AVERTED

Bombshell Fell in the Shopmen's Camp Last Tuesday—Threaten to Cancel Charters.

STRIKE BALLOT

Montreal, July 22. — It was announced this morning that there will be no general strike of railway shopmen in Canada, at least for the present.

On Saturday afternoon the shopmen's committee in conference at the Alexandra Hotel, adjourned indefinitely, and the western members left for their homes the same night. Returns from the strike ballot showed clearly it would be impossible to tie up the railways effectively, especially in the east. While the west came out strongly for a strike, twenty eight hundred out of three thousand shopmen in Winnipeg, voting "yes," only one local lodge in Montreal voted to strike.

A bomb shell fell in the shopmen's camp last Tuesday in the shape of a telegram from the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labour, in Washington, giving notice that a strike would entail cancellation of all railway union charters in Canada.

The result was as above stated, the west holding for independence and the east for international fealty.

At Manaros-Szjet, 150 officers and 500 Czecho-Slovak soldiers who mutinied, were shot and three thousand others arrested.

Local Postmen Still on the Job

Peterboro's "posties" were carrying on today the same as usual but it is understood tha tthey have adopted a policy of watchful waiting for the back salaries they are expecting. Pending further information there was nothing new in the situation, but the letter carriers have reached a decision that unless the promises made them are fulfilled something is going to happen to the smooth working distribution of the mail the citizens enjoy daily.

"WEAREVER" ALUMINUM

SpecialSale and Demonstration.

Attention is called to the advertisement on another page of this issue, of Campbell & Best, the Peterboro agents for the justly celebrated "Wearever" aluminum ware. The special sale advertised will continue all this week, and should prove of very great interest at this time, when the canning and preserving season is at its height. Mrs. Taylor, the company's demonstrator, is at the store during the week, and will be pleased to meet the ladies of Peterboro and discuss with them any problems, relating to the use and care of "Wearever" Cooking Utensils.

POSTMEN ON STRIKE

The Letter Carriers' Strike Is Confined to Toronto—Mails Tied Up

HIGHER WAGES OFFERED

(Special to Examiner.)

TORONTO, July 22.—It is expected in postmens strike will be of short duration. The men have been offered three dollars a day and it is expected they will accept it.

OTTAWA, July 22.—At the meeting on Friday night last the Ottawa carriers think the Toronto postman should await the decision of the dominion convention in September.

Meantme the government has declared that a bonus of $150 will be immediately given to men who are receiving less than $1,200 a year and of $100 to those receiving between twelve and fifteen hundred a year. This bonus, it is stated, is in addition to the war bonus granted in 1917.

A CABINET MEETING

When it comes to the question of raising maximum and minimum salaries to $1,400 and $1,000 respectively the Government contends that this is something which involves an amendment of the civil service act and that it is for parliament to deal with such a phase of the question. Postmaster General Blondin declares that the whole matter of salaries will come before the Cabinet Council when the Premier and his colleagues return. Meanwhile he advises the men to accept the bonuses and remain at work.

The civil service commission has instructed the post office department to disregard the provision of the civil service act in replacing striking employes under the act the commission makes all appointments to the service it is realized that to replace strikers it will be necessary to employ a large proportion of women.

NOT RECOGNIZED

OTTAWA, July 22.—There has not been no walk out of postmen so far as Ottawa is concerned. The local carriers have refused to recognize the request of Toronto postmen who voted to strike today. They declare that they regret this but state that it is in accordance with the decision of the Allied Trades and Labor Council.

450 ARE OUT.

TORONTO, Julp 22.—Letter carriers this morning considered the Government offer of increased wages and decided to continue their strike.

Four hundred and fifty carriers are out and there is no delivery or sorting of mails.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, JULY 22ND, 1918.

SERVICE CHEVRONS

Among returned soldiers in Peterboro as well as throughout Canada the wearing of service chevrons has been the subject of many arguments and there has been considerable dissatisfaction with the system used in the Canadian army. The chevrons worn at the bottom of the sleeve are intended to show the length of time the soldier has served at the front and in the Imperial army are only allowed to be worn by soldiers who have seen active service in France or Belgium or any of the other fronts where the Union Jack is being maintained against the enemy. Amongst Canadian soldiers however, the ruling has been made that their overseas service should count from the date of their leaving Canada with the ridiculous result that men who have never faced the enemy and whose service, through no fault of their own perhaps, consisted of duty in England have been wearing the same mark of distinction as the soldiers who have been in the thick of the fighting.

A cable from England indicates that the men back from France are disgusted with the regulations. It is said that General Sir Richard Turner, V.C., now in command of the Canadians in England and who did brilliant work at the front in the early stages of the war has declined to wear any chevrons and his example is being followed by many others. The complaint is made that at Argyle House there is a Canadian major who has spent his whole time since going overseas in clerical work in England who wears one red and three blue chevrons as well as the Order of the British Empire and a Russian decoration.

An effort is being made in England to have the regulations altered and prevent the present condition of affairs.

A TOMMY'S TRIBUTE

Some of those who persistently criticize the Y.M.C.A. war work are inclined to say that it is not difficult to get an officer to say nice things about the activities of the Red Triangle in the war area but that tributes from the Tommies are not often heard and then only from men who in peace times were Y.M.C.A. members and therefore inclined, so the critics say to be prejudiced in its favour. The other day the Examiner published a very strongly worded eulogy of the Y.M.C.A. written by Major General Watson, Commanding the 4th Canadian Division. To-day we are indebted to the wife of a Peterboro soldier overseas for an opportunity to print the opinion of a Canadian Tommy on the same subject.

The soldier in question enlisted here as a private early in 1915 and has been at the front going on three years When the controversy over the Y.M.C.A. was launched by the resolution passed by the provincial branch of the G.W.V.A. at Hamilton, this soldier's wife wrote to her husband and asked him what he thought about the work of the Red Triangle. And his reply, which does not lose any weight because the soldier in question happened to have rather a poor opinion of the Y. M. C. A. before he enlisted is as follows:—

"I am sorry to know that some of the returned men have such a poor opinion of the Y.M.C.A. for the Y is certainly doing a good work out here. The men that say that the Y never gave away anything but stationery have never been within miles of the line because their statements prove it. I have never been in any part of the line at any time where there was not a Y. M. C. A. where a fellow could always get free coffee. Last winter or rather a year ago last winter when we were in what was supposed to be a quiet section, that as before we took Vimy Ridge, there was a Y in an old ruin of a house at the end of our communication trench and there was free coffee all the time. I know three different Y's between the front line at Passchendeale and Ypres where there was free coffee and within a mile of Ypres at a broken down village called Vlamertinge there was a Y open giving away coffee 24 hours a day to thousands of men either going in or coming out of the line. When we were at the Somme there were Y.M.C.A.'s all over and one could get a drink of something hot at nearly any time.

When we were at Sanctuary Woods on the 2nd of June 1916, there was a Y at Zillebeke Dugouts with free cocoa and biscuits and at the same time all the Y's around gave both coffee and cocoa and biscuits free of charge. A Peterboro boy who got out of the front line sate in the Zillebeke battle was wounded in a line up in front of the dugouts while waiting his turn to get some cocoa."

Down at the base where I was last Christmas and where there are dozens of Y's every Y gave a concert and a free tea, consisting of different kinds of cake, bread and butter, sandwiches, fruit, oranges and coffee and believe me it cost something."

"As I said before those that say that the Y never gave anything but stationery have not been within miles of the line or else their time was so short that they did not have time to see anything or to take a look around."

The Y.M.C.A. question will likely come up at the Dominion Convention of the Great War Veterans and the result of the discussion in view of the financial statement that has been published by the National Council will be awaited with interest.

RECLAIMING THE SOLDIER.

There is a wealth of good common sense in the article published below on the subject of "The returned soldier and the public." It appears in the current issue of The Veteran, the official organ of the Great War Veterans' Association and there is a message in it that should not be ignored, either by the men who have returned from overseas, the employers of labour or the public generally, for it applies to all three.

Here is The Veteran's view:

It is admitted on all hands that the rehabilitation of the returned soldier into civilian life presents many difficulties and problems. It will engage the serious attention of the Government and the special care of several departments for its successful accomplishment. But all their united efforts will have scant results unless there is secured the wholehearted co-operation both of the returned soldier and the general public. On the part of the former we would like to see a better realization of the fact that as a good citizen his responsibilities to his fellow men do not cease with his discharge from the army. This war, which after all is a conflict of systems and ideas, was being waged keenly long before the armies took the field in 1914 and may still have to continue after they have ceased to engage in daily physical battle. Even if a permanent and satisfactory peace is secured, our country in its efforts for economic recuperation will need the best services of every man and woman within its bounds. It will need their manual strength, their brain power and their disinterested public spirit.

The returned soldier, who is not physically disabled and yet refuses to give his strength and brains in the further service of the community in civil life, is a serious burden and handicap to his country—he is not unlike a drone in the hive. The returned man, who in a fit of pique at some slight reproof throws up a good job or refuses "to look at anything under $100 a month" does a great wrong to the rest of his comrades overseas, to whom he owes the double duty of comradeship and trusteeship. We believe the number of dissatisfied grumblers is comparatively small, but one man, by moving hastily and inefficiently through half a dozen positions, suffices to give a bad name to returned soldiers in a whole community. A job may be unpleasant and the remuneration may seem an ill reward for wounds and hardships, but a returned soldier should not allow any petty grievance to be an excuse for its abandonment lest he make his particular firm or employer hostile to the idea of employing veterans. The returned man should make it his ideal to prove to his employer, be that a government or private person, that he is a more efficient and reliable employee than any German or Galician ever born. Let this goal be followed and employers will want to fill every vacancy with returned soldiers.

From employers, on the other hand, we should urge a special consideration for such returned soldiers as enter their employment. Many of them are in process of recovering their health from serious wounds, others have had their nerves shattered and their digestions impaired. For many it is a matter of weeks and months before they can recover the normal tranquil attitude of civilian life. Wherever possible, let them be given job which are not too dully monotonous and do not demand constant mental vigilance. The soldiers have had their fill of discipline and punishment for breaches thereof. Therefore let employers turn a blind eye to any minor evasions of industrial and business discipline that may be attempted by the returned man. In time he will work into the civilian system and take up the old threads of life, but at first he needs the exercise of special treatment and great forbearance, though there is no need to condone wanton offences of theft or deliberate carelessness. An employer who makes a special study of the psychology of returned soldiers and lays special plans for their employment under easy conditions would deserve more than a knighthood. If each individual employer or firm would endeavour to employ a certain percentage of disabled men in lighter jobs, the solution of our problems would be immensely helped.

From the general public continual assistance is required. Let them always remember that the problem of rehabilitating the returned hero will not be solved by deluges of emotional and transitory enthusiasm but by steady care and constant planning. Let each individual who is anxious to help returned soldiers, do his bit in his special business or profession to encourage their employment. Let him extend his judicious sympathy, and if occasion demands, assist in the solution of private and personal troubles. Let there be less fulsome flattery and high-sounding speeches about heroic sacrifices of the soldier and let there be more serious efforts and consistent endeavour to transform him into an efficient and industrious civilian.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The combination of 95 degrees in the shade and refreshment places closed except for a few hours, did not make much of a hit with the public yesterday.

The German "storm of peace" battle cannot be causing much joy in Berlin.

Yesterday was Belgium's Independence Day. All the world except the Germans and their Allies will unite in hoping that by the next anniversary, the heroic country will be freed from its invaders.

STEEL VESSEL BUILT WITHOUT RIVETS, ALL PLATES BEING WELDED.

London, July 22. — The first steel vessel built without rivets, so far as known, has just been launched on the south coast of England. The production of this vessel, it is considered, may mark an epoch in shipbuilding, the plates being fused together by electric welding in one process. General adoption of this process it is held, would speed up production, with an estimated saving of from twenty to twenty-five per cent. in both time and material.

The United States Shipping Board it is understood, has been in close touch with the experiment, with the result that arrangements are said to be in hand for the building of a number of 10,000 ton standard ships after this plan, in the production of which the riveters will become welders.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Riversides Grabbed the Big End of Saturday's Game

Good Brand of Ball Featured the League Fixture—The Score Was 7-5 —The Play.

Soloman's Riversides were on the big end of the score Saturday afternoon when they met the De Laval team. Sharpe for the De Lavals was in his usual good form in spite of the hot weather and was best in the pinches. Kirn was also in good shape but the clouters seemed to spoil his "breakers" with fouls and then swing at a wide one. Micky Murray did some fine fielding at third and Mike Sheehy the Riversides shortstop, was the star fly catcher for the day.

THE PLAY.

The batsmen caught the pitchers cold in the first innings. Sheehy starting for Riversides, hit into right, reaching second on a wild pitch. He took third on McCarney's hit and went home when Lipsett allowed Phelan's grounder to get away. Guerin doubled scoring Phelan. Murray fanned and Conners and Field grounded out.

De Laval came back with two. Dugan walked and stole second. Sharpe's fly was taken by Field, and Taylor's bang into right scored Dugan. Sheey's wild heave to get Taylor at third, on McDonald's grounder, gave Taylor the plate. Field grabbed Frost's fly and Fitzgerald skied to Sheehy.

Riversides got two on in the second, but Lipsett's stab off Phelan's fly into deep short stopped the Solomonites, the play featuring the innings.

De Laval tallied another brace. Lipsett was safe when his grass-cutter went through Guerin's legs. English fouled to Phelan, and Legon forced Lipsett at second. Legon stole second and third and scored when Phelan threw the ball into left field. Dugan walked made his way to third and came home on a wild pitch that Kirn came up and recovered. Phelan could not see the ball. Sharpe fanned.

Riversides evened up in the third. Guerin hit for one bag, Murray flew to Legon, Conners walked ,and Guerin made third on a wild pitch. He scored when Lipsett held the ball on Field's light tap down short, the batter also getting first base. Murty flew out to Lipsett, Kirn walked and with the bases filled, Sheehy was easily thrown out by Dugan.

De Laval's third was noteworthy for two fine catches by Field, who took McDonald's hard fly, and went back deep and grabbed another one from Frost. It was hard luck for De Laval as both batsmen hit the ball hard.

The game had settled down to a real battle and it was not till the sixth that the tie was broken. Riversides getting a run. Taking things easy with Kirn, Sharpe unloosened three wide ones. Then he started to pitch and Kirn allowed two straight ones to go over. The third, a plate-cutter was wafted far into the garden between Legon and Frost, giving the Riversides hurler two bases. Sheehy and McCarney grounded out but Phelan pasted the leather into left scoring Kirn. Guerin smote mightily but in vain.

De Laval looked to be beaten but a poke by Frost into right in the eighth, made a run that again tied the count. After Kirn had thrown out Sharpe, Taylor singled. He was hurt at second and Dugan relieved him. Frost hit a highbone into sort right that Conners could not get under and Dugan came home, On Fitzgerald's fly into left Murty did a somersault but held onto the ball.

Riversides cinched the game in the ninth, which Guerin opened with a plate. Murray came home on Kirn's sacrificed. Field fanned. When Lipsett made a wild throw to first on Murty's grounder, Guerin got the plate. Murra ycame hom eon Kirn's single into left. Sharpe throw out Sheehy.

Murray went to the fence to get Lipsett's high foul and made the out. English fanned and Kirn collared Legon's infield fly.

SPORTING COMMENT

Pittcher Fred Anderson, of the Giants, has received word from his draft board at Statesville, N.C., to report for military duties on July 25. Anderson was recently reclassified. He was originally in Class 4, but was changed to Class 1A.

Outfielder Jack Graney, of the Cleveland Indians, again is having trouble with his left arm, and it is possible that the member may be permanently disabled. He injured it during the recent series at the Polo Grounds and now is unable to throw.

Permission to Harry Myers, Brooklyn outfielder, to finish this season with his club has been given by the Draft Board of Columbiana County, which refused to class baseball as a non-essential industry.

Joe Evans is playing a splendid game a third for the Indians, and it looks as if the days of Terry Turner as infielder of the club are numbered. Joe is much younger than the veteran, and is developing into a fine batsman.

Frank ("Nig") Smith, former star twirler for the Chicago White Sox, but recently of the P. J. Sullivan nine of Lawrenceville, has entered a Pittsburg munitions factory, where he will be engaged in Government work.

Catcher Bill Killifer, of the Cubs, never has sustained a broken finger or even a serious split digit in his eleven years' service behind the bat.

The Louisville American Association Baseball Club has been reduced to the player limit by the sale of Pitcher Boardman and Outfielder Knisely to the Toledo club. Boardman is a left-hand pitcher, and Knisely came from the Southern Association.

Allan Russell, pitcher for the New York Americans, has gone to the Sparrow's Point team of the Steel League, it was announced.

"Lord Bill" Byron, who ten years ago was an umpire in the International League, and since then has been in the National League, will be one of the umpires in the game between Brooklyn and Pittsburg at the Island Stadium on Tuesday, July 23. W. J. Klem will be the other.

SAMUEL WANTS TO GO.

Former Manager of Jack Johnson Anxious to Do His Bit.

Sam Fitzpatrick, who piloted Jack Johnson to the heavyweight championship, one of the most famous handlers of boxers now alive, has applied at the Knights of Columbus headquarters in Detroit for a place as an overseas secretary. If he qualifies he'll be sent abroad.

Sam is really about the last of the old guard. He is just a few months short of 50 years old. He was born in Australia and came to the U. S. when he was 20 years old, but is now a naturalized citizen.

Sam probably gained his greatest fame when he successfully piloted Jack Johnson to the heavyweight championship 10 years ago. It was he who went over the top with the coloured heavyweight and attained for him a chance at the title at Sydney when it seemed as though Tommy Burns would never consent to the meeting. After knocking out Burns in 14 rounds, Johnson proved ungrateful, as two weeks afterwards he let Fitzpatrick out as his manager.

CALGARY PAPER PREDICTS ACTUAL CONSOLIDATION OF BIG BANKS SOON.

HARDWARE AND METAL MARKET

Another eight to ten-cent advance in linseed oil has been recorded during the week, and the future is one of decided uncertainty. Most certainly lower prices are not looked for and that even higher levels may be reached seems quite possible. Seed shows another jump in price for the week, and the outlook for supplies is none too bright.

Mixed Paints.

Mixed paints are in a very firm position, and that a higher level of prices will be reached seems more than likely. The advances in linseed oil, with prospects of further ones being made, coupled with the recent advances made in white lead in oil, are considered factors.

Eavetrough, conductor pipe, ridge roll and kindred lines have made an advance of 10 per cent. during the week. This follows higher prices named on corrugated sheets, metal ceilings and shingles some time ago, and is in line with predictions made in Hardware and Metal at that time.

Roofing Materials.

Revised prices are announced on tarred roofing felt, tarred and dry building paper, coal tar, roofing cement and heavy dry and tarred strawboard. The present scale of prices provides for advances in each instance, which, while not very heavy, reflect the tendency of the market.

Manufacturers of woodenware are faced with continually increasing costs which is borne out in many advances on their lines. Among the lines affected this week are clothes pins, clothes horses, pastry boards and skirt boards, with higher levels looked for on tubs.

Wood Waste.

Wool waste and wipers have both reached a higher level of quotations. One manufacturer of cow ties, dog and halter chains, tie-out chains and kindred lines has announced new prices which show an advance of about 12 1-2 per cent., though jobbers have not yet changed their quotations.

Other lines to undergo revision during the week are food choppers, single-barrel shotguns, cross-cut saw handles, toilet clippers, flashlight bulbs, mouse and rat traps, steel squares, night latches, tackle blocks, rivet sets and egg beaters. Advances are recorded in each instance. —Hardware and Metal.

GROCERY MARKET

Featuring the markets for the week are the announcements of new prices on jams, dried fruits and early canned fruits and vegetables, says the "Canadian Grocer" for this week. The general tendency is upward, jam prices showing a sharp upward trend to higher levels than had been expected, due, it is said, to the exceedingly high prices which had to be paid for fruits

PRICES HIGHER

Prunes are higher, with reports pointing to the Government as a heavy buyer, the 50s, 60s and 70s being largely absorbed by this source. Choice peaches are also to go to the Government, and other grades offering to the trade show a fairly sharp advance. Apricots and seedless raisins opened about the same as last year, while seeded raisins will range at least 1c up. Laid-down costs in Canada will be enhanced owing to the new schedule of packing charges, the increased freight rates and heavy rate of exchange.

CANNED GOODS.

The canned goods trade has kept remarkably active in view of the fact that the season is so well advanced. Tomatoes are running low and are not being offered at all by one jobber. Corn, too, is scarce. Peas, beans, etc., are in fair supply, but it is thought that there will be less old pack to meet the new than in previous years.

Price changes are few and are confined to some revisions on mill feeds, advances for strawberry jams in glass jars and on sewing machine oil. There has been, also, a firming tendency on figs in mats.

DEMAND FOR STARCHES

Demand is heavy for starches and also for corn and cane syrups; this is better than usually obtains for the summer season. The use of these is somewhat stimulated by the scarcity of other essentials.

Coffee markets are firm and strong, as also are those of tea, with a strong likelihood of advances being made, particularly for coffee. The reports concerning damage to the growing crop of coffee in the South are taken here with reserve until facts are available.

PEANUTS EASIER

Peanuts are easier in Southern markets, and this may be reflected here in future shipments. There is every indication that shipment of these will come along as required. Stocks of all nuts locally are fair, and manufacturing interests are fairly well covered. Orders placed to arrive are largely sold, and in view of this stocks on hand will be absorbed quickly enough.

Sugar continuous rather a scarce commodity, though no serious shortage is reported as yet. Some shipments are coming along, and the general feeling seems to be that supplies to carry over the preserving season will be available.

WON THE BET, BUT EARLY LOST LIFE

WINDSOR, July 20.—Induced by a $10 bet to emulate the deeds of Annette Kellerman, Sergt. Thomas James, a discharged soldier, almost lost his life when he dived 53 feet from the bridge of the steamer Britannia.

Accepting the challenge, James made the dive. The veteran of the trenches was unable to control his body, which flopped over his neck, striking the water with a thud.

Stunned by the impact, he was unable to swim ashort and was rescued by his comrade, who made the bet. He is now being treated for a serious sprain of the neck muscles.

STOP HASTY STRIKES— GOVT. TO TAKE ACTION.

RUMORED PENALTIES WILL BE INFLICTED IF CONCILIATION IS NOT TRIED FRST.

Ottawa, July 22.—It is rumoured that the government, on the recommendation of the Ministe of Labour, is about to take such steps as may be found necessary to ensure prompt prosecutions of any violations of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act. This act makes it an offence, punishable with heavy penalties, to participate in a lockout or strike, or to incite others to do so, before an investigation by a Board of Conciliation has taken place, and an award made by it. Of late there have been several such hasty interruptions of work without any such investigation, or any opportunity having been given the Department of Labour to adjust the differences between employers and workmen.

GIVE 'SAMMIES' HOME NEWS

U. S. Government Will Meet Hunger of Men for Local Stuff.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Arrangements to distribute neighborhood news to all of the American fighting forces abroad have been perfected by the foreign press cable service bureau of the Committee on Public Information, which is directed by Water S. Rogers.

This new feature, designed to give to American soldiers such news as they might expect to receive in letters from their relatives and friends, will be sent to France and wherever American soldiers are stationed every day by one of the big German wireless plants which has been operated by the Government since the European war started.

The wireless reports will be delivered free of all tolls to military publications in France, and where no newspapers can be distributed bulletins will be supplied to headquarters of the different units.

In this way it is a hoped to give to the soldiers from every state at least two or three items of news from their home state or city each week.

GERMAN RAILROADS RAPIDLY BECOMING MASSES OF JUNK.

COMPLAINTS REGISTERED OVER CONDITION OF LINES.

Amsterdam, July 22. — In an article in the Berlin Tageblatt, a member of the Reichstag, Herr Goethein, expresses considerable concern regarding the condition of the rolling stock on the German railways. He asserts that on one out of every five of his railway jouruneys in the last two years his travel was interruped by delays due to he breaking down of engines. He attributed this to the substitution of steel for important copper parts.

The longer the war lasts the more serious the condition of the means of communication becomes, he asserted, and the war can only be won, he pointed out, if the means of communication do not fail.

MAROONED 13 DAYS.

TWO SETTLERS HAD FEARFUL EXPERIENCE IN NORTHERN ONTARIO WILDS

Marooned on an islet in Lake Rimy 50 miles west of Cochrane, without food, without the means of catching a fish, or shooting a passing bird, even without matches, Joe Pelletier and George Imbau, settlers, suffered the agony of slow starvation for thirteen days. After landing on the island, their canoe floated off.

When rescued by a search party they were in a state of collapse and unable at first to tell their story, but the state of the shrubbery on the island was an eloquent testimony to their sufferings. The leaves were plucked off. The twigs broken, even the grass on the shallow soil had been torn up for food. A few days' care partially restored the men, and Pelletier is now on the way to complete recovery. Imbau, unfortunately, ate a big meal of moose meat before he was able to endure such heavy diet and he died from the effects.

WILL LENIENCY BE SHOWN TO THE BASEBALL PLAYERS?

Feeling Seems to Be That Work or Fight Order Will Not Be Put Into Effect Generally at First—Order Affects Practically Ninety per Cent. of Players.

Will baseball continue? Will they shut down immediately? These are some of the many questions that baseball fans are asking. Only the future can tell. The decision handed out by United States Secretary of War Baker to the effect that baseball is non-essential, is the decision that has been awaited by the fans, by the players and by the magnates. The decisions of local boards meant very little, but the direct announcement from Washington is official.

The decision just means that baseball players between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-one, the limitation of the first class in the United States, whether married or unmarried, and whether or not they are called, not matter in what class they are placed, must give up baseball or fight. If they give up the game they must work and do their bit to help win the war until they are called to don the khaki.

The statement given out by Ban Johnson, president of the American League, to the effect that the order will take approximately 85 to 90 per cent. of the players in the American League, just shows that practically all the players on major and minor league teams are between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-one. There would hardly be enough players left to form even one league, and with the season more than half advanced, it does not seem likely that any new arrangement of teams and players will be made.

There is, however, a feeling that some leniency will be shown to baseball players, and that they will be allowed to finish out this season. There is the strong argument advanced by those behind baseball that there is a great deal of money involved, and that the clubs should be at least allowed to finish on the 1918 season. The clubs are ever ready to give up their players when they are called to the colours, and many of them provide transportation for them.

Appointed Chief Engineer

J. M. R. FAIRBAIRN.

MR. J. M. R Fairbairn has been appointed chief engineer of the C. P. R. system, replacing Mr. J. G. Sullivan, chief engineer, who is retiring to enter private practice, is the announcement by special circular issued by Sir George Bury, Vice-President, and approved by Lord Shaughnessy, the President.

Too much credit cannot be accorded Mr. Fairbairn, whose rise has been the result of sterling service rendered the company since he joined them in 1892. Mr. Fairbairn was born in Peterborough 45 years ago. He entered the Toronto University, where he graduated.

Following a short private practice in British Columbia, Mr. Fairbairn joined the Canadian Pacific Railway in June, 1892, in the Engineering Department and became Assistant Engineer at Montreal, August, 1901, and Resident Engineer at Ottawa 12 months later. After three years in the Ottawa Division, he returned to Montreal as Division Engineer, and was transferred to Toronto some months later, from which place he returned to Montreal in November, 1907, in a similar capacity. It was in October, 1908, that Mr. Fairbairn was made Principal Assistant at Montreal, two years later being promoted to Engineer of Maintenance of Way, and in June, 1911, was made Chief Engineer of Eastern Lines, a position he occupied up to the time of his present promotion, which is the highest railway position attainable.

READERS BEWARE! "PRETTY LADY" IS ON "TOBOGGAN" AT LIBRARY

Arnold Bennett's Newest Book May Be Good, Official Explains, but It's Not—er—Being Kept in Stock—Press Agent Declares He Isn't Shocked by Volume.

New York, July 22. — Much ado about something difficult to explain has developed at the New York Public Library with the result that among the reasonably interesting books of fiction which may be obtained, there is Arnold Bennett's very new and somewhat snappy "Pretty Lady." The associated committees on everything involving books have decided that the pretty lady, who is the lower strata heroine of Mr. Bennett's story, is none too pretty, and that to introduce her views into public library circulation would mean the startling of many a gentle reader.

The book has been barred from the library shelves. It is one of the few works which ever eluded the outer guard of censors and obtained a place upon the shelves only to lose it when the assembled minds of the library had pondered a little. Furthermore it will be of interest to Mr. Arnold Bennett to know that heretofore the library officials have accepted all of his works without question or great consideration, and that hereafter eyes of all shades will observe any future work of his with what is known as double askance. Briefly, the library has been shaken from Bryant Park on the west to the extreme limits on the east.

"Pretty Lady" is only six weeks old in the matter of publication infancy but it is one of the most precocious little volumes that the Committee on Books Selection ever muffed on a bad bound. Its most interesting and least conventional character is Christine, a petite and oddly principled French miss, who lives in London with the books of another leading character, Mr. J. B., who is well known socially and never has regarded marriage with the serious interest which the New York Public Library so much admires. The reader scarcely gets to know Christine, and Mr. J. B., before the European war starts just under page 14, and from that time on the reader has an opportunity to observe just what a world war does to a man like Mr. J. B., in the development of his life and character, and what effect it has upon Christine, whose life never had been extremely valuable, and whose character is objected to by some of the world's leading librarians.

It will be recognized that Mr. J. B., who has wealth and position, can do much to aid in war work. He is well beyond draft age and actual fighting calibre but he feeds his intense patriotism in works of war charity and in civil tasks of importance to the government. On the other foot, there is Christine.

Christine is patriotic, even more so than Mr. J. B., and there is nothing in the world that she would not do to aid the war cause generally or to amuse or interest the fighters engaged in it. She has little to give, but with a strange combination of superstition, smouldering religious belief and knowledge of worly values she decides to give anything she can.

It was just about at the time that Christine reached her decision that there was a prolonged clatter heard in the chute at the public library, through which pass books which are on their way out. As one of the library officials explained yesterday as clearly as daylight:

"The book is quite all right, I suppose, in a sense. If one cares to read that sort—er-er. Of course the book might be considered—er-well. Briefly, it is the sort of book which we do not—care to-er. At any rate, we have none of them left."

The George H. Doran Company, which publishes all of Mr. Bennett's works for American circulation, did not care to comment upon the library action. Mr. Doran was not at the office, but the company's press agent who seemed to be a very likely person, allowed that he had read the book and didn't mind it in the least.

A FORECAST OF THE PEACE CONFERENCE AS SEEN IN GERMANY

(By Lieutenant A. A. Milne.)

In the Reichstag the other day Herr Kapp made the following spirited protest:

"In view of the great success of our U-Boats we must not allow ourselves to be induced on the conclusion of peace to agree to restrict the use of U-boats by international regulations. We need the weapon for the maintenance of German power at sea."

The debate in progress was upon the naval estimates. Otherwise Herr Kapp might have carried his theme further. He might have said for instance:

"In view of the great success of our system of murder, rape and arson in Belgium, we must not allow ourselves to be induced on the conclusion of peace to agree to restrict our brutalities by international regulations. We need these weapons for the maintenance of German power on land."

He could then have called attention to the great success of the baby-killing Zeppelins, and have deprecated any attempt to restrict the activities of bomb-droppers by international conventions. War on civilians, he could have pointed out, was necessary for the maintenance of German power in the air.

But, as we have said, he was speaking on the naval estimates, and had perforce to confine his remarks to U-boats. The policy of "sinking without a trace" had been successful; it was necessary to Germany; therefore it must go on—not only in this war, but in the next one.

One can understand Herr Kapp's reasoning, for he is a German. But since he is a German, one cannot understand his anxiety in the matter. What is Herr Kapp's trouble? Surely he is sufficiently at home in his country to know that the German use of U-boats in the next war will not depend in the least upon whether it is prohibited or not prohibited by international regulations? It will depend solely upon whether it is necessary for the maintenance of German power. Herr Kapp has lived long enough in Germany to know that this is the only consideration which determines the use of any weapon in Prussian Lands.

He would know too, the formula for the introduction of any new weapon into the German War Book. It is a simple one, and has been used many times in the last three and a half years. Let us suppose that in the next war Germany decides to torture her prisoners to death systematically, instead of in her present haphazard way. The process of instituting the custom would be as follows:

First the German High Command would announce its decision to the German Government, justifying. it on the grounds that it was necessary to a German victory.

Then some member of the German Government would blurt it out publicly, recovering himself sufficiently, however, to explain that it was the only possible means of averting defeat at the hands of the wicked enemy.

Finally, German Wireless would make it clear to all the world that England had been doing it first.

Whereupon Herr Kapp would be quite comfortable about it. Indeed he would probably let himself go on the subject in the Reichstag, affirming that in the art of torturing Germany had established such a clear superiority over England, that no future international regulations must be permitted to rob the Fatherland of this weapon in the next war but one.

There are very many Herr Kapps in Germany. The German Government consists entirely of Herr Kapps. How many of them will be present at the Peace Conference? If they are all there, then we can follow already the course of those negotiations for which the whole world is anxiously waiting. The negotiations will turn upon the next war. How is the next war to be fought? Is it fair that Germany, who has obtained several local successes by submarine-murder, indiscriminate bomb-dropping, well-poisoning, torture of prisoners, deportation and enslaving of civilians, should be deprived of these aids to victory in future? Certainly not! . . And excited faces will lean across the table, and angry Teutonic fists will thump thereon indignantly . . . . .

Details of the peace? That is not the important matter. The chief business is to arrange about the next war.

Indeed, why not settle a date for it?

And, to save trouble, decide that Germany shall win it?

HINTS FOR THE POULTRYMAN.

The flock should be given the opportunity to get out of doors and exercise on fine days. Begin to make preparation for hatching. Clean up the incubators and brooders, get boxes ready for setting hens. Do not set hens in the laying pens where other birds are running. If you want to raise more than 150 chickens consider the use of a good incubator and brooder. Usually chickens of the general purpose breeds hatched during the last week of March make the best winter layers. Where using hens for hatching dust them well with some good insect powder before setting, and again about two weeks later.

General Foch is Moderating His Drive on the Aisne

Allies Are Preparing for the Inevitable German Counter Attacks —Safeguarding Paris.

LOCAL OFEFNSIVE

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, July 22. — General Foch is moderating his drive between the Aisne and the Marne, for the apparent purpose of consolidating his gains and preparing for the inevitable German counter attacks. A forward movement on a gigantic scale before the Americans are fully ready to participate, would be to accept the German terms on which such a battle should be fought. General Foch is now declining to be inveigled into playing Germany's game under such conditions. The Aisne-Marne thrust must be considered as a local offensive which, however, has already had major consequences through safeguarding Paris, and driving the Germans north of the Marne. General Foch must not be expected to press forward recklessly after having already secured such highly important results.

USING UP RESERVES.

Von Hindenburg is unquestionably piling his reserves into the northern and central areas of the Aisne-Marne salient, especially about Soissons and Fere En Tardenois, which are the most important pivots of the Present German resistance. In this respect General Foch has gravely interrupted Von Hindenburg's future offensive plans. The morale effect in Germany of a confused offensive strategy at the Kaiser's headquarters will be very great, coming so closely upon the dismissal of Foreign Minister Von Kuehlmann for predicting that peace cannot be won on the battlefield.

Von Hindenburg, therefore, will resort to desperate expedients in order to try to wrest the initiative from General Foch.

LABOURMEN SAID TO BE SHARPENING KNIFE FOR CHIEF

One of the first salutations that greeted Chief Thompson on his return from Hamilton, where he attended the Chief Constables' Association Convention, was an intimation that the Trades and Labour Council were arranging a rendezvous with him over the resolution he seconded last week by which the Chiefs disapproved of policemen joining trades unions.

The Chief mentioned the receipt of the unofficial notification this morning, and added that he hoped the labour men clearly understood the purport of the resolution the convention unanimously endorsed. The Chiefs have no objection to policemen forming unions of their own, but they are opposed to a questionable innovation by which some policemen have been induced to join trades unions. The reason for this objection by the Chief Constables' Association is based on the fear that the police could not fulfill their obligations to the municipality, in certain events, if they were affiliated with trades unions. The force of their contention is generally recognized. The policeman's first duty is to the public, and it is demanded that there should be no conflicting obligation that might arise out of membership in a trade union.

Chief Thompson did not dip into the details of the argument, and if the Trades and Labour Council press their objection they will perhaps share an interesting bit of information illustrating the machinations of alien enemies and of their attempt in various parts of Canada to weaken police forces by insidious propaganda calculated to arouse in the minds of labour suspicions against the police and other guardians of the people.

The Chief stated that the alien enemy question was one of the main subjects discussed at the convention, but for good reasons the full statement of facts that are known to the Police Chiefs were not made public.

MESSAGE OF FORMER PETERBORO MAN

BELIEVES STATES SHOULD HAVE GONE INTO WAR SOONER.

"The only comment I can make upon the war is this, I wish to God the United States had gone in with Canada and the others in beginning. We had all the potential resources to complete the combination that was necessary to defeat the Teutonic outfit. But we did not have the quick insight that was displayed by Canada and the entire British Empire. Never mind; we are all in it now; and with the blessing of God we will stand together until there will be no more Germany and no more Kaiserism. I thank you for your many kindnesses and remain

Yours truly,
PATRICK J. MURPHY.

The foregoing heartening message was received by Tax Collector W. T. Green from Rev. Father Murphy, a former resident of Peterborough but now in charge of the mission at Dalhart, Texas.

WORTH MORE THAN GOLD, SHE DECLARES

Mrs. Trimble Was Nearly Helpless Before She Took Tanlac.

"If I could talk personally with everybody who has rheumatism I would certainly tell them to take Tanlac, for I have tried it and it was worth more than gold to me," said Mrs. Rebecca Trimble of 53 Victoria Ave., Eastview, Ottawa, recently. Mrs. Trimble has been a resident of Ottawa for the past twenty-four years and is highly esteemed by all who know her.

"Only those afflicted the same way," Mrs. Trimble continued, "can understand the torture I have suffered for the past two years with rheumatism. My hips and legs troubled me most, but sometimes the pain would extend around to the small of my back. It was just a constant, terrible aching that seemed to go clean to the bone, and was so severe at times it would sicken me. At times my limbs would swell up twice their natural size, and the muscles would draw up until they felt they were tied in knots. I couldn't stoop over at all and if I dropped anything I had to get someone to pick it up for me. From last February until May I was so crippled up that I couldn't get out of the house and could just barely hobble around. Sometimes I suffered so I would go several nights without getting a wink of sleep. Nothing relieved me and I sometimes felt that I would never recover.

"I had gotten to where I had little faith in anything to help me, and I didn't believe much of what I read about Tanlac, but I was in so much misery I finally made up my mind to try it. Well, that was one of the best things I ever did. I am on my fourth bottle now and am truly grateful for the way I have improved. The swelling is almost gone out of my limbs and the pain is so much less that I hardly notice it any more. My appetite is much better and I don't feel tired out all the time. I am now able to do my housework, and was out yesterday working in my garden. I have never taken a medicine that can compare with Tanlac, and anyone suffering as I did will do well to try it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co.., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

German Scouts Mitteleuropa Ambition as Forlorn Hope

Director of German Lloyd Shows It Cannot Replace Trade Loss—Must Restore World Connections for Full Economic Recovery.

WAKING FROM DREAMS

THE HAGUE, July 29.—Weltwirtschaft, Ubergangswirtschaft, Mitteleuropa and last, but not least, raw materials a positive obsessions in the German press. Phillip Heineken, Director of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company and prominent member of the Hanseatic economical movement, publishes an articles in the Wacca Zeitung on the German and Austro-Hungarian League-in-Arms, saying that too much hope has been based on the catchword Mitteleuropa and last, but not least, raw and that the non realization of hope may bring deep disappointment.

Heineken adds that his article, which is entitled "World Economics and Central Europe," does not mean that one signifies the other but that one is the complement of the other. A Central European economic league can only have permanent advantages, he asserts, if each member of the league has world connections, and world economics must likewise bring communication with such an important factor as this league would be.

DIFFICULT TO REPLACE LOSSES

The completion of this league, wonderful as its realization would be, will not suffice, he proceeds, although the Central European idea, with its multitudinous connections, especially when Turkey and part of the Balkans are included, and the road to India via the Persian Gulf, is enormous. He argues that the idea that Central European economic districts will replace everything which Germany has lost in the war is an exaggeration.

Reference is made to the last meeting of the German-Austro-Hungarian Economic League June 1, when it was resolved that the league would either guarantee further economic relations with the world or would be strong enough to resist if the enemy refused to resume economic relations. Heinken continues that it is perfectly clear that this can only be a temporary defensive league and cannot replace the former exchange of goods with the world.

Quoting Professor Manes, he says: "We understand today that the closest league of the Central Powers and the closest connections cannot possibly suffice to supply Germany and Austria with the raw materials, as well as foodstuffs and fodder, that these countries require unless they are willing to fall behind the standing of pre-war days and content themselves with the role of a third rate power."

A glance at pre-war import statistics, the writer observes, will suffice to show that it is an impossibility to pretend that raw materials and other necessities needed by Germany can be supplied permanently by the European continent. The aim of the league Heunken argues, should not be to shut out communication with the world or to encourage the idea that it is a substitute for lost markets, as a few years would suffice to destroy Germany's power as a world importer and exporter.

The Berliner Tageblatt recently quoted an article from The New York Times in order to show how much attention the American commercial world is giving to these questions.

DEMAND FOR NAVAL BASES.

The Cologne Volke Zeitung brings up the question of naval bases and their importance in connection with von Hertling's speech and the upbuilding of Germany's colonial empire. This question, of which the masses of the German people understand but little, has been left in abeyance of late, but the paper says that it deserves more attention than it receives.

History has shown that naval bases are motors of colonial policy, it continues, and Great Britain is a classical example. The paper then points to the Australian desire to be "supreme" in the Pacific, and, indeed, the South Sea islands, and says that with all these world political questions that of naval bases becomes even more important. Germany must have good ports and island connections, it asserts, and successes on the Continent do not suffice.

Germany needs bases on the West African Coast, the article maintains and must complete agreements with Portugal for the ports of Tiger Bay and the Islands Prinzipe Sao Thome and must also have bases on the East African Coast. Zanzibar, it says, must be returned. The paper enumerates various other places which would certainly be of great advantage to Germany's ambitious overseas plans.

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—In these days, when everybody wants to help production, and the boys are going out to help the farmers, there should not be a lack of liberality on the part of the latter, and I hope the boys will be properly paid or I fear there will be less enthusiasm.

Two boys, aged 13 and 14 respectively, that live on Elm street, went out to a farm last week. They worked from 4 o'clock each morning, pitching hay, carrying water, chopping wood and generally helping, and at the end of the week the farmer said, "Boys, you have done well—here is 10c. apiece for you."

The boys thought they had earned a trifle more, and expostulated when the farmer told them that two city boys were hardly so good as one country boy! The boys quit and came home this evening, paying their own fares. Can you beat it?

THE ROAD TO THE FRONT

By CANADIAN OVERSEAS.

All roads to the front are the same—very straight. You can see them running up and down hill for miles ahead of you, and they are hard and smooth kept by the British army.

As you pass along you meet groups of turbaned Indians working at them or bands of smiling, chattering Chinese, or maybe Arabs or Nubians. Their costumes supply a pleasant touch of colour and picturesqueness.

Strings of motor lorries pass along. Horsemen, infantrymen with all their goods and chattels on them going to or from the line.

Bordering on all roads to the front are settlements of wooden or tin huts with their gardens; villages whose only inhabitants seem to be the British soldiers and the few French who have remained to attend to 'Tommy's' wants.

In the early part of the journey these villages are what they were in peace times, tidy and thrifty. Later the landscape alters, trees no longer shade the road, only their blackened stumps are left.

Shell holes, mounds, old trenches, tangles of barbed wire, twisted and shapeless farm implements and all sorts of debris take the place of cultivated fields, and instead of the comfortable, tidy village there are piles of ruins.

Sign posts are abundant, no one can go astray or wander into danger unwittingly. Well back one is warned of "precautionary gas zone"—never "alert zone" and nearer still "respirators must be worn" or "steel helmets must be worn," and so on.

Towards evening this road to the front teems with life. Men with mess tins fetch evening meals. Men stroll leisurely on with a firmer purpose, and lights in the huts twinkle. Thus, is the life along the road to the front.

Very different a is ruined city such as Arras, at nightfall. Once it was full of life and domesticity; once the evening hour was filled with the laughter of families re-united after the day's work. Now the jagged walls are open to the gaze of any stray soldier who may pass by.

So much quiet happiness destroyed! And as the Verey Lights shoot up and in their brilliancy search the ruins for a remnant of life, it strikes a note of almost intolerable sadness.

MAJOR MITCHELL SIGNED WILL ON AUTOMOBILE DRIVE

Document Executed Day Before He Left City—Made Wife and Mother Beneficiaries.

New York, July 22. — The will of Major John Purroy Michel, one-time Mayor of New York, whose death occurred on July 6th last, when he fell from an air-plane at Gerstner Field, near Lake Charles, La., has been filed for probate. The will was executed on February 16th last, while he was driving in an automobile in Fifth avenue, one day before he left this city, never to return alive.

Major Mitchel was shopping when Edwin H. Updike, of the law firm of Updike and Hardy, No. 65 Liberty street, induced him to sign his name to his will. Major Mitchel had just bought goggles in an optician's, and was keenly discussing their merits, when the lawyer found him. The witnesses to the will were Mr. Updike, his assistant, Herman Knobloch, and Major Mitchel's chauffeur, Harry Larkin.

The will in one clause discussed the possibility of Major Mitchel's dying with his wife in an accident. Three pages are devoted to disposing of his estate which goes to his widow, Mrs. Olive Child Mitchel, after a legacy of $10,000 is paid his mother, Mrs. Mary P. Mitchel, of No. 447 West 162d street.

300,000 WOMEN OF BRITAIN WORKING IN HARVEST FIELD

NUMBER JUMPS FROM 19,000 LAST YEAR.

London, July 22. — More than 300,000 women are at present engaged on the land in Great Britain, compared with 19,000 last year, Rowland E. Prothero, president of the Board of Agriculture, told the House of Commons, in discussing estimates of the agricultural department. There also is a large increase in the number of soldiers, German prisoners and interned aliens doing agricultural work. The speaker added that the difficulty was that while the shortage of labour might be made good to some extent, the quality could not be made good.

CANADA'S PART IN THE STRUGGLE

Canada Is a Heavy Producer of Munitions—A Series of Advertisements.

The Department of Labour and the Imperial Munitions Board, are running a series of advertisements in the press showing what Canada has done in the way of producing munitions for the common cause.

Fifty-five per cent. of all shrapnel, 42 per cent. of all the 4.5's; 27 per cent. of all the 6-inch shells used in the whole British army, is Canada's contribution. This record can only be maintained by uninterrupted co-operation between employer and employee, and all labour differences should be submitted to a board of arbitration. The Canadian munitions output is as important now as it was at the beginning of the war. The Huns' U-boats are now almost completely mastered, and the shells are going across in an almost uninterrupted stream to the front line trenches.

PETERBORO GIRLS ENJOY THE WORK

Have Joined the Flax Picking Squad At Drayton.

Miss Kathleen Dunsford and Miss Agnes Carmichael have joined the four hundred khaki clad flax pickers at Drayton, Ontario, and have left to aid in this branch of the national service. In a letter received from Miss Dunsford she expresses herself as delighted with the work and says the girls are well fed and looked after, the swimming is 'great,' and the work congenial.

Food Board Flashes

Have you a market in your town and do you patronize it?

Going to market with a basket over your arm is one of the first principles of food conservation in these days. You can pick and choose. You get your food fresh from the country and you get it at a reasonable rate. At the same time you encourage the farmer to produce more. Transportation is a consideration. The municipal market simplifies this problem and eliminates overhead expenses into the bargain.

One of the most flourishing markets in Canada is at the Capital. It is flourishing because the people of Ottawa are interested in it. Saturday morning finds men and women of every kind and degree elbowing their way through the crowds with all manner of baskets over their arms.

If your market is dead and alive instead of being all alive, you are partly to blame. Give it your support and your patronage. Make it one of the show-places in your town.

There are four things in fashion that are often discussed to-day, the severe, uncollared neckline, the short sleeve, the cape back and the lack of chiffon blouse.

STOP RAILROAD STRIKE.

AMERICAN UNIONS SAID TO HAVE THREATENED TO THROW THE CANADIAN UNIONS OUT.

Montreal, July 22.—A special Washington despatch reads in part:

"It has just been learned that early this week a meeting was held in the capital of the international presidents of the various unions of railway shopmen, at which they refused all support to the Canadian shopmen in the event of their turning down the McAdoo award as amended, and going out on strike.

"Although exact confirmation is not obtainable it was declared that the Canadian charters would be rescinded in the event of a strike and the Canadian unions left to shift for themselves, without the backing of the 90 per cent of the membership in the United States."

FIREMEN AS SOCK KNITTERS.

Providence Brigade Turned Out Three Thousand Pairs in Month.

PROVIDENCE, R.I.—The fire-fighters of this city think they hold the record as machine sock knitters. They turned out three thousand and forty-five pairs of socks in June, each station vieing with the other to make a record. The knitting machines are kept in order and repaired by members of the department. The record was made by Captain Bigney's station, which turned out 525 pairs, including tops. Some of the stations are 100 per cent. strong sock knitters. Others let the more expert men make the socks at the fifteen stations.

NO MORE EIGHT-FOR-QUARTER TICKETS ON BRANTFORD STREET RY.

Brantford, July 22. — The Brantford municipal railway commission, after wrestling for some months with the problem of increasing revenues, faced by a $12,000 deficit, owing to increased wages, has decided to eliminate the eight-for-a-quarter limited tickets, retaining the green tickets, good any time, at six for a quarter, as the only tickets. There will be no increase in the normal rate of 5 cents per ride. On the Grand Valley Railway return fares will be boosted from 30 to 35 cents.

MACHINISTS' MEETING TO CONSIDER PLANS

WORKING CONDITIONS UNDER REVIEW—PETERBORO IS REPRESENTED.

TORONTO, July 22.—The first Provinial convention of the machinists of Ontario commenced at the Labor Temple Saturday afternoon, and will continue for a couple of days.

Delegates were in attendance representing 6,000 machinists in the Province. Among the places that were represented were Ottawa, Peterboro, Collingwood, Kingston, Belleville, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Welland, London, Stratford, Windsor, Galt, Guelph and Sarnia.

J. A. McCelland, vice-president of the machinists of Canada ,opened the meeting, and the delegates elected J. Munro, past president of district 46 Toronto ,as the chairman of the convention, and J. A. Young as secretary

How to secure uniformity of working conditions for the machinists of Ontario is the main topic of discussion. At the present time the working conditions in the various factories throughout the Province vary considerably. While the majority of places recognize the eight-hour day, there are some in which a nine-hour day is effect.

"It is not likely that we shall take any action with regard to the threatened strike on the railways," stated one of the officials.

A resolution will likely be passed by the convention to the effect that it would be wise to have a Provincial organization for the machinists and Provincial officials, but if this is adopted it will be necessary for it to be submitted to the members of the unions in the form of a referendum.

A disastrous fire occurred at Kinmount Junction on Friday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock when the C.N.R. station freight sheds, and section foreman Watson's residence was destroyed by fire. GERMANS BLOWING UP TOWNS IN REAR

Hard Fighting At Various Points On The West Front

BRITISH SHARE PRIDE OF THE FRENCH IN FOCH

People of London Look for Repeated Blows, Now That He is Free to Act—Eyes of Our Soldiers Turned Toward the Rhine With Increasing Desire to Reach It.

SPIRITS OF AMERICANS HIGH

LONDON, July 23.—Everywhere in London today people are talking about Foch. There is no light-heartedness, because all know that one successful counterattack does not mean a decision and that the pendulum will swing back and forth many times before the hour of victory strikes. But Foch's move marks the raising of the allied strength to a new level. At last we are free from the restraints of inferior numbers and unfavorable position.

Since assuming the leadership, the greatest offensive General produced in this war has been obliged by circumstances to maintain the defensive.. His strong arm is now loosed, and London is confident that the Germans will feel its power again and again. With characteristically generous spirit, the British share the French pride in the allied Generalissimo. The British have a right to view the result with satisfaction, for it was their sinking of all narrow considerations for the good of the common cause that made unity of command possible.

It is worth recalling now that Lloyd George, ably seconded by General Bliss and Lord Milner, brought about Foch's appointment in face of most formidable opposition. Whatever may be the Premiers' weaknesses under factional and political pressure at home, he showed splendid strength in his insistence on putting the foreign General in command of the British forces. Foch's success will make it a historic act, and even now the British public is properly taking a share of the credit.

It is difficult for Americans in London to restrain their emotions. They would like to do a little shouting, but have a horror of doing it prematurely. The spectacle of American forces stepping right into the furnace alongside the French veterans and holding their own naturally gratifies and reassures every man wearing the American uniform. It is a proud day for the million and more who have come across the seas to serve, and their fighting spirit has been raised to a high pitch at seeing their fellow-Yanks picked by Foch for storming strong position. As our men get deeper into the battle the stronger grows their desire to go through with it. Their eyes are turned toward the Rhine.

And, indeed, the same sentiment is growing in all quarters. I have heard more talk in the last week along the line of leaving nothing German west of the Rhine except the bones of dead soldiers than in the whole previous war period. While this mood is perhaps somewhat savage, it may be useful for practical purposes in beating the barbarians in the last stand.

RUST CAUSES AN ENORMOUS LOSS TO CANADIAN FARMER

Shrub Causes Wheat Rust—West Banning Barberry—At Same Time a New Variety of Early Rust-escaping Wheat is Being Successfully Grown.

What rust on grain has cost the farmer in coldcash through startling reductions on yield, and what, in turn, the consequent cut in spending power has meant in hardship to earners in eastern Canada who produce goods Western Canadian can buy, cannot be calculated. But no two representative grain growers or manufacturer would hesitate to declare the cost to Canada as one expressed in expressed in terms of hundreds of terms of hundreds of millions of millions of dollars.

Many people now foresee the utter extinction of the rust menace in Canada in the eradication of the barberry plant, and in the development by Seager Wheeler—the Luther Burbank of the Canadian wheat world—of a variety of the great essential cereal that matures some ten days earlier than that generally grown in the Western provinces.

It seems to have been proved absolutely that the decoraive barberry—expect the Japanese sort—is the chief cause of the propagation of rust trouble, and already in the spring wheat belt in the United States and in Canada an organized campaign is working for the eradication of the barberry in all sections likely to infect the growing grain.

DENMARK BENEFITS

It was all brought out in Congress in Washington by Hon. George Young, of North Dakota, that the settlers in the colony of Massachusetts in 1755 were aware of the intimate relations between the Barberry plant, and rust on wheat, and that a law was passed thirty years ago providing for the rooting out of the shrub in that jurisdiction. Denmark, however, has begun the modern crusade, and the Hon. Mr. Young says that rust has practically disappeared from the wheat fields of that progressive Scandinavian country since the carrying into effect of the campaign against the innocent-appearing barberry.

Apparently this plant is "host" for the rust, which is carried on the winds as far as two or three hundred miles. When the climatic conditions are suitable, it fasterns to the wheat, and then, to complete the cycle, the parastic returns to the barberry, which preserves it in health during the winter.

NEW ADVANCED WHEAT.

For the past eleven years, on his farm near Rosthern, on the Canadian Northern Railway, in central Saskatchewan, Seager Wheeler has been "breeding" a strain of wheat that matures early. But there is added significance that by the time the rust usually develops on wheat in the west, his wheat has developed to the point where it can do practically no harm.

While little has been said in public in Canada, the leaders in Canadian agriculture have been closely watching the rust evil in all its ramifications. Now, Dean Rutherford, of the University of Saskatchewan, Saskateen, points out: "The people of Saskatchewan are fully aware of the fact that rust can come to use from Dakota or and get started when our condiand gets started when our conditions are favorable to its propagation and spread. The states to the south are waging war against the barberry. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and I think Alberta, have included the barberry bush amongst their noxious weeds. Steps are being taken to have it destroyed in all Department of Agriculture in interesting it self in this important question, and has under may carefully planned investigations with reference to it."

ITS GOOD POINTS

Seager Wheeler says of his new "breed" of wheat:

"'Red Bobs' matures a week to ten days earlier than even Marquis. While it is not altogether rust-resistant, it is practically immune, owing to its stage of filling at the time rust begins to develop, so that rust cannot do any damage to the grains, as it will be filled before rust makes any headway in the crop. Of other good qualities its great strength of straw enables it to be grown on land and stand up where other sorts would (expect Kitchener) lay down, owing to excessive soft growth in rich land. Another good quality; The heads fill completely, where in other sorts many heads have empty spikelets.

ORIGINATED IN AUSTRALIA.

"Red Bods is being grown this season in many districts in the prairie provinces. In a broad sense Canada must regard it as a good gift from Australia. Out there, in 1905, a farmer 'crossed' a wheat without a name with a barley called Nepaul. A hard, beardless good milling wheat was the result, but—it was unmarkable because it was white. Some samples came to this country, and experiments with it were made during a period of several years. Then Seager Wheeler in 1917 began his experiments with it. By dint of great care and patience he has got the "Red Bobs," named after the late Field Marshall Roberts.

OUR HEROES.

The band plays on, the drum beats fast,
The boys go marching gaily past:
Their heads thrown back, their courage high,
Their thoughts are but to do or die.
Each mother bravely waves her flag
Proud that their footsteps do not lag;
Each sweetheart watches for the chance
To throw her boy a smiling glance.

Across the seas, they march along
Their faces set; yet with a song
They face the ridge where bullets play
Like hail upon a summer's day:
They face the cold, the mud, the rain,
And smilingly they face the pain.
Our boys are brave, and those who yield
Are those who lie on Flander's Field.

But there's a boy who stays behind,
And he must face the daily grind.
There is no glory in his work,
But just the same he must not shirk.
With patient care he plods along,
But in his heart there is no song.
For he must somehow do his bit
Tho' his brow is marked "unfit."

He sees his brother march away,
And sighs to think that he must stay;
Unfit to face the world's big tasks,
A fighting chance is all he asks:
For he must toil from morn till night
To keep the home fires burning bright,
And cheer the ones who wait with fear
For word from those they hold so dear.

Oh, don't you think that those who stay
At home and fight the slower way,
And murmur not, nor try to shirk
What seems to them a woman's work,
Deserve a kindly word and look
As well as those whose place they took?
We praise the boys who went away,
But let's be fair to those who stay.

EX-CZAR'S SUPERSTITION

The exCzarina's belief in the unspeakable Rasputin proves that she was of a strongly superstitious turn of mind, and she is generally regarded as the true maker of the revolution in Russia, but an incident which traveling from Petrograd to Moscow proves that the superstition is not all on her side.

It appears that the ex-Czar wears a ring in which he believes is embedded a fragment of the true Cross It was originally one of the treasures of the Vatican and was presented to one of the Czar's predecessors for diplomatic reasons. The value he places on this superstitious relic was proved when he accidentally left it behind him when travelling to Moscow. He had the train stopped instantly, a special express chartered and a trusty messenger sent post-haste to fetch the missing ring, nor would he allow the train to budge an inch till his messenger returned hours afterwards, with the relic!—Tit-Bits.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

A BETTER UNDERSTANDING

I could not believe what George had told me—believe that I had heard aright. If I had then my reasoning had been all wrong; Julia Collins had been all wrong.

"Do you mean what you said, George?" I asked, as I snuggled in his arms.

"Of course I do!" he smiled his answer. "What should I do with my money, my business, if we had no children to inherit it? Nice old Darby and Joan we would be, with no young things around to keep us from getting to be a couple of old cranks—I am to blame," he added after a minute. "I don't know why, but in some way I have made you afraid of me, afraid to trust me."

"It was because you so often seemed displeased with me—so often cross and impatient because I was different from your friends. Then you said that you wanted to make me over. I tried to let you—tried to be as near like them as I could. I failed, I know, but I tried."

"Dear, I never wanted you to be like them, save in the things that would give you poise—would help you in holding your own in society. I have often been very proud when you did so." I remembered the look that I had seen upon his face and could not account for. It had seemed like a certain prideful look, but I was never sure.

"Why didn't you tell me when I pleased you? You always told me when I angered or annoyed you."

GEORGE CONFESSES HIS FAULT

"I'm sorry, Helen," he replied seriously, very sorry. I thought that you knew me well enough to see when I was pleased. My only excuse is that I have done always what I thought right. I am a peculiar man, in some respects. A hard man, I expect," his smile softened the words, yet I knew they were true. "I have little patience with inefficiency in any one. But now we understand each other better," he said as he put me back among my pillows, "and after this we will talk things over together."

I did not say so but I recalled the time that I tried to talk things over with him because Mrs. Sexton had advised it; and how he had flung from me in anger. But I had felt then that I was tactless. I must try to learn to wait until a time when I could talk without annoying him.

We talked a little more, then George called the nurse and left me. I had not been so happy since the day that I had promised to marry him. I felt so relieved; so glad that he was not cold and hard hearted as Julia Collins had made me think. I didn't flatter myself that he would be changed in every respect; he had said he was "a hard man"—but never again would I let another woman—especially Julia Collins—make me so miserable.

It may seem strange that I was happy in spite of the fact that George had not refuted a single statement I had made when I spoke of his neglect—of his desire to be with Julia Collins—and the other things of which I complained; but I had lived with him long enough to know that what he had said—that little—meant more than much protesting would have meant from another mon.

I improved rapidly, and was soon as well as ever. Mother had only been able to remain until I could sit up. Father was not well and she had to return to him and the boys. Oh, how I hated to see her go! I knew her loving heart had been torn by what I had said in my first sickness—that she was uneasy and unhappy about me. So I told her as much of the conversation between George and me as I thought necessary to quiet her fears. If I exaggerated some of the things he said I felt I would be forgiven because I did so that she might not worry.

A HAPPY CONVALESCENCE.

I was almost sorry when I was able to go out once more—to take up my social duties again. George had been so uniformly kind, although as I got stronger he went out a good deal. But he never failed to come home first, and to see that I was comfortable. And except a few times he did not remain out late. He kept me almost smothered in flowers, and as soon as I was able to ride he came home early every afternoon and took me for a spin in the country.

Sometimes we went out alone, then again, he would stop and get Evelyn Reeves and my little namesake—who had grown amazingly and was a lovely little rolly-polly thing, good natured, and so cunning. Sometimes he would call for Mrs. Sexton, and she would go with us. I had confessed how I hated her, at first, and how much I thought of her now. George had laughed at my confession and had remarked:

"It will be like that with many things, Helen. Sometimes little girls don't know what is good for them, and they have to learn it by experience."

Once, to my surprise, he asked Merton Gray to go with us. We met him in the street. He said he was on his way to inquire for me, and George invited him to make his call in the car. Merton had been most thoughtful, sending me flowers, and an occasional message. In fact, everyone had been more than kind in that way—even Julia Collins.

MAKE LIGHT OF ALL RISKS

British Aviators Think Little of Danger When There Is a Chance to Hurt the Enemy.

The daringly low flights of English airmen at the front are shown in the official notes to awards of the military cross:

Lieut. Richard Aveline Maybery, Lancers and R. F. C., after attacking two airdromes in succession at very low altitudes and inflicting considerable damage, attacked and dispersed a number of mounted men and then attacked a freight train. He next attacked and shot down a hostile machine at 500 feet, and before returning attacked a passenger train.

Second Lieut. Walbanke A. Pritt, R. F. C., in attacking a hostile airdrome dropped bombs from a very low altitude and attacked and destroyed two enemy machines almost as soon as they had left the ground. A machine gun then opened upon him from the airdrome, which he immediately attacked. Both on his outward and homeward journey he was under very heavy fire. Once he attacked a motorcar and shot one of the occupants from about fifty feet, afterward attacking infantry on the march and inflicting severe casualties upon them.

Second Lieut. Alexander A. N. Pentland, R. F. C., descended to within twenty feet of the ground and fired into eight hostile machines. On his return journey he attacked a train with considerable effect from low altitude. He has always shown fearlessness and devotion to duty in attacking enemy balloons and troops on the ground.

Finland's New Flag.

The Russian revolution will probably result in lengthening the list of the world's flags by several additions. Finland, which, since March, has ceased to be a grand duchy and has declared her independence and status as a republic, has now decided on her national colors. She will have three different standards: the national flag, the flag of the merchant service, and that of the pilot and customs services. The national colors are those which were acclaimed at the time of the revolution, the yellow lion of Finland surrounded by nine white roses on a red ground. The flag of the merchant service will have a yellow perpendicular cross on a red ground and in the top right-hand corner, nine white roses set symmetrically in three rows. The pilot and customs services flag will be the same, except that it will carry the yellow of Finland instead of the white roses.

CITY'S FIRST AND LAST FALL

Jericho's Siege and Capture One of the Spectacular Stories of the Old Testament.

On the morning of Washington's birthday Gen. Sir E. H. Allenby's Australian troopers rode as conquerors into a little village of huts, noted geographically as being the city of lowest elevation on earth, and in Biblical history as being the scene of the Promised Land, observes the Minneapolis Journal.

In the Canaanite days Jericho was a fortified city, commanding both the lower ford of the Jordan and the route leading up to the highlands of Judea. The story of its siege and capture and the destruction of its population is one of the spectacular stories of the Old Testament, which contrasts strongly with its gentle seizure by a Christian army in a year of our Lord thirty-five centuries later.

According to the Old Testament story, the city was left desolate with a curse from Joshua upon the man who should attempt to rebuild it. And it is related that Hiel, the Bethelite, who did rebuild it, lost his two sons in the construction of the wall as punishment for his temerity.

It was at Jericho that Joshua instituted his campaign of frightfulness upon his enemies; and it was on the Jericho road leading up to the Judean highlands that Jesus laid the scene of the story of the Good Samaritan who gave first aid to a wounded enemy. The advance from Joshua to Jesus in the human ideal of duty toward one's enemies is the very measure of the spread between the ideals of Hebrew and Athenian on the same question.

This war is fundamentally a conflict between the ideals of modern brotherhood and ancient overlordship; and nowhere is the contrast more noteworthy than in this little village of Jericho, where the people today are safer in the hands of their enemies than they were under the rule of their own people. The world, with the exception of Germany and Turkey, has traveled a long way between the two falls of Jericho.

EATS ITS OWN TAIL

Queer Feast of the Tadpole Before It Becomes a Frog.

EVOLUTION OF A POLLYWOG.

Changes That Mark the Transition of This Curious Creature From an Aquatic to an Air Breathing Animal. How It Differs From the Toad.

There is no more interesting creature on earth than a pollywog, or tadpole, for it is a fish in the process of transformation into a land animal. The whole process can be watched if you put a few pollywogs in a milk bottle or jar full of water with some water plants.

In any of the ponds in the parks in the cities or in the pools in the suburbs in the proper season frog spawn can be found. It floats on the water like masses of sago pudding. A handful of this will furnish entertainment for several weeks and will at the same time give a lesson in evolution.

The spawn that floats on the ponds is the eggs of frogs. They lay it in the first warm days of spring spreading it where the rays of the sun will warm it. Each egg contains a yolk, which is the food of the living germ within, and is fouted with black, probably to attract as much heat as possible and at the same time to protect the germ from the penetrating ultra violet rays of the light, which would destroy it. The black yolk is in the center of a mass of transparent jelly which is there as a protective covering. If a small mass of spawn be placed in a jar of water and watched daily with an ordinary magnifying glass the black yolk of each egg will presently be seen to assume a sausage like shape. Gradually this takes the form of a tiny pollywog, which soon begins to wriggle. After a few days these little black bodies wriggle out through the transparent jelly and attach themselves to bits of green sticks or weeds, which should be placed in the jar with them.

For some time they remain attached to such supports by a sucker, waiting for the opening of the mouth. As yet there are no visible eyes, but small stumps on each side of the head will be noticed. These are the gills. The whole skin if examined with a lens will be found to be covered with a sort of animated velvet pile, for its component threads are in constant motion, thereby creating a stream of fresh water to carry on the work of breathing and a little later these movements will be strong enough to bear the body slowly along, so that locomotion at this stage is like that of the lowliest of living creatures, the protozoa.

When the mouth appears the inside of the great fleshy lips and the jaws will be found to be armed with rows of horny teeth numbering many hundreds. The gills will also have grown considerably. These, however, soon give place to internal gills, and the water taken at the mouth passes out again by a small funnel on the right side of the head. This fishlike stage disappears with the appearance of the forelegs.

The hind legs next appear, and as these develop the mouth is closed for alterations. No food can be taken, and during this enforced fast the tadpole supports life by consuming its tail. This is slowly digested by a process not yet clearly understood. By the time this strange feast has ended the new mouth and the lungs have appeared—the tadpole has become a frog and leaves the water for the land. As a tadpole it fed by rasping off vegetable and animal matter with its teeth; as a frog it feeds by jerking food into its capacious mouth by the flick of a very sticky tongue.

Newts and toads in their pollywog stage can scarcely be told from frogs, but newts remain water animals, wearing tails, all their life. Some of them retain their gills also, but most of them develop lungs and have to come to the surface to breathe. There are few species which have neither gills nor lungs and therefore do not breathe at all, their blood being oxidized by the skin alone.

Adult frogs spend most of their time in the water, but they must come to the surface to breathe. Toads once they leave the water do not return to it.—New York World.

Result of Sugar Shortage.

The sugar shortage has encouraged Louisiana planters to broaden the use of pure cane syrup, which is made from cane juice, without taking out any of its sugar. This juice is boiled to a point just below that required to crystallize it into sugar, and can be used not only for griddle cakes and candy making, but it is recommended by the planters, as a sweetening for coffee and tea. It is practically sugar in a liquid form, and on a basis of 8 cents a pound retail for granulated sugar will yield economies of 40 to 50 per cent, at a price of 4½ to 5 cents a pound for syrup.

ROMEO WAS CLAD IN KHAKI

Played the Popular Game, Choosing the Dinner Table to Work on Affections of Waitress.

It is natural that we should be eager to do whatever we can for the boys in khaki; but sometimes, when the patriotic zeal is not accompanied by a sympathetic imagination, the beneficiary may pray to be delivered from our friends, writes "An American Woman" in the Outlook.

A homesick lad is likely to want either an atmosphere like that of his own home or else the exotic flavor the expectation of which has helped him to undertake the great adventure so cheerily.

In one family among my neighbors the son of the house was scandalized when one of their guests at Sunday dinner made the perfectly simple and natural request that he be permitted after the meal to repair to the kitchen where the pretty waitress was. Permission was denied, but young Romeo was not discouraged, and this letter came "To the Girl That Waits for Mrs. So-and-So: You are the best ever. Are you keeping company with anybody?" He added his name and a few personal details, and this delicious bit of identification: "If you don't know which soldier wrote this, it is the one that touched your hand under the dish when you passed the potatoes."

Russia a Puzzle Even to Tolstoy.

"How can one understand chaos?" is the reply Count Ilya Tolstoy, son of the famous Leo Tolstoy, writer, philosopher and mystic, made to the question as to his interpretation of conditions in Europe.

If such a man as Count Tolstoy is at sea in regard to Russian affairs, it is surely pardonable for Americans to be in ignorance of them. The count says that the real Russia has not been consulted at all in the recent changes there. The real Russia is peasant Russia and peasant Russia has been ignored. The count pleads for American sympathy for his people, who, he says, have been deceived and misled. "The crime of all the Russian leaders," he says, "is that they have been following their own programs and ignoring the peasants, the masses." What will come out of the present chaos the count professes he does not know.

Long Loaves Are Most Economical.

A loaf weighing one pound contains 11 per cent of water if it is round and only 84 per cent if it is cylindrical. Therefore, she who buys long loaves gets 140 grammes more actual food for her money than she who buys round loaves.

The reason for this is that the sphere is the figure that contains the largest possible volume under the smallest possible surface, and, as evaporation is a matter of surface, this is greater from a cylinder than it is from a sphere of the same weight.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and sold by most druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:— Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

CROPS UNDER IRRIGATION FOR SOLDIERS.

IN Southern Alberta both irrigation and dry farming methods are practised with success. Under both methods crops are obtained which for yield and for quality compare favorably with those grown in any other part of the continent. Experience has shown, however, that where it is possible to practise both methods side by side invariably larger yields are obtained on irrigated land.

At the Canadian Government Experimental Farm at Lethbridge both irrigated and dry farming methods are followed. Each year tests are made with various crops on both dry and irrigated land in order to ascertain which crops are most suitable to local conditions. Last year six kinds of wheat were grown under irrigation, and fourteen kinds on non-irrigated lands. The wheat grown on the irrigated land gave an average yield of 49 bushels to the acre, that grown on non-irrigated land, 27 bushels to the acre. Huron wheat gave the highest yield under irrigation: 58 bushels to the acre, as against 27 bushels on non-irrigated land. The highest yield on non-irrigated lands was 31 bushels to the acre, this being the yield of "Bobs" wheat, a new kind, which was not tried under irrigation. Marquis yielded 28 bushels on non-irrigated land, compared with 48 bushels on irrigated land. Both these wheats are remarkably good yielders on dry land, and it should be said in fairness that last year was an exceptionally dry one in the Lethbridge district. Red Fife gave a yield of 57 bushels under irrigation and only 26 bushels on non-irrigated land. Another heavy yielder under irrigation was Pioneer wheat, which yielded 51 bushels to the acre, as compared with 25 bushels to the acre on non-irrigable land. The length of the straw and the yield of the straw per acre was also much greater in the crops grown on irrigable land than on those grown under dry farming methods.

Oats, barley, potatoes, beets and other crops also gave larger yields under irrigation. Five varieties of oats yielded an average of nearly 109 bushels to the acre under irrigation, while seven varieties which were grown on non-irrigable lands gave an average yield of 52 bushels to the acre. Danish Island was the largest yielder both on irrigable and non-irrigable land, 133 bushels to the acre being obtained on the former, and 60 bushels on the latter. Banner oats yielded 128 and 56 bushels per acre on irrigable and non-irrigable land respectively.

Eleven varieties of barley were grown. With this crop some varieties gave better yields on non-irrigable land. The highest yield was obtained with Swedish Cavalier, which gave 82 bushels under irrigation, and 49 bushels on non-irrigable land. Another well known variety, California, yielded 80 bushels to the acre under irrigation and 41 under dry farming methods.

Root crops do exceedingly well under irrigation. The yields of carrots at Lethbridge last year averaged nearly 20 tons to the acre. Four kinds of sugar beets averaged 13 tons to the acre, while the average yield of potatoes was nearly 500 bushels, or more than twice as high as on the adjoining dryland.

But the chief value of the irrigable lands of Southern Alberta does not lie in their capacity to produce large crops of grain and roots, important as this is. The suitability of these lands for raising large crops of fodder, to support large herds of all kinds of live stock is their greatest advantage. Already the Lethbridge district of Southern Alberta grows more alfalfa than any other parts of Canada.

It will be seen from the figures quoted that while very profitable crops are grown on non-irrigable land, even in a dry season, much better results are obtained where it is possible to get water on the land.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

TEDDY

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Mariana, in moments of patriotic fervor, thought of herself as braving the perils of the ocean and doing her bit in France, it was always as an ambulance driver, than as a trained nurse or an office worker. The reason was not far to seek. Mariana, ever since she gave up riding side saddle and equipped herself for a cross saddle, had been quite taken with her own appearance in breeches. When dressed her prettiest in filmy ruffles and entrancing furbelows for a dance Mariana hesitated before her pier glass long enough to see that she had been properly hooked up and that she had forgotten no necessary accessory, but when she was dressed in her riding togs she stood long and admiring before the mirror, studied with infinite satisfaction the straight line of her leather legging, the neat juncture of that legging with her tan boot, the immaculate trimness of her white pique stock, the severity of her plain sailor hat that hid almost all of her pretty curls and the well-tailored severity of the coat that extended from her slight shoulders to her knees. She did not admire the image because it was the reflection of a charming and graceful young girl, but because it looked to her for all the world like a young boy. For Mariana was at the age where the greatest compliment anyone might have paid her was to tell her that she was not feminine, that she thought like a boy and that she was free from any of the foibles of sex.

The very first day she met Dixon James he had been fortunate enough to pay her a compliment of this kind. He had ridden across the country with her brother and reached the Burden house just as she was mounting her own horse for a country ride. So Dixon and the brother remounted their horses and started out again with Mariana.

"You know, I have never enjoyed riding with a girl before so much as I have with you," he told her. "In fact, you don't seem like a girl. You're more like some awfully nice kid brother."

Mariana had treasured that compliment. It was worth more than a dozen of the usual sort, and ever since that day Mariana had grown more and more addicted to the boyish costume and more and more rebellious against skirts. She had never been convinced one way or the other on the suffrage question, but when she learned that some of the early suffragists had rebelled against skirts, she had declared herself a decided suffragist and rode with her fair hair streaming, in a coat of steel mail, to represent Joan of Arc at the next suffrage procession.

Then she bought a pair of housework overalls and went about her own bed room and little sitting room mornings dusting and putting things to rights in that costume. Her mother positively forbade her going out of her domain in the costume. Of course all her negligees were cut on pajama lines and, inconsistent as was it with her suffrage conventions, she fancied that she would like to be a Turkish woman because of the bloomers.

"I can do almost anything," she told her chum one day, "if I am not hampered with petticoats. I'm sure if I ever make a name for myself it will be in breeches—riding breeches or housework overalls, or something of that sort."

Then came the war and illustrated newspaper supplements were flooded with pictures of dairy girls in breeches, factory girls in overalls and street car conductors in suits like the soldier's uniform. Mariana felt devoutly thankful that she had lived in an age when she might wear trousers and not be booted like poor Amelia Bloomer and those other worthy pioneers in petticoat emancipation. The question was, just which line of emancipated occupation should she pursue. First she decided to be an ambulance driver, but the idea struck every one as absurd. Particularly did Dixon James plead with her to abandon this project.

"In the first place, they wouldn't have you," he told her. "You're only eighteen and you are too darned pretty. What do you know about mixing up with a lot of rowdy soldiers? They won't want girls like you—they want some big husky amazons that can give a hand to lifting stretchers and one that has nerves like iron. You say you couldn't stand being a nurse. Why, my dear child, you'd have to go through more horrors as an ambulance driver."

Finally she was dissuaded. But eventually her mind was made up. She read in some not distant city an appeal for street car conductors—the kind that wore leggings and knee-length coats and bloomers—and not the petticoat sort—she announced firmly that she considered it her duty to give her services as a conductor. She was going to release some man for service, she announced. Arguing against her was in vain, and after several family councils of war, it was decided to let her go her own sweet way. "It would usually be a family disgrace," her mother said to Dixon James one day, for of late Dixon was usually to be found somewhere about the Burden summer place. "It really would be a scandal to have one's daughter be a street car conductor usually, but nowadays girls are doing such odd things. Perhaps that is no worse than being an elevator girl, and one of the Van Dyckman girls—perfectly splendid family, you know—has just gone in for that."

However, Dixon James was not quite so resigned as was Mariana's mother. Mariana went ahead with her plans, and having applied for the position as conductor, resignedly waited the three weeks that were to elapse before her services would be needed. To make the time pass more pleasantly, Dixon got his mother to get up a house party at their country place, and Mariana packed her little trunk and rehearsed the new dance steps with considerable enthusiasm.

There was to be a little dance the first night of the party and Mariana was laying out her newest dancing frock and other accessories on her bed before dinner, when Dix's mother—an old-fashioned little gray-haired lady with a twinkle in her brown eyes—knocked at her door.

"Mariana, dear," she said, "I am asking you a favor that I don't think you'll mind granting. First, did you bring any riding togs?"

"Oh, yes, indeed—I brought two sets—Dix said there would be some riding. I'd love to let someone have either outfit."

"That is sweet of you, dear," said the older woman, "but that isn't the favor. You see, we are two men shy. There are seven girls and only five men—two of the men have just got their commissions and had to disappoint us. Girls do dreadfully hate to dance with girls, but I thought for a lark you'd be willing to play man. Dix says you make a wonderful boy. You understand—you wear your riding things and play man, will you?"

Mariana's enthusiasm was genuine, and willingly did she hang the pink ruffles and furbelows back in the wardrobe and don her most boyish riding suit.

"You can lead, can't you?" Dix asked her after dinner when they had cleared the floor for the little dance and Mariana admitted that she could. "It's awfully decent of you. I'll introduce you to the girls you don't know. We'll call you Teddy to make it seem natural."

Mariana had not at first realized that she was to play the role of Teddy for the entire house party, but she was, and so her dressing simplified itself to simply changing from one riding suit for day wear to the other for evening. In the meantime she danced only with girls and rode beside them and walked beside one of the other of them on all the little outings and really saw nothing of Dix or any of the other men.

After all the guests had retired one night Mariana knocked at the door of one of the girls—one she had been escorting on a moonlight stroll that evening. "If you have two dressing gowns, would you awfully mind lending me one? I've only got the pajama sort, and—well, I am getting tired wearing trousers. I want to be a girl—just in my own room." And the other girl laughingly handed Teddy her fluffiest, laciest pink chiffon negligee.

By the end of the five-days' house party Marian went home, only with difficulty concealing her grievance toward her hostess' son, Dix. Eventually, of course, the grievance made itself known to Dix and there was an explanation. Teddy was pouting a little and blinked back a tear. The other wouldn't blink back so "he" drew a filmy handkerchief from "his" breeches pocket and wiped it tenderly away.

"I'm not a bit jealous," Teddy began. "I don't mind at all that you have gone about with all the other girls and haven't even looked at me, but—well, I guess what makes me feel peeved is that I had such a pretty dance frock with pink ruffles and lace and everything made just for the party, and I haven't had it on once."

This was Dix's cue and he took it, and as he gathered the tearful little Teddy in his arms—they had met in the woods by chance when gathering sticks for a picnic fire—he explained his entire plot to her. Yes, he loved her distractedly, and had longed to be with her every minute. But he wanted to make her give up the idea of being a conductor—wanted to show her that sometimes there were advantages in being just a girl.

With Fingers! Corns Lift Off

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift any corn or callus right off. Try it!

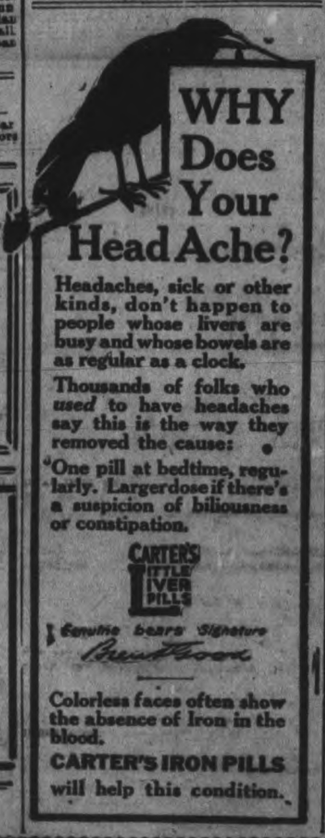
For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. Apply a few drops upon a tender, aching corn or callus and instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you lift it off with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also hardened calluses on bottom of feet, shrivel up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.



Soldier's Cobbler Kit.

Our soldier boys learn many things besides actual soldiering. When they return to their prosaic tasks after the war, there will be many a bank clerk, for instance, who will be eligible to join the cobblers' union. Of course there are shoe-repair stations all along the lines of battle, but so much depends upon the condition of his shoes and his consequent foot-comfort, that most of the boys carry a little cobblers' kit and make small repairs themselves. The kit consists primarily of a hollow handle, the top of which unscrews to disclose the awl, screwdriver, cobblers' tacks, and other essentials for repair work. At the opposite end of the device is a spool of waxed twine, which threads immediately into the awl when the awl is screwed into place. When some other tool, such as a screwdriver or knifeblade, is to be used, it is screwed into place instead of the awl. In addition to his shoes the soldier may mend his torn leggings and his saddle straps.

Couldn't Scare Beavers

So troublesome have beavers become to the farmers along the Walla Walla river that one rancher erected a beaver "scarecrow," which was effective the first night. On the second night the beavers cut down the scarecrow and used it in their dam.

German Crown Prince Has Only a Seven-mile Passage For the Withdrawal of His Troops.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, July 23.— Advances in local operations were scored by the British last night, to-day's War Office reports shows. The line was pushed forward slightly south of Hebuterne, on the front between Arras and Albert and south of Merris and Meteren, on the Flanders front. British positions were also improved in the Hamel sector and north of Albert. German artillery showed considerable activity with gas shells in the Villers-Bretonneux sector, east of Amiens.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, July 23.—Artillery activity along the battle front during the night is reported in the official statement issued by the War Office to-day. North of Montdidier, in the Somme sector, a local operation, brilliantly conducted, permitted the French to occupy the villages of Mailly-Raineval, Sauvillers and Aubvillers, taking 350 prisoners.

GENERAL RETIREMENT.

PARIS, July 23.— Fires burning in the rear of German lines at Soissons-Rheims salient may indicate a general retirement from that salient by the Germans.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, July 23—(12.30) — As result of the Allies bombardment from both sides of the Rheims-Soissons pocket, the German Crown Prince has only a seven mile passage for the withdrawal of his troops it was reported from the front today.

The width of salient on Fere En Tardenois line is about twenty five miles.

American troops are reported to have captured Buzancy (four miles south of Soissons and east of the Soissons - Chateau Thierry highway.)

The French simultaneously have taken Oulchy Le Chateau.

Making Progress.

Canadian Press.

LONDON, July 23.—Franco-American troops are continuing to make progress on battle front between Ourcq and Marne. Advices today are that the attacks carried out by the French have resored all ground they lost on Monday in the region of Grisolles, seven miles northwest of Chateau Thierry. Americans have taken the town of Jaulgonne on the Marne and so far three hundred prisoners.

French advices state they stormed the heights north of Courcelles at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, They are also holding the bend in the neighborhood of Chassons, as far as Treloup. These towns are just to the north of the Marne and to the east of Jaulgonne. Treloupe at latest advices was still in the hands of the enemy. The French crossed the Marne at Porta Binson just to the east of Reuil. The enemy counter attacked heavily from the direction of Vandieres, but these onslaughts were beaten off. The French at 8.15 this morning began a new attack in the region Northwest of Montdidier. The French have captured Oulchy Le Chateau.

On the front between the Marne and Rheims the British have captured Petitchamp Wood near Marfaux with two hundred prisoners and 14 machine guns.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WITH AMERICAN ARMY ON AISNE-MARNE, July 23.—(8:40 a.m.) —Over night information does not indicate any radical change in the Pershing and Gen. Petainareholding pects seemed to be that today would be another of heavy attacks and counter-attacks with not more than slight changes in line. Gen. Pershing and Gen. Petain are holding almost every inch of gronud they have gained since the counter blow began on Thursday. The number of prisoners has been increased by thousands and a veritable mountain of captured and abandoned material is in possession of the allies. Many of guns taken had been blown up or damage by enemy before he abandoned them.

Artillery Inactive.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 23. — The German artillery in the Rheims and Soissons regions is comparatively inactive, indicating a withdrawal of the guns, according to authoritative information received here to-day.

Enemy Using Up Reserves

Additional Important Gains Have Been Made By the Allies—An Enveloping Movement.

(By Webb Miller—United Press.)

PARIS, July 23.—(10.15 a.m.)—Oulchy Le Chateau, the dominating point on the line between Soissons and Chateau-Thierry is reported to have been captured by the Allies this morning.

Additional important gains are said to have been made in the Soissons region. General Mangin is tightening his grip on Mont De Paris, which commands the city of Soissons.

The Germans are fighting desperately to prevent the Allies trapping them in the Rheims-Soissons pocket. The best proof of their plight is that they are hurling divisions into the fight which have been borrowed from neighbouring armies, in an effort to ease Foch's grip.

Two Vital Points.

The Allies on both sides of the bulge are aiming at two vital points—Fere En Tardenois and Fismes. There are plenty of indications that the enemy is atttempting further withdrawals of men and materials before he is enveloped.

Airmen report Germans hurriedly preparing for the defence of Fismes indicating that the Boches are planning to retreat from the entire centre of this salient.

BELLEVILLE PARTY VISITS PETERBORO

Are Travelling Through the Completed Portion of the Trent

The competition for the silk pennant to be presented by the department to the first private launch which makes the head of the Lakes through the canal is being keenly competed for and this morning the "Kitchener" a splendid little 45 foot launch docked at George street wharf en route for the journey from Belleville to Orillia. The party consisting of Alfred Gillen, postmaster of Belleville; E. J. Porter, K.C. M.P.; J. E. Kerr, L. C. Allen, S. R. Burrows and B. L. Hymen who are making the trip registered at the Empress while in the city.

Mr. Gillen, who had learned from the Examiner that the Peterboro postmen had gone on strike said trat was the only inharmonious note to his trip and it caused him considerable anxiety as to whether his men at Belleville had done likewise. All the party reported a splendid voyage so far and spoke in glowing terms of the work of Charles Foulds of Hastings who had navigated the boat as far as Peterboro. They claim their cargo is of an order which would pass censor of an excise officer. The party have with them their own chef.

ANOTHER OFFENSIVE

British Front May Be the Scene of the Next Storm Centre—Huge Concentrations.

PLANS PERFECTED

(United Press.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 23.—The situation on the British front is one of prepared waiting. It is an open secret that Crown Prince Rupprecht's plans were perfected weeks ago for a drive against the British. Everything is ready, including great masses of storm troops, huge concentrations of artillery of all calibres and airdromes crowded with flying craft.

Rupprecht is simply waiting for the High Command's cue, which doubtless will depend on events on the German Crown Prince's front. It is believed that Rupprecht actually has set the date several times. The last was timed to follow the expected success in the Chammpagne region, but he was forced to put it off again. His group of armies, however, is still intact, his reserves being only slightly cut down by Friedrich Wilhelm's demands.

Recent Events.

It is absolutely certain that recent events have so lessened the confidence of both army and folks at home in Hindenburg and Ludendorff that some dazzling stroke is urgently needed in the quickest possible time, but with barely ordinary luck the allies henceforth should be able to give something of their own trend of developments. Without going into figures, the allies to-day have, in strategic positions, as many or more troops than the Germans. Barring accidents, it is merely a question of the best way to attack them.

Stiff Resistance.

Americans have captured Buzaner, south of Soissons. At eleven this morning the French in their Montdidier attack, had advanced one mile on a four mile front. The Germans are offering stubborn and well organized resistance at different points at which the French are crossing the River Marne.

The Germans are stiffening their resistance between the Aisne and the Ourcq rivers and are bringing up guns.

LINDSAY MAN SAID TO HAVE NEGLECTED TO REPORT COLLISION

After colliding with Jopling & Sons' car as it was backing out of their yard on Water street on Saturday night, a big touring automobile neglected to stop, and kept on driving as if nothing had happened. Although damaged considerably, the local Ford car trailed the stranger down Water street, ascertained its number and reported it to the police. By this means the ownership of the offending car has been traced to Mr. Walter Curtis of Lindsay. It was stated at the police court this morning that a summons was being issued against Mr. Curtis charging him with a breach of the Motor Vehicle Act in that he failed to stop and to report the accident to the authorities.

What the Postmen Ask For.

Minimum wage—$1,000 per annum.

Maximum wage—$1,400 per annum.

Or a Board of Conciliation to consider the demands of the men.

What the Postmen Receive.

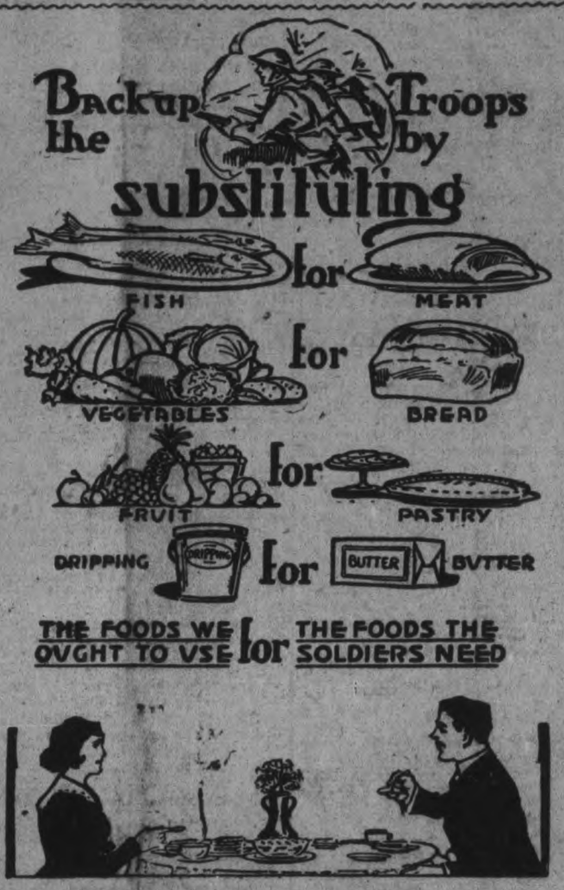
From this amount five per cent. is deducted for the retirement fund and one per cent. for the Patriotic fund.

Temporary employees receive $2.50 per day, but if they receive an appointment to the permanent staff, their wages are reduced to the minimum of $2.00 per day.

What Government Offers.

Will pay additional war bonus of $150 to married men and single men with dependents, but do not mention the other single men or the temporary men.



The Peterboro Letter Carriers Went on Strike This Morning

Twenty Men Hung Up Their Mail Bags—The Strike is Spreading—Mayor Duncan Wires Ottawa—What the Men Are After.

MEETING HELD THIS AFTERNOON

A PUBLIC MEETING.

Following Mr. J. H. Burnham's suggestion this afternoon, Mayor Duncan will call a public meeting to-morrow night at which the postmen's strike and its causes will be fully discussed and a resolution sent to Ottawa.

The patience of the postmen reached the end of its tether this morning, when the twenty outside letter carriers hung up their mail bags until the increased salaries they have demanded are put into effect, or definitely promised.

Unless there is an immediate response from the government, the inside clerks will walk out, stripping the office of practically everybody but the postmaster and the caretaker.

There are twenty inside clerks, and it is understood that they are ready to follow the carriers as has been done elsewhere in some other cities.

The men ask for a minimum of $1,000 a year, and maximum of $1,400; or a Board of Conciliation to consider their petition. The minimum wage at present is $2 a day, or $624 a year, and the maximum is $3 a day or $936 a year, plus a war bonus of $100.

The men also demand that temporary employees shall be paid on the same basis as that enjoyed by the regular carriers.

The government offers an additional war bonus of $150, but there is some doubt surrounding this offer.

BACK TO OLD TIMES.

The general delivery wicket made the acquaintance of citizens this morning whom it had never seen before. Business men, professional men and others, crowded into the public room and hived about the wickets, while the clerks inside toiled and sweated in an effort to distribute the mail by this old reliable but antiquated method.

IN OTHER PLACES.

(Canadian Press.)

Montreal, July 23.—The Montreal letter carriers will strike at 6 o'clock to-night unless there is a settlement of their grievances arising out of nonpayment of the war bonus voted by Parliament.

Toronto, July 23. — Letter carriers' strike is extending gradually to other branches of the service. No only is there no delivery but very little mail is being distributed to the crowds gathered at the post office.

Brantford, July 23. — Officers of the local letter carriers' association stated to-day that they expected to take action regarding a strike within ten hours following receipt of word from outside.

This Afternoon's Meeting.

At a meeting in the I.O.O.F. club room this afternoon, where the men have secured convenient and commodious headquarters, the men stated and explained their grievances to Mr. Burnham. Mayor Duncan was also present.

Speaking for the men, Mr. Robert Reid stated that the strike was not a sympathetic one. The local men were affected just the same as in Toronto and throughout the rest of Canada.

"We are out for a living wage," Mr. Reid stated. "We hold that it is unfair of the government to ask any labouring man to work for such salaries as we get, when the government itself admits that the cost of living is steadily increasing."

"It's gone up 150 per cent. since the war started," Mr. Burnham commented, and pointed out that the men's wages while ranging from $2 to $3 a day, were in their buying power greatly less than that."

"We are not paid labouring men's pay," Mr. Reid said. Other members said that the lowest wage paid labourers in Peterborough was 35 cents an hour or $3.15.

I have been told that 40 cents an hour is a general wage to labourer's," Mayor Duncan said.

"None of our men are getting more than $2.85 a day plus the bonus of 32 cents, because five per cent. is taken off salaries for the retirement fund."

Thus the first year man gets $2 less 5 per cent, and the bonus of 32 cents. The men receive a yearly increase of 25 cents a day and in the 4th year get $3.00 less 5 per cent., plus the bonus or $2.85 plus 32 cents or $3.17; and this is the present maximum wage.

This afternoon's discussion brought out clearly that the men have a grievance that demands immediate and sympathetic consideration.

There are for instance three men in the post office who have been working over four years and they are receiving only $2.28 a day as the result of some whipsawing from which they suffered.

Another man an ex-machinist who left his bench because he could not stand the work, has been four years a postman and is getting only $3 a day. He could earn nearly double that or more at his old employment.

To Mr. Burnham, the men said they worked on an average of 8½ hours a day and were being paid a rate lower than the labourers.

DESTROYING VILLAGES

Germans Are Making Frantic Efforts to Avoid Being Cornered By the Allies:

PRISONERS TAKEN

(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, July 24.—The German retreat northward from the Marne was being carried out last night by the light of burning villages —the torches of Prussian militarism. The sky was illuminated from horizon to horizon by blazing towns and ammunition dumps as the enemy continued his retirement toward the Vesle River. Allied aviators reported great congestion on the roads below Bazoches on the Vesle. The Germans are fighting a heavy rearguard action and are holding desperately on the flanks to prevent being squeezed in a great pocket by the French and Americans advancing north of Chateau Thierry, and French, Italians and British advancing north of the Marne and between the river and Rheims.

Communications Difficult.

Communications below Bazoches are difficult even under normal conditions as they consist mostly of winding by-roads. Their disrepair is greater through having been fought over so recently. Bombing planes and long-range cannon are adding to Boches troubles there. The number of prisoners is steadily increasing. When they are all counted it probably will be found that one army alone has captured nearly as many as the total of the present official estimates. (The latest official statement regarding prisoners was made in Sunday's Paris communique, when it was announced that more than 20,000 had been taken and more than 400 guns captured.) It is established that the Germans have already used sixty divisions (720,000) men.

CONTINUING THE ATTACKS

Foch is Taking No Chances—Hindenburg's Supply System is Working Overtime.

DANGER OF DISASTER

(United Press Service.)

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, July 23. — General Foch is still continuing his attacks along the Aisne-Marne salient warily, giving Von Hindenburg no chance to catch the Franco-American troops in a position in which they might be trapped by a sudden and reckless expenditure of German man-power. The present engagement cannot be judged as if it were a major offensive. It is therefore perfectly in accord with the ever technical consideration for General Foch to conserve his own armies in the face of the continual arrival of fresh German reserves south of the Aisne. The interruption of Von Hindenburg's supply system is exerting inexorable pressure upon the Germans. This work, however, is slow. The same result could be accomplished more rapidly by uninterrupted French and American attacks. These assaults, however, would certainly cause very heavy Allied casualties, which is contrary to General Foch's present principles.

Strategic Plans.

Von Hindenburg's strategic plans for further offensives have been completely demoralized by the French and Americans during the last six days. This is a sufficient result for the immediate future. It is certain that Von Hindenburg cannot remain on his present line for an indefinite period. He must move still farther north toward the Aisne. If he does not do so his lines of communication will grow increasingly precarious and the danger of disaster will continue. There is cause for satisfaction among the Allies that General Foch has again demonstrated his absolute sell-mastery by slowing the American and French assaults at this time. General Foch may have been influenc- training an offensive fighter. Defensive warfare is abhorrent to him. A leader with this characteristic, but with less far-seeing wisdom than General Foch may rave been influenced by the near success of the Marne fighting to become deeply involved. General Foch knows how to wait. That is the best assurance of the final success of the Allies' cause.

SWORN TO AND GUARANTEED

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, JULY 23RD, 1918.

A COMPLETE FAILURE.

Beyond the casualties inflicted upon the enemy, the recapture from him of ground for which he had to pay a heavy price, the successful battle which the French and American troops have been waging against Hindenburg's masses is valuable because of the effect it will have not only on the morale of the Germans at large but on the morale of the army as well. German soldiers were told that the offensive which commenced over a week ago was a battle for peace. They were led to believe, it is evident that their task would be an easy one and after a huge German victory there would be an end to the slaughter. But the victory failed to materialize, thanks to the shrewd tactics of General Foch and the remarkable fighting qualities of the French and American troops. Not only have the Germans failed to achieve a single one of the principal objectives in the drive but they have lost part of the ground they gained in the earlier offensives. From the German standpoint "Der Friederaturm" has been a complete and collapsal failure.

THE STRIKE SITUATION.

That the Government is responsible for much of the present troubled labour situation because it has allowed the cost of living to get beyond bounds, is the theory of the local Federal member as expressed in a speech to the letter carriers to-day. "Unless our administrators keep faith with employees, and unless the rate of living is kept within bounds, how can the rate of pay be kept within bounds?" is the question he asked.

On the other hand the abnormal wages paid to men in some lines of work have undoubtedly much to do with the high prices. Knowing that some workmen have been getting $9 aid $10 a day on munition work, it has been the practice of some people to charge all the traffic will bear, ignoring the fact that all workers are not munition workers and that the clerks, office staffs and employees engaged in similar work have practically remained stationary so far as wages are concerned. The extraordinary pay given to men engaged on munitions, allowing them to indulge in motor cars and other luxuries, has been a big factor, not only in raising prices, but in making dissatisfaction among other employees.

Be that as it may, however, the Government in its dealing with its own employees, the letter carriers, has been distinguished neither by common sense, or by any evidence of a spirit of justice or fair dealing. The men have been kept in a state of uncertainty for many months, until at last they have been forced to drop their work in protest at the dilly-dallying of the Government. The demand of the men for a minimum salary of $1,000, and a maximum of $1,400, with the alternative of a Board of Conciliation to deal with the matter, was a reasonable one, and at all events there has been no justification for the policy of delay that has characterized the Ottawa authorities.

The situation that has arisen among the letter carriers is just another evidence of the fact that the sooner the touring members of the Dominion Cabinet get home the better. There is need of a government at Ottawa.

The Canadian editors having reached Paris, the French Canadian portion of the party will now be the men of the hour.

ARBITRATION ADVISED.

Newspaper advertising, which has played a prominent part in Canada's war effort, in encouraging enlistments, in making the Victory Loan a success, in raising the Patriotic Fund, and in the giving of the necessary publicity to the Military Service Act is again being called upon for service—this time by the Imperial Munition Board, which is using the advertising columns of the press to deliver a message to those associated in the manufacture of munitions. In a most striking display advertisement the Board gives the story of what Canada has accomplished in munition making. It will be a surprise to many Canadians that last year Canada produced 55 per cent. of all the shrapnel, 42 per cent. of all the 4.5's, and 27 per cent. of the 6 inch shells used by the British army. "This is a proud achievement," the advertisement remarks and the figures are indeed remarkable.

The Munition Board's purpose, however, is not only to give publicity to the record achieved by this country, but to prevent, if possible, that record from being interfered with during the present year. The pace set last year can only be maintained as the Board points out, if there is "uninterrupted co-operation between employer and employee." The message that the advertisement carries to the manufacturer and the employee alike is, "arbitrate." The Board recognizes that there are bound to be differences over the matter of wages and hours, grievances of some kind or another are bound to crop up and require adjustment, but no such differences or grievances should be allowed to interfere with the output of munitions. The troubles should be referred to independent judgment and both parties should be satisfied with the decision arrived at. Nothing must be allowed to prevent Canada's production of munitions to fall below last year's mark.

FOOLING THE HUNS.

It will take a lot of articles such as the one published below from the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger, to convince the German people that they have nothing to fear from America. For many months the German press has been feeding its readers such rubbish as this, probably at the instigation of the Gemran high command, anxious to keep from the people of knowledge of the real situation.

Here is the sort of thing the Germans are being told, taken from a Berlin newspaper:

"If they have any sense left in the Entente capitals, they must see that all prospect of America saving the situation hos disappeared. We are far from wishing to underestimate America's splendid human material. Anyone who knew the Americans in the Boxer war must have been pleased with their tall, sinewy men, but must have recognized at first glimpse that these troops knew little of military discipline. A strongly developed spirit of independence makes an undisciplined crowd of soldiers.

"The American soldier fights or marches if he wants to do so, otherwise not. . . . These fellows were smart, but each one was for himself."

The paper says that even Roosevelt was convinced of this and said that American troops could only be compared with militia. After America's entrance into the war only 400,000 volunteered, the article goes on to say that compulsory service was necessary, thus the new army has not the desire to fight like the old army, says the paper, "and what is this army to replace? Ten million Russian soldiers fully equipped and from a nation born and bred in militarism. Even if America makes up the deficiency in numbers it is impossible to give them the same training as the Russians."

The paper says that America has not even the same advantages as Poland for training an army, and that, anyway, the American army cannot be considered as a factor in the enemy ranks until 1920 at the earliest, and then only if transports and American armament industries came up to the standards of the old military nations. It is alleged that the U-boats will prevent this possibility.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

With the letter carriers off the job Peterboro is back to the old days when everybody met at the post office.

"The object which the forcing of the Marne had in view was attained. Therefore it did not appear dangerout to retreat locally in order to save unnecessary losses" says a German paper. Unless the object was to see how many Huns would be killed it is hard to conjecture what the German writer is talking about.

First the Americans could not get across the sea; then they could not fight when they got over. Wonder how the Germans will explain the work of General Pershing's men in the present great battle?

The Crown Prince seems to be one of the hardest workers for the success of the allies. His "storm of peace" drive has been a success for everyone but the Germans.

The Austrians are said to be preparing for another offensive. Well here's hoping they have the same luck as on their last excursion across the Piave.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

On good farms, there are good crops. On poor farms, there are poor crops. What would you have?

The big fish story will have to take second place this summer to the big potato story.

From garbage heaps, to gardens neat is the history of many a back yard this summer. May they never turn back.

The question of the hour. Are you using your new potatoes yet?

If it were only Lent now. We could deny ourselves raspberries at thirty-five per box.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

To Be Hoped.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

Latest information makes it unlikely for the railroad men to go out this week. Possibly, by that time, their better sense and patriotism will induce them not to strike at all.

The Real Effect.

(New York World.)

The Anticonscription Conference in Dublin, which appeals to President Wilson to make the world safe for Ireland, seems to be confused as to the meaning of its language. What it is trying to do is to make Ireland safe for the Germans.

Germany's Industrial Downfall.

(Kansas City Times.)

Mr. Hurley tells us that Albert Ballin, the great German shipping master, creator of Germany's merchant marine, whose flag was on every sea before the war, is a broken man. He was opposed to the war, for he saw that nothing the war lords promised could possibly compensate Germany for the loss of her overseas trade, which was inevitable. What Ballin predicted has come to pass. To-day Germany doesn't float a merchant ship on any sea. Her ports are closed, her industries, except for war, at a standstill and every overseas country, which formerly took her exports and from which she received her raw materials either is at war with her or has severed all relations.

Going Too Far.

(Kingston Whig.)

This war time economy business is being carried a little to far. It was all right to put a ban on women's high top shoes, but when we are warned that the linen collar is in danger, that we must give up some of our pockets and that even skirt tails are to be shortened—we raise our voice in protest.

An Editor's Opulence.

(Dunburn, Sask., Enterprise.)

We are glad to state that since our coming to Dundurn, we have been able to be an exception to the rule, in the tradition of printers, and have had a bank account with a little credit balance most of the time. New Year's that balance to our credit in the Northern Bank was 35 cents. We do not wish to boast, but merely show our friends and patrons that we are, financially speaking, a sound institution and assure them that when they deposit a dollar with us they may rest contented that it is in safe hands. We pay interest 52 times a year; let us have your deposit.

Cause of Quarrel.

(Detroit Free Press.)

We have a quarrel with the German people, and so long as they stand for the things the kaiser and his gang are doing we'll continue to have.

The Proper Course.

(Kansas City Star.)

While the allies are hesitating over what course to pursue in Russia, the Czecho-Slovak force seem to have decided to pursue the Bolchevist army.

Ridiculous Claim.

(Hamilton Herald.)

A correspondent of The Rotarian writing from the front, says that the ranks of the Canadian divisions are full of Americans, and that they are also very numerous in the British ranks; also that when any particularly dangerous work has to be done requiring unusual skill, courage and coolness, the Americans are certain to be selected for it. Of the four hundred and odd thousand soldiers who have gone overseas as members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, about 8,000 were Americans. That is 2 per cent. of the total. Therefore it can hardly be true that the Canadian divisions are full of Americans. The reliability of the correspondent's other statements can be judged from the character of the first one.

German Losses.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, July 23. — "L'Homme Libre," Premier Clemenceau's newspaper, says the German losses since March 22 are approaching one million men.

Jaulgonne Captured.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 23.—The Americans have captured Jaulgonne (on the north bank of the Marne) and are continuing their advance, it was learned authoritatively this afternoon. They took three hundred prisoners. A German counter attack at Vandiers (ten miles east of Jaulgonne) was repulsed. The French hold the entire Marne bend from Chassines to Preloup. Between the Aisne and the Oure, Franco-American troops are progressing. The French are reported to have regained all ground they lost yesterday at Grisoltes.

Along the Marne valley the French are experiencing difficulty in crossing near Vermuil, owing to artillery and machine gun fire. They crossed at Port a Binson late yesterday.

Munitions Workers

By two things we rise to the pinnacle of effort: one is love and the other is patriotism, which is love of country.

Experience shows that the keen, enduring munitions workers are those who have been scorched by the flame of war's sacrifice.

Mothers, wives, sweethearts and sisters, whose men are "over there" work with tireless energy. Fathers and brothers whose flesh and blood has enriched the fields of battle put eternal spirit and enthusiasm into their labour.

What we need is that same spirit in every worker.

You who have felt the bitterness of sacrifice; you who know the loneliness of waiting for a loved one's return,—you must inspire your fellow-workers by precept and example.

Children Prayed For Foch's Success

Thousands in France and England Received Word From Priests

VICTORY CAME QUICK.

The General's "Intentions" Taken to Refer to His Counter-Drive.

LONDON, July 22.— Gen. Foch is not only a scientific soldier and a keen analyst, but is a devout Catholic with a touch of the mystic. History may ask in vain whether the great strategist ascribes the German breakdown and his great victory between the Aisne and the Marne more to his own plans and his dispositions and the valour of troops, or to prayers offered by scores of thousands of young girls in France and England, who have scarcely heard his name or comprehended the war.

Last Sunday a mysterious message was whispered by the priests in thousands of parishes to the girl communicants under their charge. They were asked: "Pray for the intentions of Gen. Foch."

Without understanding the meaning of the message any more than did the priests who gave it to them, the children prayed, and one of the great defensive successes of the war was quickly followed by a brilliant attack. There is no direct confirmation of the natural inference that Gen. Foch himself asked the prayer of the children, but no other explanation seems to fit the facts.

The use of the word "intentions," which seems to have been universal in the message given to the children, now is seen to refer to the secretly planned Franco-American offensive. Had Gen. Foch only desired prayers that the German offensive might be stopped, he hardly would have used this word.

STRATFORD WOMAN TO STAND TRIAL FOR CONCEALING BROTHER

Deserter Was in Hiding in Barn and Got Meals There.

STRATFORD, July 23. — On a charge of concealing a deserter, knowing him to be such, Mrs. Harry Deitrick, South Easthope, was committed for trial by Police Magistrate Makins Saturday. The principal witness was Pte. Adam Hartmann, brother of the accused, who admitted deserting. His story difficulty, the apparent desire on his part being to retain any information which might involve his sister. Sergt. Wray of London and Constable Feick of Tavistock also gave evidence.

Hartmann, it appears, had been a machinist in Galt. He applied for exemption, was refused and ordered to report on January 5 of this year. He said an accident prevented him doing so, and this was conveyed to the authorities in a letter by his sister. He was arrested by the authorities at Kitchener later and taken to London, where he signed attestation papers. He was given a uniform subsequently. On April 11 he deserted. On June 7 he was arrested at the home of his sister by Sergt. Wray of London.

When Crown-Attorney McPherson questioned the witness about the disposal of his military clothes, there was great reluctance in answering. On one occasion he replied, "I am not answering the question." Finally, however, he said that he had changed his clothes at his brother's in New Hamburg, but his brother did not see him. Later he went to Mrs. Deitrick's home in South Easthope, dressed in civilian clothes. During the time he was there he slept most of the time in the barn, though he had most of his meals in the house.

"Did you have a house in the hay mow?" asked the crown, to which the witness replied in the affirmative. He said he was hiding from the military police and admitted that he and his sister had conversation about the matter. Mr. Deitrick had never objected to his being there.

Sergt. Wray of London told of arresting Hartmann at Mrs. Deitrick's on June 7. He had been working in the fields with another man. Wray said that Hartmann admitted deserting. Mrs. Deitrick, he said, did not seem to realize her position and the seriousness of the charge which might be laid against her.

Constable Feick Coroborated the evidence of the previous witness.

MUST ADMIT GUILT, SAYS DR. MUEHLON

ONLY SO CAN GERMANY SAVE HERSELF FROM DESTRUCTION

LONDON, July 23.—A despatch to the Chronicle from Stockholm under date of Friday says that Dr. Wilhelm Muehlon, former director of the Krupps works, known already for his striking revelations about German war preparations in the Summer of 1914, has contributed another very significant article to the German paper Friendenswarte.

"On Germany lies the greatest blame not only for starting this war, but also for the way it has been conducted. There can be no two opinions about that, and only by admitting her guilt can Germany again bring order out of the present chaos which threatens to lead her to destruction."

The writer maintains throughout his articles that this can only be brought about by a general awakening of the nation, as those who went to wage war are dependent on the individual and not he on them.

LONDON, July 22. — The busiest man in England has been found at Tockenham, where Rev. W. Hewlet Cooper, rector of the parish, has asked exemption from military duty for George Davis, whom he says is his manservant, sexton, gardener, school cleaner and grave digger. Although Cooper said he couldn't get along without Davis, the exemption was not granted.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Housing Problem in Peterboro Is Discussed at Public Meeting

Mr. Norman McEachern, of Toronto, Was the Principal Speaker—Only Twenty-two Uninhabited Houses in Peterboro—Should be Ten Per Cent. to Provide Fair Competition.

"More houses," was the slogan of the public meeting held last night in the Assembly Hall at the Public Library. Some of the leading men of commercial, industrial and professional life, were present to listen to Mr. Norman McEachern, a specialist in housing. The chairman of the evening was Mr. J. J. Turner, president of the Board of Trade.

Mr. McEachern said that the question was no doubt serious and they would have to deal with it as business men. The house shortage is not made from war conditions altogether. It existed before the war. There is a great excess of deaths over births, and I have been told that very few houses in proportion to the increase in population have been built here in the last five years. We all know that Canada is a Mecca for American immigration. All nations have come to realize that man is a very important thing for a nation to have, and if a man is to have good physique and be healthy, he must have healthy, comfortable and adequate surroundings. The nations of the world to-day acknowledge the fact that we must have better housing facilities. Sanitary conditions in the United Kingdom and on the continent, are in general, bad, but in this country they are much better.

UNFIT FOR HABITATION.

In Toronto houses are demolished every day because they are unfit for human habitation. Some of them the Department of Agriculture would not allow an animal to live in. Our firm estimates that ten per cent. of the houses in a city should be empty all the time in order to insure rent and buying competition, and I do not think that twenty-two houses (for I am told that is the number uninhabited in the city at present) is ten per cent. of the houses of Peterboro.

England has been working on better housing conditions for 15 years and has now built whole cities of houses.

The United States has recently appropriated six million dollars for the erection of workingmen's houses but nothing has been done here in Canada.

Transportation has done something in this country to retard the erection of new houses. I know that the street car company of Toronto has not laid an additional mile of track in the seventeen years that they have had the charter, yet the city has increased from 200,000 to 525,000 in that time.

APARTMENT HOUSES.

The Toronto City Council had advised that apartment houses be built in the centre of the city. That does not promote the family and independent spirit which is really indispensable in a good citizen. It is estimated that Toronto grows at the rate of 24,000 people a year, and yet only 900 houses are built in these 365 days for that increase in population. I do not know, but it is likely that Peterboro is in the same condition. I know that the city of Welland is.

When the war is over nearly 200,000 Ontario soldiers will be returning — many with newly acquired wives. Where can they live? They might cross the border and be lost to Canada.

SHOULD BE OWNERS.

Sufficient houses should not only be forthcoming but they should be occupied by owners, not tenants.

A man should no more rent a house than rent the suit of clothes that is on his back. I would suggest that the muncipality be given powers to suspend taxes on workingmen's houses for a period of four to five years. A commission has been appointed by the Provincail government to investigate housing conditions, and twenty-five different types of workingmen's cottages were laid before them.

A THOUSAND HOUSES.

We have built a thousand houses in the last seven years in Toronto, and we don't own a single one of them now. On our easy terms system any man may own a house. The houses are small but with every convenience, running water, bath room, a cellar and a good furnace, for prices ranging from $1200 to $1700, and we don't ask them to pay from 25 to 30 per cent. cash either. In that period of seven years only one house has reverted to us through the failure of the tenant to pay his instalments.

To show the workingman what he is getting, for the average man can not read a blue print, and a woman can not tell of the space for her furniture by walking through it we furnished one of these houses complete, furniture and good colour schemes, and as a result sold over 100 houses. We build our houses different, different colours and tints, shapes, etc. We don't make them all the same, so that you can tell your own house after dark.

A DISCUSSION.

The chairman opened the meeting for discussion, and the speaker of the evening was under a cross fire of questions from those present.

Mayor Duncan thought that conditions were not abnormal in Peterboro like they were in some other parts of the province, and did not favour wholesale house building.

Ald. Dobbn, Mr. W. R. Breyfogle, and Mr. E. A. Peck agreed that something must be done. We ask new industries to locate here, but our housing problem is no inducement. Mr. Dobbin did not think that much of a house could be built for $1700, however.

It was moved by Ald. Dobbin and seconded by Mr. E. A. Peck that Mr. J. J. Turner name a committee to look into the question.

COULD NOT SLEEP.

Miss Gertrude Pratt, Wolseley St., Barrie, Ont., writes: "I was very much run down and could not sleep either day or night, and my arms and legs ached so that life was very miserable. After using six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I feel well and strong again."

44 INDUSTRIES UNITE IN CAMPAIGN FOR FOREIGN TRADE

$100,000,000 Represented in Mill Owners Drive for South American Business.

NEW YORK, July 23. — For the first time in history, American manufacturers have formed a combination to develop foreign trade, according to an announcement in New York last night by the Allied Industries Corporation. Forty-four mill owners, whose domestic sales aggregate annually $100,000,000, have given authority to the corporation, its statement said, to send agents to Central and South America, Cuba, Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic, the Philippines and the Straits Settlements, to introduce their goods.

The combination was effected under authority of the recently enacted Webb-Pomerene law, which allows manufacturers to join forces for the purpose of opening foreign markets to American trade.

In addition to "pushing" American goods abroad, the corporation asserted, the plan contemplates a reciprocal encouragement of foreign trade activities here, particularly for Central and South American products. A permanent exposition, already established in this city, will exploit American manufactured articles intended for export and foreign articles seeking import.

Firms so far allied with the corporation include makers of textile goods, heating and lighting systems, chemicals, leather and rubber articles and toys. In their behalf agents will start late this month for the regions mention, with authority to extend long credits.

ANOTHER GARIBALDI ADDS FAME TO NAME

WASHINGTON, July 23.—In the brilliant fighting of the Italians in the defence of Rheims, a brigade commanded by General Peppino Garbaldi, of the famous family of that name, particularly distinguished itself, says an official despatch to-day from Rome. General Morrone commands the Italian troops fighting with the French in the Rheims salient.

Anarchy Reigns In Polish State

Nothing Being Done to Relieve Suffering, Reuter's Learns.

COUNTRY DEVASTATED

Criminals Being Released from Prisons Owing to Lack of Food.

LONDON, July 23.—Reuter learns from a Polish source that at a recent meeting of the Council of State at Warsaw the representative of the Inter-Party Club, which is the real exponent of public opinion in Poland, and which comprises three-fourths of the elected members of the council, declared that the Council of State does not represent the Polish nation. He proceeded: "At a moment when the whole world resognizes the Polish question as an international one, the political aspirations of the Poles as just and their realization as a necessary condition of a new world based on justice and liberty—at this moment on Polish territory nothing is done by Governments of powers which are able to carry out their promises to prove that they have any real intention of reconstructing the Polish State."

He emphasized the fact that the present condition of life in Poland makes it impossible to carry on peaceful legislative work.

"The country is devastated and reduced to misery," he asserted, "this produces anarchy and the Government has no means of maintaining order or of alleviating the misery, which is increasing to a terrible degree. To this must be added, the sufferings of thousands of Polish prisoners of war, of those who were forced to emigrate to Russia and cannot return the fate of the Polish army corps in Russia and the Polish contingents now interned and under trial."

Reuter also learns that at Cracow it was admitted at the last meeting of the municipal council that owing to the food shortage criminals had to be released from prison and that at the end of the week all prisoners would for this reason have to be set at liberty. Anarchy is rampant, and burglaries and thefts are increasing in such terrifying fashion that mutual protection of property and wounded will have to organized.

Members of Choir Discarded Coats

Pastor of French Baptist Church had No Objection.

Ottawa, July 22.—"Coolness is next to godliness!"

At least that is the motto said to have been adopted by the mere male members of the choir of the French Baptist church, corner of King Edward avenue and Clarence streets, just before the evening service on Sunday.

A delegation from the choir appeared before Rev. G. R. MacFaul, pastor of the church, on Sunday evening, and asked his permission to appear in the choir without their coats as they considered it altogether too warm to try to sing while encumbered by a hot, heavy, though supposedly "correct" coat.

"And Mr. MacFaul did not actually say no," said a member of the choir to the Journal to-day, "so we all marched into our places minus our coats. We didn't know what he would say, and were a little nervous. When he saw us he turned to the congregation and said:

"If any of the gentlemen in this congregation are too warm this evening, you see what you may do. Our choir has taken the lead."

"And, believe me,'" continued the chorister, "we won't wear coats next Sunday evening either if it is as hot and sultry as it was yesteray."

BUY HOMES BY CO-OPERATION

GUELPH CITIZENS POOLING RESOURCES TO SOLVE HOUSING PROBLEM.

Thirty-one Guelph citizens have undertaken to help solve the housing problem in that city. They may formed the Guelph Homebuilders' Association, which is simply a co-operative scheme by which each one of the men holds himself responsible for the building of a home for some working man. Prof. C. B. Sissons of the Organization of Resources Committee visited Guelph last week to learn more particulars of the scheme.

Each man will supervise the building of his own house, but the materials will be secured at a low price, because of the quantity required. Lots are obtained in different parts of the city, some by purchase and some as gifts. The cost of all the lots is pooled and the working man will not likely have to pay more than $100 for the land. The houses will be sold at $100 down and the balance spread in payments over a ten-year period. The money is being advanced, up to 75 per cent. of the value of the house, through Mr. C. L. Dunbar, a barrister of the city.

EPPING FOREST FOXES DESTROYED.

In order to get rid of foxes levying toll on poultry around Epping forest, it was suggested at a recent meeting of the London City Corporation that the Volunteers should be called on to shoot them. It was reported that a number of foxes had been destroyed and that cubs in their earths had been closed up. So far only one complaint had been made concerning them.

Food Board Flashes

A short time ago it seemed as if wild stories about Food Controllers indulging in four dollar meals and high officials feasting while poor people famished had died a natural death. But enemy propaganda is an insidious influence in the community. It is a hydra-headed monster ever ready to rear itself in some new form.

It has suddenly appeared in virulent shape at the Capital where a woman of Teutonic origin has been spreading strange accounts of a reception given to the Blue Devils and attended by Cabinet Ministers, their wives and other prominent people. She alleges that fine cakes with the most expensive icings were supplied in abundance and that not only the soldiers but civilians helped themselves liberally from plates stacked high with cake. They are also supposed to have had lavish helpings of ice-cream.

From the same source comes the tale that a Lutheran Minister's wife was fined $5 and $2 costs when she so far forgot herself as to serve some diminutive ham sandwiches. This she claimed to be prejudice against the alien.

Both stories have been proved to be absolutely false. Similar tales have been circulating in the States. Watch out for them. They are not peculiar to Ottawa or to any one city, town or village. Help to squelch them wherever they crop up. Ten chances to one, they originate from enemy sources.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC SCHEME CAUSE OF DIFFICULTY

LONDON, July 23.—The Times, again referring to the default on the debentures of the City of Prince Albert, Sask., says it has received a copy of the report by the City Commissioner of Saskatoon on the finances and administration of Prince Albert which shows an important cause of the city's financial difficulty has been the expenditure of over $1,000,000 on the abandoned Lacolle Falls Hydo-Electric scheme. Other causes are the decrease in population and the lack of experienced control.

The Times says it is quite clear that the city must receive assistance, if it is to meet obligations.

A suggestion is that the Saskatchewan Government should lend $10,000 a year for a few years at a low rate and that interest and debenture holders be asked to agree to the suspension of sinking fund payments for a similar period, pending a reorganization of finances.

The Back Aches

Possibly you do not realize that this indicates derangement of the kidneys. Neglect usually means the development of Bright's disease. You know how dreadfully painful and fatal that is.

There is quick relief for the kidneys in the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This medicine is known in the great majority of homes as the greatest of regulators.

How Peterboro County Man Met His Death in the West

Patrick Vincent Killen Was Dead Within Five Minutes After He Fell Into the Water—Piece of Orange Stuck in His Throat.

The following clipping is taken from the Saskatchewan News:

ROCKING A BOAT CLAIMS A VICTIM AT CARLYLE LAKE.

Carlyle, Sask., July 14. — (Special.) — Patrick Vincent Killen, age 28, employed by W. C. Jones, of Tilston, was drowned at the Carlyle Lake resort this afternoon. In company with another young man and a young lady, all of who were attired for bathing, the deceased went out in a boat, and when about sixty feet off the shore at Sandy Beach, the boat upset. The young lady was rescued by another boating party which happened to be close by, but Killen sank immediately, and though taken from the water within five minutes of the accident, was quite dead when recovered. He was at once attended by three doctors and a nurse who happened to be summering at the Beach. All was to no avail. It was evident that the party had been eating oranges, as when they started pumping the water out of Killen's stomach, a piece of orange was found stuck in his throat, and the doctors decided that he probably died from choking rather than drowning.

WONDERFUL 'PLANE CAN CLIMB MILES IN SHORT TIME

New Type Can Carry Great Weight and Faster Than All Others.

LONDON, July 23.— The newspapers to-day give prominence to a report of a new type of British airplane which, having been tested at the front with the greatest success is about to be employed there in large numbers.

No technical details are given, but it is said the new machine has enormous speed and climbing power. It is capable of carrying great weight in bombs, machine guns and other equipment, and of attaining a height of 20,000 feet in an astonishingly short time.

It is said the machine can cover long distances at a speed which leaves all but the fastest modern scouting machines far behind, and thus is able to cross the enemy lines and drop bombs and return for a fresh load within a time limit far less than any of the earlier airplanes.

The engines of the airplane are declared to be so completely reliable that risk of compulsory descent into the enemy's territory is eliminated. It is added that not one of those wonder machines has yet been downed.

New, Positive Treatment to Remove Hair or Fuzz

(Beauty Notes)

Women are fast learning the value of the use of delatone for removing hair and fuzz from face, neck or arms. A paste is made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on the heiry surface. In 2 or 3 minutes it is rubbed off, the skin washed and every bit of hair has disappeared. No failure will result if you are careful to buy genuine delatone.

HINDY COMES TO LIFE AGAIN

Is Now at Hanover Taking the Rest Cure.

Special to The Examiner:

WIFE CHARGES SPOUSE OF BEING A LOAFER

ST. THOMAS, July 23.—Charles Elsie, a local man, appeared in police court Saturday on a charge of violating the anti-loafing law. His wife who was the complainant declared that her husband would not work and refused to supply the wherewithal to buy the necessities of life. The husband complained of a tired feeling, but denied being a loafer. He just merely felt tired and could not work, he said.

He was warned to forget that feeling at once and begin to support his wife in a proper manner. He was given one month's suspended sentence in order to try his luck at working.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with the writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Peterborough, July 23, 1918.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have just received a communication from Mr. Carson, Inspector of Public Libraries, who has charge of the proper distribution of the books for the soldiers' camps. The letter is in reply to one addressed to Mr. Carson, asking for more definite information in regard to the books required for the men. He thanks the citizens of Peterborough for the books that they have sent and says "We can use more books like the ones you sent. If you have good books in bad shape, or with paper covers, they can be used. We have had an application on behalf of the men in a quarantine hospital. They want books that can stay." It will be seen from the above that gifts of books in paper covers, so long as they are not of the lurid type of fiction, will be thankfully received. Those in good cloth bindings will still be reckoned of great service for the permanent camp libraries. Anyone having books of either description noted above who is anxious to serve a good cause by presenting them to the camp libraries will oblige by notifying me by postcard addressed to the Public Library, or by telephoning 241.

F. M. DELA FOSSE.

PETERBORO, Ont., July 22, 1918.

To the Editor of The Examiner,—

In these days when so many ill advised and thoughtless people the hurling bricks at our esteemed City Council, it gives me great pleasure to tender them a bouquet in the form of a word of commendation for their solicitious care for the welfare of the City and their efforts to maintain its high moral standing.

Yesterday, Sunday, when the temperature was soaring, in my desperation, I thought to alleviate the suffering of my family, with a cooling dish of ice cream. Bpt, thanks to the foresight of the noble band of self-sacrificing men who compose our City Council, I was saved from committing this mortal sin.

Furthermore, not having an automobile, I was prevented from travelling to Millbrook, and there reducing the simple-minded residents into sinning with me.

For the bountiful blessings bestowed on our city and for the Council's ever watchful care for our welfare, let us give thanks.

"GRATEFUL."

CHIEF PUTS THE CUFFS ON HIS RUNAWAY WIFE

And He Proposes to See That She Goes to Jail With Indian Chief Who Induced Her to Leave His Side—Had a Long Chase.

TORONTO, July 23.—A despatch from Windsor, Ont., dated Sunday, says:

Locked in the inseverable bonds of matrimony, strengthened by a pair of steel handcuffs, Chief of Police John Johnson, of North Bay, and his wife, Mrs. Calia Johnson, returned home Saturday from Windsor.

There was another chief in the party, too, in the person of Augustis Treamtos, forty years old, an Indian chieftain, who, it is alleged, induced Mrs. Johnston to leave her husband's side.

Chief Johnson said he had traced his erring wife and her alleged paramour more that 4,000 miles. He had two unsuccessful trips to Montreal and Ford before he received information that Treamtos and his own wife were in hiding at Windsor, where they were arrested Friday by Detectives Reid and Broderick.

Chief Johnson started back to North Bay with his wife and Treamtos shackled to his arm. He intends to see that both the Indian and his own wife serve terms in jail, he said.

"EVENING ENTERTAINMENTS"

(By R. S. M. Sturges (Author of "On the Remainder of Our Front").)

A Y.M.C.A. hut is a combination of many institutions. Some people imagine that it is nothing more than an ordinary canteen with a red triangle, over the door. It contains a canteen it is true, and thus serves the soldier as a refreshment room. But that is only one of its capacities. It is also a universal store, a library, a writing room, and an entertainment hall. It is, in fact, the private soldier's club.

The Hut in which I am at present working "Somewhere in France" boasts a large lecture hall, at one end of which a stage has been constructed, set off by a beautiful back scene of a pastoral nature—the work of an accomplished artist serving with the Army Service Corps. In this hall an entertainment of some kind is given every evening, and, so far, we have had no cause to complain of thin or unappreciative audiences. In fact the difficulty is to find accommodation for all the men who besiege the doors each night.

The entertainments take various forms. Lectures are given on every conceivable subject of interest from higher mathematics to prehistoric animals. Occasionally a traveller fresh from the East, from Mesopotamia, Italy or Balkan States will enlarge our knowledge of the war as it is waged in other countries. Lectures are frequently varied by concerts and Cinema shows. Sometimes a concert party of theatrical stars from home will provide a first class entertainment, in which so many encores are demanded, that, were they granted without limitation, neither audience nor performers would get to bed till the following morning.

Hardly less popular are the amateur troupes drawn from the ranks of the men themselves. These troupes masquerade under various strange sobriquets, such as 'The Shrapnels', 'Whiz Bangs,' 'Dough Knuts,' Maritime Minstrels,' 'Sons of Guns,' and so on. Their programme consists for the most part of topical songs with swinging choruses, in which the audience seizes the opportunity of proving beyond dispute that it also possesses vocal organs of no mean power. Many of the songs are composed by the soldiers themselves; the lyrics do not always conform to strict rules of metre, but they are none the less effective for that. One song which has great vogue at the moment repeats at the end of every verse the expressive line 'Oh! Oh! Oh! It's a lovely War!' One verse, for example, concludes with these words:—

When you wake up in the morning, your arms feel heavy as lead,
But you never get up till the sergeant brings your breakfast up to bed!
(Chorus)—Oh! Oh! Oh! It's a lovely war!

The audience takes up the last line and delivers it with a defeaning crescendo which threatens to lift the roof.

But there are times of anxiety in the life of a Y.M.C.A. worker, when the machine slips a cog—a disaster which occurs from time to time in the best organizations. Two nights ago, for instance, a lantern lecture by one of our allies was advertised for 7.30 p.m. Some time before the hour in question the hall was filled by a crowd of expectant soldiers; the lecturer arrived punctually, armed with a box of slides, and all was ready, when it was discovered that the electric lamp for the lantern was nowhere to be found. After a frantic search involving considerable delay it was discovered that the lamp had been broken and sent away for repairs. Profuse apologies were made to the lecturer, who fully understood the situation and willingly postponed his lecture till the lamp returned.

There remained a large audience to be dealt with, an audience whose paience had already been tried by the long delay. It was impossible to turn the men away after spoiling their evening, something must be done, and at once. One of the officials had an inspiration; he faced the audience and explained the situation. Further he said, being unwilling to disappoint the audience, he would be much obliged if they would supply him with 1. a pianist, 2. a singer, and 3. a song. There followed a confused murmur, each man nudging his neighbour and saying 'Go on Bill' and Bill replying 'Go on yourself.' At last one man, whose abilities as a pianist were well known to his friends allowed himself to be pushed forward, and others followed his lead. As soon as the ice was broken the success of the evening was assured. In fact the impromptu concert had to be interrupted at closing time by a vote of thanks to the performers, followed by the national anthem. The British soldier is naturally reserved and inclined to hide his light under a bushel, but when that reserve can be broken through there is no fear of a dull evening in his company. He can entertain himself and his friends as well as any one else can do it for him.

On Sunday the concert hall of yesterday becomes a church, wherein short services are held. The same piano which resounded throughout the week with comic songs is now devoted to the playing of hymns. Hymns play a great part in these soldier services, for a soldier is as fond of a good hymn as of a good song—perhaps fonder; songs grow old quickly and when a song grows old it dies and is forgotten, but hymns live on by virtue of their age. The old familiar tunes form a link with the past. They conjure up a vision of Sunday morning in some English country village nestling among the trees— a vision of home and all that is nearest and dearest to the solider's heart.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends the Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble, Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidences of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, oftep affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead, get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralise the excess acid and prevent its formation, and there is no so ness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

NO EXCEPTIONS FROM INCOME ASSESSMENT IN HAVELOCK

Judge Huycke Granted Appeals of Property Owners Against Court of Revision's Action in Striking Off Many Persons From Income List.

The property owners of Havelock have won a complete victory in their appeal against the action of the Court of Revision in striking off the income assessment of a number of the villagers, the majority of whom were employees of the C.P.R. The appeals were finally disposed of yesterday afternoon by Judge Huycke. All of them were allowed with the exception of one man who has married and several others who are overseas. It was stated that the assessor erred in assessing these ratepayers for income. All the others who were escaping the income tax were put back on the list and will be assessed as required by statute. The total amount of the assessment involved is said to be close to $26,000. Mr. G. N. Gordon represented Mr. Alex. Primrose, who lead the forces of property.

CABINET MINISTERS EXPECTED HOME ON THURSDAY NEXT

Sir Robert Borden May Remain In England Much Longer Than At First Anticipated.

RAILWAY PROBLEM

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, July 23.—Hon. Messrs Calder and Meighen are expected back in Ottawa on Thursday next after an absence in England extending from the close of the parliamentary session. When the Premier and his other colleagues will return is not known. Despite cabled press dispatches to the effect that Sir Rober Borden may remain much longer than at first anticipated members of the cabinet here have not been advised by him of any change in his original plans which contemplated a return in August. However, unless it is intended to hold a fall session and the chance of this has become more remote since the Supreme Court reestablished the validity of the government's order in council in connection with military service operation. It would not be considered at all surprising if Sir Robert remained for some time longer in conference with the Imperial War Cabinet which has now pretty well become a permanent istitution.

Terms of peace

It has been stated that terms of peace are being tentatively discussed against the great day. Messrs Calder and Meighen devoted most of their attention to the railway problem. Press dispatches from England would not indicate that any definite solution had been reached. It would appear that the Grand Trunk officials in England are not willing to part with the system and while admitting certain responsibility in conection with the Grand Trunk Pacific obligations yet claim that the Government also have responsibilities. It is possible that the present arrangement will be continued for some time pending further negotoiations.

"I Need Hardly Say

"We found that it afforded instant relief from poison from shrubs and bushes, and got to using it for all manner or minor wounds and grazes."

PARIS, July 23. — Allied aviators have set fire to Fere En Tardenois and Fismes, the points of enemy concentration within the Soissons-Rheims salient. The operation north of Montdidier this morning is regarded as an effort to improve the French positions in that region.

GET BACK COLONIES IS GERMANY'S DREAM.

COLOGNE GAZETTE ATTEMPTS TO PROVE THAT DOMINIONS ARE FULL OF DISCONTENT

LONDON, July 22.—The Cologne Gazette ponderously attempts to prove that the Dominions are filled with discontent and anxiety about their special war aims and to represent the Dominions' ministers in London as struggling vainly with the imperial ministers anent the adoption of a satisfactory imperial policy.

The paper maintains that Germany will find ample opportunity to reap the fruits of these British dissensions and will thereby recover the lost colonies without much difficulty. It says that Australia is beginning to show signs of war weariness and New Zealand is seriously lukewarm. It represents Great Britain as being wholly concerned with the land bridge between Egypt a dnndIiaih ithwe. tween Egypt and India, which it admits, is pretty well attained and Great Britain will not be diverted from that by any other war aims of the allies or colonies.

The Cologne Gazette proceeds to urge that the best way to get back the colonies is to bring strong political and military pressure upon the Dominions themselves. For example, it is from the South African Union, that Germany must recover her two principal colonies, therefore Germany must concentrate her political attentions upon South Africa in order to bring the desired change of opinion on the queston of returning the colonies.

The articles concludes by declaring that a successful advance against Egypt would be the best means of smashing the unity of the British Empire.

Promised Consideration in 1914

"You should impress the public with the details of your complaint and show them that you are right," said Mr. Burnham, who elicited the very pertinent fact that back in 1914 the first request was sent by the postmen to acting posmater Doherty, who promised careful consideration.

"We have heard nothing since then," Mr. Reid said.

The postmen made it clear that they are ready to return to work at once providing their request is acceded is appointed with the understandtion on which they shall be represented is appointed with the understand? ing that such a Board srall bring in a report in not more than fourteen days.

The men find the treatment of temporary employees a cause for considerable complaint. It is demanded that they should be paid the same wages as permanent men. Under the present arrangement, when a temporary man is appointed to a permanent position he finds that he owes the Government money when he has to start in at the reduced wage of $2.00 a day. One man this afternoon stated that he would have only $9.00 left this month after paying what the Government claimed retroactively as the result of his appointment.

"Absurd, ridiculous," said Mr. Burnham.

Both the Mayor and Mr. Burnham have wired to Ottawa urging that some action be undertaken to meet the demands of the postmen.

"It is surely a British principle that just complaints of men should be heard," Mr. Burnham remarked. "They will come to time if the mails of this country are completely tied up."

At the close of the meeting President Grisdale thanked the Mayor and Mr. Burnham for their interest and help.

WOMEN MAY BE EMPLOYED

Acting upon the following telegram received at noon today:

"Your telegram received. Make arrangements possible for delivery of mail. Advise the public Employ any extra assistance that may be necessary to distribute mail in the city."

B. N. NORTHUP,
Assistant Sup. Staff Branch,
Ottawa."

Postmaster Edgar has decided to turn the matter practically into the hands of women to aid in the present situation and would ask any girls or men who may wish to help as a patriotic duty to leave their names with him and to be taken on the staff.

POST OFFICE CROWDED.

Up to a late hour this afternoon the post office was crowded with an impatient crowd demanding their noon mail. From twelve o'clock on to about one thirty, the crowd grew to such an etxent the people were lined in the entry. This only abated when the business places and factories opened. Altogether the crisis has been well handled by the night and day staff, under the supervision of Post Master Edgar, who himself acted as clerk.

The only element which saved a stampede was the fact that no English or French mail came in, and as it seemed to be the principal goal for most of the seekers of mail the crowd dwindled as the word was passed around.

Thought She Would Lose Her Little Girl With Diarrhoea

Thousands of infants die annually who could be saved by the timely use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

There can be no doubt about it.

During the seventy-two years that this wonderful remedy has been on the market, it has been proved conclusively that it is the best for diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cramps, cholera infantum, and all looseness of the bowels, especially when the children are teething.

Many of the imitations of "Dr. Fowler's" being offered to the public to-day are positively dangerous, as they often check the diarrhoea too suddenly, cause inflammation and leave the bowels in a constipated condition. "Dr. Fowler's" will not do this, but will impart a healthy tone to the mucous surface, and stop the diarrhoea in an easy and natural way.

Mrs. M. Tyler, Orland, Ont., writes: "I have used your wonderful medicine for nine years with great satisfaction. My little girl was only five months old, and she was so sick with diarrhoea I thought she would die. I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and it gave her quick relief. I have used it ever since for the whole of my family, six in all, and can praise it more than anything I ever used."

MR. BURNHAM'S COMMENT

"The striking postmen interview Mr. Burnham M.P., this morning. "Some of our employers" he said "have been striking lately, I suppose it is but reasonable to expect that the employees will follow suit. All have grievances. Why? Because we do not manage our National affairs very well. I am referring to the affairs of the people as a whole which are outside the range of Government administration. If private business was managed in the same way as all the businesses in relation to each other are managed, we would have in private the same mess as we have in the larger arena. Now let us look at this matter for a moment .Is it a fact that living is going up almost out of reach? It is but natural that we should reach after it. In fact it is a necessity that we should do so. Why are potatoes 80c a peck in the midst of the greatest potato harvest ever garnered in Canada? Why did the Government allow the Hon. W. J. Hanna to give the flour-millers 25c a barrel profit when it was much less than that before? Why does not some capable man take the fuel question in hand. If there is fuel enough it should be evenly distributed. When the rate of living goes up 150 per cent what will the pay of the people have to do? Some say that it is a good thing that the soldier does not strike But he feels like it when he looks homeward and sees people grumbling about helping his family in his absence and yet exempting sporting institutions which ought to be closed up in war-time if they can't support themselves. Unless our administrators keep faith with employees and unless the rate of living is kept within bounds how can the rate of pay be kept within bounds? Society as at present constituted has utterly broken down. We must find and preserve a social equilibrium founded on fact, fairness and good faith." So long as may grab who can" we may expect trouble and when a crisis arrives it becomes acute just as in any other disease. That is all that there is in as far as I can see. Inefficiency and selfishness are at the bottom of it all. No student of these and past times will discern a great difference between the two. The problem of a Nation's domestic business has yet to be solved. Strikes will ultimately compel a solution.

KENNER—WILLIAMS

St. Paul's Presbyterian church was crowded this afternoon when the wedding of Henry Roe Hocking Kenner, principal of the Peterboro Collegiate Institute and Mary Isabella Williams, late of the Collegiate staff, was solemnized Reverend Robert Pogue officiating. The church had been beautifully decorated in yellow and blue flowers by some of the bride's friends during the morning.

The bride who entered the church under the escort of her brother-in-law, Mr. Wm. L. McLaw, wore a charming wedding gown of white satin and the regulation veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lillies of the valley. She was unattended. Mr. James Pogue and Mr. Gerry MacLelland acted as ushers.

After the ceremony and during the signing of the register, Mr. Douglas Carlisle sang "Because" accompanied on the organ by Mr. John Allan, who also played the wedding march. Later Mr. and Mrs. Kenner drove to the home of the bride's mother, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served, after which they left amid a shower of confetti by the 3:40 C.P.R. for a wedding trip in the West. On their return they will reside at 232 McDonnell street.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, July 24.—The German drive southward between Soissons and Main De Massiges, was one of three pushes they contemplated this summer. Two toward Paris and one toward the Channel Ports, according to information from prisoners. The recent effort which resulted so disastrously and gummed up the whole progamme, was aimed toward Chalons and Epernay. The French and Americans have captured German officers who were temporarily appointed mayors of French cities to be occupied, including the two named. Captured Boches also declare that a large number of divisions were in Flanders for a drive against the British, while they were concentrating 35 divisions (42,000 men) for the Champagne operations.

Failure of Drive.

The Flanders drive was to follow the Crown Prince's push as soon as the latter had attacked and a certain degree of success attained.

Many prisoners captured near Soissons have been identified as recently removed from Flanders, indicating the failure of the Champagne drive which disrupted the contemplated Flanders campaign.

German officers say the third drive towards Paris was to be undertaken late this summer or early in autumn, if the events of the one just stopped did not carry clear through to the coveted city. Prisoners are doubtful as to whether these other two drives will be carried out as planned, since a great number of extra divisions were used on this front last week and many of them, were so badly shattered they will not be fit for use as storm troops inside of four months. The majority of intelligent German prisoners, however, believe the Kaiser will start another offensive this summer, an even a larger scale.

Lack of Confidence.

In regard to the confidence of the German people which is admitted to be at low ebb, many prisoners frankly say they do not know, and do not care, about Germany's future concerning drives. They are sick of war.

During the enemy retreat, German officers say the Allied artillery fire compelled them to fall back so fast they were unable to maintain an effective counter-barrage, and while the Allies were bombarding Boche positions preparatory to local attacks, German outposts were forced to take cover and many were captured before they could come out of their hiding places.

Artillery Used.

In some regions the fighting was carried on almost entirely by artillery and machine guns, the Germans being so far ahead that rifles and grenades could not be used. German prisoners testify to the destruction wrought by our heavy guns on railway, roads and important junctions, which were necessary to the enemy retiring. The German plan of retiring with machine-gun squads to fight rear-guard actions at many points failed on several occasions when their guns and their crews were captured. The Boche gunners did not know that their comrades had already fallen back.

The German movement within the salient north of Chateau Thierry, which had been northward since the enemy retirement began to-day was reported to be southward. It is believed there fresh replacements of troops and that the Germans are preparing to make a stiff stand in certain locations.

THE RUSSIAN ARMY ORDERED TO MOBILIZE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

AMSTERDAM, July 24.—Alexis Romanoff a former heir apparent to the Russian throne, died from exposure a few days after his father was executed, says a despatch from Moscow to the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger.

General mobilization of the Russian army began July 7, according to Moscow advices received here. The general mobilization of all military forces under Bolsheviki control in Russia was begun July 15th. All classes of workmen and peasants are being called to "maintain national order."

ENEMY APPEARS DETERMINED TO AVERT A RETREAT

Huns Are Preparing for a Desperate Stand Along the Present Battle Front.

POSITION OUTFLANKED

(By John De Gandt.)

PARIS, July 24.—The Germans appear determined to avoid a prolonged retreat and are reported to be preparing for a desperate stand along the present battle front. Further Allied successes under these conditions will thus imperil more than 400,000 Germans in the Soissons-Rheims pocket, as their forces within the salient have grown to that figure. French and American troops are overcoming the bitter resistance, and are progressing northeast of Chateau Thierry and south of the Ourcq. The enemy position at Oulchy Le Chateau (which already is reported to have been rendered untenable by the Allies) is outflanked.

Public With Them, Postmen Assured

The postmen stated this morning that they had received many expressions of support from citizens who learned for the first time wages paid them. One manufacturer assured the men that he had positions for them with better salaries than the Government pays, should their strike fail. However, there are no signs of failure. A deputation from the Toronto branch of the Federated Letter Carrier's Association, the Board of Trade and the Toronto City Council went to Ottawa last night to meet a subcommittee of the Cabinet. It is expected that word will be received from them some time today, and if the results of the deputation are favorable the men will go back to work at once. The strike is rapidly spreading, and will tie up the maile of the country unless the Government agrees to the men's demands.

The Examiner received the following letter this morning from one of the postmen, fully endorsed by their union.

Peterboro, July 24th.

To the Examiner,—It was noticed in your paper last night that Mr. Edgar had decided to turn the matter of distribution over to the women who desire to help in patriotic duty in the Post Office.

Now, may the women or men kindly understand that a large percentage of these mail carriers are returned soldiers who have shed their blood for the likes of some of these men who are sitting in good homes and paid good wages and ignoring our requests. It would be better to give it a second consideration before taking the place of these brave boys who want nothing only a decent living wage. Surely the Government has had enough time now to consider the situation.

We carriers stood the dilly-dally long enough and had to go out. Men and women who think it is a patriotic duty to assist in the maile kindly think of the returned soldiers who fought for right and British freedom, are now fighting and assisting to fight for a decent living wage.

Huns Being Forced Back

New German Divisions Are Constantly Being Identified—Heavy Fighting

(United Press Service.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 24.—Despite orders to hold to the death, the Crown Prince's rear guard is being forced to give way before the allied attack along practically the whole battle front.

Prisoners declare units of the rear guard were ordered to remain at their posts and hold off the enemy to the last. Before the violence of the American assault they are being wiped out or taken prisoner.

The advance is proceeding cautiously at all points, however, owing to the great mass of German reinforcements and their increasing resistance. On many sectors the battle occasionally loses all resemblance to a rear guard action, and appears as though the Germans intended to make a permanent stand. New German divisions are constantly being identified.

Another Hun Peace Offer

Berlin Paper Admits That Suggestions for Peace Have Been Made—The Terms.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, July 24.—Germany has made suggestions for a peace conference to the Spanish Government, says the Socialist Vorwaerts of Berlin.

The suggestions are:

First—Germany wants no annexations or indemnities in west;

Second—Peace treaties with Russia and Roumania may not be questioned;

Third—The principle of self-determination of peoples has not been discussed but may be settled at peace conference where the fate of Belgium also is to be settled;

Fourth—Balkan question is to be settled around conference table;

Fifth—The freedom of seas, dismantling of Gibraltar and Suez Canal, and the right for Germany to use coaling stations;

Sixth—The colonial question is to be settled on basis of status quo.

The Vorwaerts considers this a very reasonable peace programme.

Resistance Is Stiffening

Crown Prince Is Throwing New Forces Into the Battle—Prisoners Increasing.

(By Webb Miller—United Press Service.)

PARIS, July 24. — The German Crown Prince has suddenly changed his plans for a strategic retreat in the Soissons-Rheims salient and has determined to fight it out there. This decision, indicated by stiffening enemy resistance and increasing reinforcements, was borne out by German prisoners to-day, who declared the withdrawal order has been countermanded. They could offer no explanation, but military experts believe German politicians, fearing internal effects of a huge retirement, forced a change in the plans.

The Crown Prince continues to order new divisions into the pocket, drawing these reinforcements from as far north as the main British front. German losses in this region are now estimated at from 125,000 to 150,000 men, including 25,000 prisoners.

STEAMER TORPEDOED

Thirty-two Thousand Ton Ship Sent to the Bottom by Enemy Submarines.

ELEVEN ARE DEAD

Special to The Examiner:

AN IRISH PORT, July 24. — The Cunard Line steamer Justicia, thirty-two thousand tons, has been torpedoed and sunk. She was built for the Dutch line, but taken over by the British government before completion. She was returning to America after delivering a large contingent of American troops.

The Justicia was torpedoed Saturday morning. She carried a crew of from six to seven hundred. Eleven are dead. The Belfast Evening Telegraph, which announces the sinking, says ten torepdoes were discharged at her, four of which were exploded by gunfire.

(Special to The Examiner.)

BERLIN, Via Copenhagen, July 24—The British steamer Justicia has been torpedoed and sunk, the German Admiralty officially announced to-day.

German newspapers express great satisfaction that the steamer was sunk while under American control. Submarine commanders, in their official reports, stated that the Justicia was equipped with large steel anti-torpedo nets, "rendering her destruction difficult."

The mention of submarine "commanders" indicates that several U-boats probably attacked the big steamer.

Four Hundred Landed.

LONDON, July 24.—Four hundred survivors of the torpedoed liner Justicia have been landed at an Irish port, it was announced here. Survivors reported that only one of ten torpedoes fired at the vessel was effective, and that it wrecked the engine-room, stopping the ship.

POSTIES WIN FIRST ROUND

Get Promise of Hearing of Their Grievances by a Committee of Cabinet if They Return to Work at Once.

THE END IN SIGHT ?

A telegraam from R. M. Coulter, Deputy Postmaster General, was read by Postmaster Edgar at this morning's meeting of the local letter carriers promising that their grievances would be considered by a sub-committee of the Cabinet provided they returned to work immediately. Although somewhat indefinite the communication was regarded by the men for a recognition of their demands by as meeting their alternative demand the Government's belated offer to discuss the claims of the letter carriers but they pointed out that they could not resume their duties until they had been notified by the secretary of their Federated unions, Mr. A. McMordie of Toronto, that Mr. Coulter's conditional proposal was satisfactory to the men in other cities and approved by the Federation.

For that reason, it was decided to telephone the general secretary and report his statement to a meeting this afternoon, but it was found that McMordie had taken the noon train to Ottawa where a deputation from Toronto will meet the committee of the Cabinet.

All the postmen were present this morning when President J. Grisdale opened the meeting which Mr. Edgar and Mr. J. H. Burnham attended.

The telgram read by the Postmaster was as follows:

Ottawa, July 23.

I have to request by instruction of the Postmaster General and the Acting Prime Minister that you will immediately communicate the following to all postal employees:—

The following message was sent yesterday in reply to one from Toronto purporting to convey proposals from postmen—

"Upon men returning to work, subcommittee of Cabinet ready at any time to meet and hear postmen and their representatives and deal within the limit of the Government's legal powers promptly and equally with any proposal the men may desire to make.

The latter should understand that Government cannot pay out monies beyond the amount voted by Parliament. As already stated in communications to the men and to the press first quarterly cheques in payment of voted allowance now being issued."

As stated, provided men return at once to work subcommittee of Council will hear representative of men at any rate tomorrow if so desired, but condition that the men return to work is imperative. Full allowances voted being paid. Governmen cannot but look upon cessation of work as absolutely unjustifiable and if persisted in as calling for the exercise of the Government powers to prevent by such measure as may prove necessary, any interruption of this important branch of public business.

R. M. COULTER.

THE RECOGNITION DESIRED

Mr. Burnham, discussing the message, pointed out that this was the recognition the postmen desired, and that to retain the sympathy of the public they should return to work as soon as possible. This was a promise that their demands would be considered, but in the meantime the Government expected of the men that they return at once to work.

"It seems to meet your requirem ents," Mr. Burnham said. "They agree to confer with you, and, before they refused to pay any attention to you. Now you have gained that point. They say that the cheques are being issued. But why were they not issued long ago as promised." Mr. Burnham called the attention of the press to this fact.

Some of the postmen enquired as to whether the cheques were for their first promised bonus of $100, for the more recent one of $150, or for both as, the men expect or rather hope for, of $250. This is one of the points the men want cleared up definitely and satisfactorily.

READY TO RETURN

Under the promise of favorable settlement of their claims ,the men expressed a readiness to resume work at once. But a member reminded the men that they had to keep faith with the letter carriers in other

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, JULY 24TH, 1918.

SHOULD BE CHOSEN

In chosing a committe to look into the housing problem, Monday night's public meeting might well have selected some of those at the head of the Peterboro Workingmen's Building and Loan Association—an organization that for thirty years has been engaged in promoting the very object to be supported by the committee. Among the directors of the Association are Messrs John Corkery, James Lynch, W. Garrow, Geo. Ball, Richard Sheehy and J. Murty and these men and their associates through their faithful and earnest efforts have move it possible for many Peterboro workmen to become their own land lords. The experience that they have gained in thirty years' study of the building problem would make them invaluable members of the local committee. The Association has at present $20,000 invested in bonds, it having been bound unwise in viewof the present high cost of labour and material to engage in any building operations at the present time.

A NEW DRIVE LIKELY.

Although a number of British troops have made their appearance in the fighting on the Rheims front in the past day or two, the main body of the Britisn forces have had no share in the great battle. The British have not been idle, however, and have harassed the enemy by a constant series of local operations and raids, bitting off portions of the German line here and there and generally keeping the Germans on the anxious seat. There is a feeling, however, as evidenced by the despatches of war correspondents from the front that there may be an outburst on the British front before long. It has been known for some time that Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria in command of the group of armies facing the British, has been preparing for a hard blow, against Haig, hoping to break through to the Channel Ports. The German Crown Prince's defeat on the Marne may mean that the attack on the British will have to be indefinitely postponed, but according to the United Press correspondent with the British armies in France, Rupprecht's main forces have not yet been drawn upon to send help to the Crown Prince, although it is possible that some of the reserves have been used for this purpose.

Another offensive against the British front in that case may be looked upon as almost a certainty. It will be a tremendous push, intended to restore the morale of the German troops, and the confidence of the German people at home in their army and leaders. The British, however, have taken advantage of the delay to strengthen their positions and to build up their forces, and Rupprecht is likely to find the road to the coast less easy than ever before.

SPEED UP THE OUTPUT.

The second in the series of special advertisements of the Imperial Munitions Board drives home to the munition workers the necessity of increasing the output and speeding up their work. The point is well token. Munition workers are the best paid men among the industrial workers of Canada—their work is of great importance and it is desirable that they should endeavour to look upon their position as part and parcel of the British army. If the Germans are to be beaten—and no friend of the Allies doubts that they will be—there must be a constant steady supply of munitions, and the men who make these munitions are therefore doing an absolutely necessary work — a work that will play a big part in the defeat of the Hun. The workman on munitions who looks upon the making of shells merely as an opportunity to draw the highest wages is not showing the proper spirit. In the manufacture of war materials he is as directly engaged in fighting the Huns as is the soldier on the firing line, with the difference that his duty is being carried in safety and under infinitely more comfortable circumstances, and at the same time he is paid seven or eight times as much as his brother who goes over the top.

The Munition Board does well to call attention to these facts. Men are sometimes inclined to be careless and indifferent, and a reminder of their duty to their country should serve a useful purpose. Munition workers are asked to note the opinion of the Board that their labour is the bulwark upon which their own flesh and blood in the trenches depends upon for munitions, ond if the workers at home fail, their comrades at the front are lost.

"Compared with the roar of the guns the noise in your shop is a whisper," says the advertisement.

"Compared with your weariness of body, theirs is the weariness of ceaseless suffering. But always they pull themselves together and resolve to stick it out and see it through."

The message from the Imperial Munition Board should not be ignored by any workman. The output of munitions must be speeded up.

LEARERSHIP NEEDED.

The demand for the return to Canada of Premier Borden and his associates continues to increase in vigour throughout the country and the situation in the postal service has intensified the agitation. There is a general feeling that with the Premier and other important Cabinet members away, the country's affairs are being allowed to drift, the ministers who are at Ottawa being content to rest their oars until their colleagues return. That condition of affairs would be bad enough in time of peace, but it is intolerable now when Canada is engaged in the gigantic struggle that is convulsing the world.

The Toronto Globe says:

What bears all the ear-marks of an inspired cable from London announces that "despite the desire of Canada for the immediate return of Sir Robert Borden, the Prime Minister cannot accede to the request." It is declared to be "never so essential as now that Canada be represented at the Imperial War Cabinet," and, it is added, "while a crisis remains on the Western front the Prime Minister must remain here."

It is time that somebody played the role of frank friend to Sir Robert Borden. Talk about the necessity for his staying in London so long as "a crisis remains on the Western front" is too patently a subterfuge. The crisis on the Western front is a military crisis—a crisis which the Canadian Premier can do nothing in London to relieve. The only effective contribution he can make toward the solution of the situation in the field is by personal effort and leadership in the raising and despatching of additional Canadian fighting forces and supplies for the front. That work can best be done at home.

There is but one possible war consideration which could serve as an excuse for Sir Robert Borden missing the next vessel homeward-bound. That excuse would be that the Imperial War Cabinet had under its consideration possible terms of peace. And even were such the case the Canadian Government could just as effectively be consulted by cable. The Premier should frankly be made acquainted with the fact that the Canadian people at home, who, by their votes, assigned to him the great and responsible task of leadership in national war endeavour, think he should be at home and on the job.

The condition of public opinion throughout Canada demands the presence of the Premier at Ottawa just as soon as he can get there. If the Ministers at the Capital do not recognize this they do not understand what is going on in the country all about them. The fact that the Ministry has an overwhelming Parliamentary majority behind it is not sufficient reason for ignoring public opinion.

There are big, serious, and vital problems calling for leadership in Governmental handling. The settlement of these problems is essential to a continuance of Canada's effective war endeavour. This is no time for the Premier and several of his Ministers to be overseas. Sir Robert Borden is needed at home, and public and press are demanding his speedy return.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Hoover's statement that the corner in food production and supply has been turned, is an important and pleasing statement.

The U-boats have failed to win the war for Germany. That is the meaning of the message of the United States Food Controller.

If Hindenburg was not ill before the success of the French and Americans on the Marne has probably resulted in making him sick.

The Belgian children used to walk backwards to show the German soldiers marching to Paris. The Crown Prince's forces are demonstrating that the little Belgians were true prophets.

Austria is described as anxious to "get out of the mess." People usually do feel like that when they have sold their heritage for the proverbial pottage.

Modern War.

(Chicago Tribune.)

Modern war cannot be waged by a heroic citizenry which seizes the ancestral firelock at the midnight summons of a Paul Revere and goes forth to win immortality on the village common. Modern war is industry, on the vastest scale, industry planned and prepared, its dies already made, its stores reserved, its men trained.

Hope This Is Right.

(Brantford Expositor)

The gas situation in Brantford is far from satisfactory and because of the conflicting statements which have been made, citizens scarcely know what preparations to make for next winter. It will be well, of course, to take every precaution, but with the manufacturing establishments shut off and the entire supply of gas kept for the domestic consumer, the logical thing to conclude is that so far the citizens generally are concerned, the situation should not be next winter so severe as last.

The League of Nations.

(Westminster Gazette.)

Put out of your mind altogether the notion that this policy of a League of Nations is merely sentimental pacifism. It is, on the contrary, a sternly fighting creed. It calls for the allegiance of all men of liberal and humane ideas, and will brace them as nothing else to the horrors and trials of the last stage of this struggle. The defeat of Prussian militarism is the road to the League of Nations, and that is what we mean when we proclaimed it to be our main object at the beginning of the war.

CANDY MANUFACTURERS FORCED TO SHUT DOWN

Page & Shaw, Inc., and Consolidated Confectionery Company, Had Excess Sugar Supply.

NEW YORK, July 24.—As a penalty for maintaining a larger quantity of sugar on hand than is permitted under the regulations of the United States Food Administration, the Federal Food Board ordered the firm of Page & Shaw, Inc., to close down its factory and five stores in this city for a period of one week beginning Wednesday, July 24. Page & Shaw is a Massachusetts corporation and one of the largest candy manufacturers in the country. Aside from shutting down its New York establishments, the corporation will be required to post a sign in its stores indicating that business had been suspended for violation of the Food Administration rules.

The firm reported through its manager that it had on hand 20,250 pounds of sugar. According to its own report it used during January, February, March, and April 25,000 pounds of sugar, the average monthly consumption being therefore 8,333 pounds. For May and June the firm was permitted to use 80 per cent. of the amount consumed during the first four months of this year, and under present sugar regulations it is limited to 50 per cent. of the average of these four months after July 1. The amount of sugar the firm had on hand was therefore more than a four-months' supply based on its 50 per cent. allowance.

Judge is Loath to Rule Man Insane for Killing Pro-German

Mr. McDermott Asks Time to Consider Report of Experts on Fixed Idea of Intense Patriotism.

NEW YORK, July 23.—A form of alleged insanity which would be considered exceedingly dangerous to Germany just now is being considered in the County Court of Brooklyn. By the alienists it is described as "a fixed idea of intense patriotism," of course, to the United States. The man who is so afflicted (or favored) is Timothy Crowley, a first class-petty officer and ship fitter in the United States Navy. He also is the brother of Mrs. Ellen M. O'Grady, Fifth Deputy Police Commissioner.

Mr. Crowley shot and seriously wounded Frank Van Name, a cook, on May 9. When asked why he had shot Van Name, he said "because he is pro-German." That, he considered, was ample justification for his act. Dr. Cecil McCoy and Dr. Edward N. Hicks were appointed to examine into Mr. Crowley's sanity. Yesterday they made their report to County Judge McDermott who read the report carefully and then said:—

"No man in these days with a fixed idea of intense patriotism and mentally healthy in every other way will be adjudged insane by me."

James W. Dedmond, counsel for Mr. Crowley, asked Dr. Hick:—

"Would not that form of insanity made up of an intense love for America, be an immense asset to America in her fighting men now on the battlefields of Europe?"

"It undoubtedly would," agreed Dr. Hicks, "and very likely this man Crowley would prove a fine fighter."

A happy thought came to Mr. Redmond. He smiled, and said:—

"This matter may be settled easily. If the District Attorney will agree, let us surrender him to the United States Navy, where he already has served so well, for I know the navy will welcome him back."

The idea seemed to appeal to Judge McDermott as sensible, but he said:—

"I will adjourn this matter until next Friday, and in the meantime let counsel and the District Attorney confer and see what agreement can be reached. I cannot bring myself to consider as a form of insanity an intense love of our country at this hour."

Land Fishing

An Ontario girl, visiting a ranch in the West, pointed to the rope coiled on the pommel of a cowboy's saddle, and asked:

"What use is that line?"

"That's to ketch steers an' hosses, miss," said the ranchman.

"Indeed," said the young woman, "and what bait do you use?"

NEW SCHEDULE OF RATES FOR ALL CANADIAN RAILWAYS

Increase Will Take Effect on August First—A Conference To-day

MADE NECESSARY

Special to Examiner:

OTTAWA, July 24.—The new schedules of rates for all Canadian railways will, it is anticipated, go into effect on August 1st next. Such increases, the railways hold, have been made necessary by the application to Canadian railways of the McAdoo award in froce in the United States. The railways are even now preparing their new rate schedules and representatives of roads are in conference with members of the government to-day. The new rates will be put in force by order-in-Council under the War Measures Act, and there will be no hearing of the application before the Railway Commission as in normal conditions has been necessary.

The increases will not be as high as 25 per cent. as had at first been anticipated, nor will they apply uniform ly to all commodities. Neither will they, it is said, apply to passenger rates.

cities, although they were prepared to acquiesce in the Government s terms, they would have to wait until instructions were received from the Federated Secretary.

Mr. Burnham denied that the Government could not pay out monies beyond the sum voted in the House. He said the money could be paid now and voted later at the next session. Incidentally he took a few sharp raps at the substitution of the Civil Service Act for the old patronage system, stating that practically no attention was paid the advice of the members, but that the officials took their orders from the Department.

EMPLOY WOMEN.

Mr. Edgar read a second telegram instructing him to do everything possible to carry on the service, and if necessary to employ men or women.

The men reported that wom en had been engaged in the post office yesterday and were again at work today. In Toronto Postmaster Lemon had refused so far to engage substitute for the carriers. This action pleased the local posties.

"He's a postmaster" said one of them.

"He's in sympathy with his men," another remarked. And while these remarks obviously had a local reflection, it was stated that Mr. Edgar had to follow out the instructions from Ottawa. In other words he was considering his own position.

OTTAWA, July 24.—The conference of the government with the delegates of the Toronto carriers and others, which was to have taken place this morning, was postponed till this afternoon on account of the absence of several parties, owing to a misunderstanding as to the time of meeting.

TORONTO, July 24.—There is so far no change reported in the Postmen's strike from last night, when men were out at Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Moose Jaw, Vancouver, Fort William, Port Arthur, Saskatoon and Peterborough. Brantford carriers decided to strike at noon to-day unless instructed otherwise from Toronto.

MAY STRIKE.

OTTAWA, July 24.—Local letter carriers after being on strike one hour, returned to work and delivered the morning mail. Meeting later in the day will decide for or against a strike.

The police took the impatient crowd at the post office in hand today and have the waiting throng in an orderly line. This, on account of the dense crowd which gathered at noon, and later, has been no easy business, as at 12 o'clock they not only filled the post office but overflowed into the street. Inside the office Mr. Edgar has augmented the staff by 14 extra clerks who have worked diligently all day, but will relinquish their positions to-night as only trained hands are of any avail for night work.

Mr. Edgar assures the public that letters posted are sure of reaching their destination safely. This may relieve some anxious minds.

Mr. Burnham has not acted in the capacity of clerk to-day, as he did yesterday.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT. LAST EVENING

Little Girl Sustained Severe Cuts.

Margaret Thompson, the little daughter of Mr. Arthur Thompson, Stewart street, sustained severe cuts about her head last evening at 8:30 when the automobile driven by her father collided with the radial car. Mr. Thompson, who was coming down Park street lost control of the brakes near the corner of Park and Charlotte street, and his car ran into the westbound street car which was standing waiting for the Canadian General car. The child, who was thrown violently against the windshield was carried into Mr. T. F. McManus' house, 464 Charlotte street, where Mrs. McManus attended to her injuries. The automobile was badly bent, but not so seriously as to put it out of commission, and Mr. Thompson proceeded home in it.

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM LIEUT. HARRY ROGERS, WHO IS NOW LOCATED IN HOLLAND

Mr. R. B. Rogers, Auburn, received yesterday the first letter that has come from his son, Lieut. Harry Rogers, since his repatriation into Holland on June 13.

In speaking of his journey Lieut. Rogers said that being a superstitious crowd, there were 13 coming over and starting on June 13, they had a nervous journey augmented by the fact that one broke his looking glass. However, outside of one breakdown near the border the trip was made successfully.

On their arrival in Scheveningen the men were met by Lord Cave, who referred to their arrival as a delivery from the lower regions of the principal devils into the world of light and freedom. This speech was quoted by irate Huns all over Germany.

THE CONDITIONS.

In describing conditions he said that the prisoners are put into hotels which have been taken over by the Government and if later they desire to go into private residence or flat leave to do so is granted. All food is dear and scarce and everybody including the farmers are on rations. Eggs sell at 12 cents each.

SOCIAL LIFE

Social life requires a great deal of money, and ones speech must always be guarded as the place is full of spies. Nobles from Germany entertain men lavishly all acting in the secret service of Germany to gain information on condition at the front, in England and in Germany. It is he says, a trying situation to doubt the man who seems your friend.

Lieut. Rogers was one of the prisoners who participated in the sensational attempt to escape in a tunnel some months ago and it was this which kept back his extradition into Holland for some time. The escape Lieut. Rogers said was attempted through a tunnel which took 6 months to build went through 10 feet of solid rock and 60 of loose rock.

Lieut. Rogers in speaking of Heber who he hopes may be sent to England presently for treatment said that he is doing splendidly. His address at present is Lieut. Harry Rogers, Hotel Zeerust, Scheveningen.

TUG-OF-WAR COMMITTFES MEET TO-NIGHT

All Those Entrusted in Making Entries Should Be On Hand.

The tug of war that is to be pulled off at the Civic Holiday sports on Monday, August 12th is to be conducted on strictly tug of war competition lines. A committee from the Exhibition Board will meet any of thoose who intend entering the competition at the Munro House tonight at 9 o'clock to draw up rules and regulations and arrange for a further addition to the prize list.

A COUPLE OF GOOD POSTERS.

The Canada Food Board are putting before the public in a practical way the great need for saving food. Two educative posters, one originally published by the Toronto Saturday Night, and the other a coloured one issued by Rous and Mann, engravers, Toronto, are the latest addition to the educational department.

The coloured or "Fish and Vegetable Meals" poster, is the most attractive and artistic poster that has yet been issued by the Food Board. Messrs. Dous and Mann printed 5000 copies, and donated them to the Food Board. They attracted such widespread attention that an additional supply has been ordered and distributed. It shows in realistic colours the different vegetables in their raw state, and also a plate of fish, which would deceive any fresh water fisherman.

The other poster, drawn by R. C. Johnston, called "Remember, we must feed daddy too," shows a mother and her young son on her knee eating a frugal meal.

UNEARTH SCANDAL ARMY CONTRACTS

Seventeen Arrested on Charges of Bribery and Fraud.

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 24.—Extensive conspiracies, involving bribery and graft in connection with army contracts for rubber raincoats sent to soldiers in France were disclosed last night by Department of Justice officials, simultaneously with the arrest of seventeen officers and employes of fifteen manufacturing companies in New York and Brooklyn on charges of bribery, fraud or conspiracy.

PARIS TO EAT CHESTNUT LOAF

MEDICAL PROFESSOR URGES NEW INGREDIENT IN BREAD.

Labesse, professor in the medical school at Angers, urges the use of chestnuts in bread.

Chestnuts, which used to be sold in profusion in the streets of Paris, have disappeared from the market, he points out, and says a considerable saving in potatoes and wheat could be effected by using them in bread, according to a recipe which was demonstrated before the Academy of Sciences as long ago as 1881.

Allies Are Still Hammering

night in the region south of Bucquoy and northwest of Albert, says to-day's War Office report. Few prisoners were taken. The German raid on the British lines northeast of Bethune on the Flanders front was repulsed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY, Wednesday Morning, July 24. — French, British and Americans are still hammering the flanks of the Crown Prince's army. The Germans are known to have brought up fresh support forces at some points, but the Allies report the situation favourable.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, July 24.—Germans last night delivered a counter-attack in the vicinity of Vrigny, five miles southwest of Rheims, the War Office announced to-day. The attack was repulsed. There was great activity by artillery during the night along the front between the Aisne and the Marne, and northwest towards Rheims.

Order Rescinded.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, July 24.—A despatch said that German prisoners declared the Crown Prince has rescinded his order for a retirement and has declared to fight out on present lines.

General Foch is making the most of his opportunities in the Soissons-Rheims pocket without playing into German hands by the reckless expenditure of men. He is advancing where possible without a large toll of casualties, and is contenting himself with gains elsewhere under stiffening enemy resistance. At the same time the Allied Generalissimo is keeping the Germans guessing and interfering with their withdrawal of reinforcements from other parts of the line by splendidly timed local operations. The attack north of Montdidier yesterday while relatively void of geographical importance, was a great move tactically. In addition to capturing three villages and 1,500 prisoners he showed the German high commander the danger of weakening their lines to aid the Crown Prince.

Notable Advance.

In the Champagne the most notable advance in the main front recently is that reported on the west side of the salient. Official despatches report the Allies occupying the railway from Trossnes to Fereen Tardeno. This is at a point within five miles of the latter city southeast of Oulchy le Chateau. The operation and the pounding of the British in the Ordre Valley, on the opposite side of the salient, has resulted in an appreciable narrowing of the pocket.

PARIS, July 24.—An unofficial estimate to-day placed the German casualties in the recent Champagne fighting at 180,000. This figure is discounted in military circles.

PTE. T. E. PARK IS WOUNDED

Mrs. T. E. Park, 309 McDonnel street has received word from Ottawa that her husband, Pte. T. E. Park, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded in the head. Pte. Park went overseas with the 93rd and was transferred to another Canadian Battalion in France.

DOMESTIC CONSUMERS

Will Not be Inconvenienced If They Only Practice Economy.

NEW YORK, July 23.—The Coal Age, in its weekly review of the coal situation, says:

Owing to the shortage of labor, the production of anthracite is falling below the tonnage counted on by the industry when a distribution programme was worked out for coal year. With added manpower, the existing equipment and breaker capacity could get out at least 25 per cent. more coal. Through the loss of 33,000 men in the hard-coal regions since the war started, the nation has been deprived of the potential energy sufficient to produce 19,800,000 gross tons of anthracite coal a year.

To prevent a further drain of the already sadly-depleted forces in the hard-coal regions. Provost Marshal-General Crowder has ruled that all miners and mine workers in these mines be placed in deferred classification in the draft. It is gratifying, indeed, that these workers are to be left undisturbed in this highly-essential industry, as their services in the mines are vital to the successful prosecution of the fight against the Boche.

While the coal available for use this Winter will be intelligently distributed and no recurrence of the confusion of last Winter will take place, the requirements of the war industries are mounting so fast as to make it clear that there will not be enough coal for all. The Fuel predictions as to what will happen to non-war industries, but every effort is being made to bring to the attention of the public the necessity of conserving fuel. Some are anticipating that 50 per cent. of the non-war industries will be forced to suspend before Spring for lack of coal.

The work of supplying the domestic consumers with coal is going ahead more rapidly than had been anticipated, and there will be no inconvenience on the part of householders if they practice economy.

ENTIRE TOWN OFFERED FOR SALE

Shaftsbury, Derbyshire, Put on Market by the Owner.

LONDON, July 23. — Any man whose ambition is to own a whole town, will have an opportunity to satisfy his desire here this month. By direction of Lord Stalbridge, the owner, the entire town of Shaftesbury will be put on the auction block, including private houses, banks, postoffices, stores, offices, hotels and three saloons. The town is located in a picturesque part of Derbyshire, perched on the top of a hill in the midst of rolling farm country. The nearest railway is three miles distant, at Semley.

Sales of great estates are frequent in these days, when taxes are eating up profits, and many of the younger generation of the nobility are losing their lives on the battle fields. This is the first sale of an entire town which has been arranged.

STRATFORD ADOPTS COAL RATIONING PLAN

Follows Guelph's Method of Distrubution—Also Orders 500 Cords of Wood.

STRATFORD, July 23.—The City Council last night adopted the Guelph system of coal rationing whereby coal is divided among citizens equally on a percentage basis under the direction of the Fuel Commissioner. The Council also ordered 500 cords or more of hardwood from Algonquin Park, to cost the citizens $13 per cord, delivered.

TO LICENSE SUGAR USERS.

All Manufacturers Using Commodity in Products Must Get Permit.

OTTAWA, July 22. — The Canada Food Board has started to mail license application forms to manufacturers using sugar in the manufacture of their products, and who are not already operating under license from the board. MUSIC ON TWELFTH RAISED THE DEAD

Down in Smith's Falls they are showing proof of the fact that 12th of July music will raise the dead. A man in that town was supposed to have died on July 11th, and on the 12th he was placed in a coffin, sorrowing relatives being present to extol his many good graces. While the 12th of July festivities were going on he sat up in his coffin and greatly surprised all present. He was taken out of it and placed in a bed, but later in the day passed away.—Port Hope Guide.

Large Number of Wounded Arriving in Germany Disorganizes Railway Traffic.

GENEVA, July 22.—Railway traffic between the Rhine towns is greatly disorganized, owing to the number of wounded arriving daily from the French front in hospital trains. Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die, the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

FIFTY YEARS OF SERVICE

Sir Edmund Walker Celebrates His 50th Anniversary To-day

To-day Sir Edmund Walker will have completed fifty years of service in the Canadian Bank of Commerce and to the Canadian public. Sir Edmund started his banking career in the Hamilton branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce as a junior clerk in 1868. He saw service in several of the Bank's branches, and in 1886 was appointed General Manager. Eleven years ago he was appointed President.

It seems fitting that on Sir Edmund's fiftieth anniversary that the Bank should issue a new series of notes, especially as in design they seem to be indictive of the artistic side of Sir Edmund Walker's personality.

It has been the custom in the past for the notes of the various Canadian chartered Banks to be distinguishable by portraits of its officers, sketches of buildings, or something of this character, but in the new issue of the Canadian Bank of Commerce the symbolic designs are of a marked artistic character and much time and thought, as well as a high type of workmanship has been necessary in their production.

Note Issue.

Only the $5.00 and $10.00 notes will appear immediately, first going into the Bank's issue on Wednesday next. The whole series, however, will include in addition to the $5.00 and $10.00 notes, $20.00, $50.00 and $100.00 notes.

Few bank note engravers were competent to do the work upon the notes, and about a year's time has been necessary to perfect each particular note.

The remaining notes in the series will appear gradually during the next two or three years.

A description of the $5.00 note might be of interest. On the face of the $5.00 note the main feature is a group in the centre consisting of Mercury holding the caduceus, supported on the left by a goddess representing architecture, and on the right by another goddess representing invention, and holding in her hands the model of a flying machine. The note is surrounded by a frame of immortelles, fruits and vines.

The backs of all the notes of the series consist of a central group of Mercury and Ceres holding the British crown over the seal of the Bank,—the whole included in a frame of immortelles and other symbollic objects.

Toronto Doctor Had a Taste Of Hun Gas in February, 1914

Saw German Soldiers Kicked and Beaten on Drill Like Animals—War Long Planned—Civilians Have No Rights.

OFFICERS STRUT AROUND

Imagine a Canadian sergeant walking up to a recruit who was not drilling to his satisfaction and dealing him so terrific a kick with his heavy service boot that the poor recruit almost fainted! Imagine a lieutenant striding up to a private whose buttons were not polished to perfection, and striking that private full in the face when his clenched fist, then drawing his sword and beating the unfortunate ranker with its flat until he was black and blue!

Wouldn't there be a riot?

Yes, in Canada, but not in Germany, where such scenes are an everyday occurrence.

"The Germans are a lot of spiritless cattle or they wouldn't stand for the treatment the mass of the people receive from their military masters," quoth a young Toronto doctor, who was studying chemistry at Bender & Holbein's research laboratory in the Goebelstrasse, in Munich in February, 1914. "It makes you sick to see the way the German privates submit like dogs to the bullying of the sergeants and officers. I have seen recruits who did not goose-step properly receive the most frightful kicks right out on the public squares in sight of everyone.

Civilians No Rights.

"I have seen officers kick and strike soldiers for the slightest offence. You often see soldiers standing stock still, stiff at the salute with apparently no one in sight. Then you will glimpse an officer strutting in the distance. The soldiers are ordered to stand at attention from the moment the officer gets in sight until he is out of sight. Every civilian, no matter what his wealth or job, must make way for a German officer. If he doesn't get out of the way when a Hun lieutenant comes along the sidewalk the Hun will push him off. And woe betide the civilian if he resists or attempts to hit back. He will be arrested and punished. I was once pushed aside by a big slob with epaulets."

Chlorine Gas.

The doctor who narrated this saw one of the Hun professors in the laboratory in which he was studying, experimenting with chlorine gas. Little did the Toronto medico realize the terrible use it would soon be put to against his own fellow citizens, the gallant men of the 15th and the 3rd Battalions at Ypres.

"At first they treated me with open contempt in the laboratory. They thought I was English, but when they discovered I was a Canadian, for some reason they became more friendly. Probably they had it in view that when war came Canada would rebel. Professor Hoppe, one of the experimenters, spoke English and was fairly sociable. Before he discovered my nationality he said to me one day with a sneering smile: 'Oh, some day we will get you English.' His confrere, Holbein, though he, too, knew English perfectly, would never speak a word of it. They were both typical Huns and hated English heartily. One day a terrific, choking smell drove us out of the precincts of the laboratory. The air reeked of chlorine, though not so strongly as to strangle. Hoppe presently met me and remarked in answer to my question: 'We are just experimenting with a little gas.' It was the deadly stuff the Canadians got at Ypres."

BEN GREET PLAYERS

The Most Celebrated Shakespearean Players in Existence.

BEN GREET PLAYERS.

Everybody loves a Shakespearean play, and "The Comedy of Errors" is deservedly among the most popular. The Ben Greet Players will present this laugh-creating play the fifth evening of Chautauqua Week.

Known throughout America as one of the greatest Chautauqua attractions available.

Popular in the greatest play houses here and abroad, with a record of notable performances excelled by few theatrical organizations in the world.

Honored by appearances on the White House lawn before American Presidents and international celebrities.

An organization of outstanding merit—big in numbers—bigger in artistry—with a vehicle which has stood the test of time—a comedy with a punch, Shakespeare's immortal.

Ben Greet's players are thoroughly capable histrionic artists who have specialized upon Shakespeanean productions. The record of success won by the organization, not only on the Chautauqua platform, but in leading theatres of America, is the best possible assurance of their ability to please.

REPAIRS AT ZEEBRUGGE SMASHED BY THE AIRMEN

Two German Torpedo Boats Have Been Sunk in the Harbour and Canal Remains Closed.

AMSTERDAM, July 24. — Repairs which the Germans had made to the mole at Zeebrugge and the locks there have again been destroyed by allied airmen, according to the Telegraaf.

Two torpedo boats have been sunk in the harbour, it adds, and the canal remains closed. The German observation tower at Lysseweghe was also hit by the airmen.

Many casualties among the marines at this naval base and among the civilians are reported. Lysseweghe has been partly evacuated, but thousands of men from Heyst, Blackenburg, Zeebrugge and Ghent have been forced to work in the neighbourhood and on the mole.

MAY EMPLOY WOMEN AS FIRE-FIGHTERS

WINDSOR DEPARTMENT FINDS SHORTAGE OF PHYSICALLY FIT MEN.

WINDSOR, July 22.—Employment of women as fire-fighters in Windsor is not beyond the bounds of possibility, according to Fire Chief Defields. With the department under strength, due to a shortage of physically fit men, women may be asked to make applications for vacancies, the Chief said.

A scientist has discovered that hens lay eggs in the daytime because at night they are roosters.

THE LOSS OF KEMMEL HILL

By CANADIAN OVERSEAS

The los sof Kemmel is a grave matter for it is a key position, and the fighting on land is brought nearer the shores of England.

The place itself is only an abrupt hill rising to the height of 512 feet out of the Flemish plain. It is one of a range of hills running from the Belgian border due west, ending in Mount Des Cats, with its trappist monastry and Cassel Hill, with an odd little Flemish village perched on its top. Between are several other hills of like character and height, offering severe menace to any army which ventures to pass.

It has been said that the German plan here was a game of bluff. Perhaps so—but possibly there may have been a psychological consideration in it as well if not a very definite aim. The enemy know how we value the Ypres salient. It is on the borders of Belgium and they know what rivers of blood we have shed to hold these low ridges for the retention of the channel ports. With the loss of the range the channel ports would be severely menaced, and the salvation of those ports is a vital matter for us and for France. If Germany got to the Somme estuary or entered Calais or Boulogne, the result in each case would be unfortunate for the allies' cause.

But they are still a long way from both. And the allies have admirable defensive lines and possess many advantages.

This seems to be the last great effort of the Germans, and should it fail they are indeed undone.

—Canadian Overseas.

May, 1918.

SPORT CARRIES ON DESPITE AIR RAIDS

Sports of all kinds are thriving in Great Britain, despite the air raids of the Huns and the stress of war business. During the soccer season, which recently came to a close in Scotland, the total receipts amounted to nearly $60,000, of which the Government war tax was a trifle less than $18,000. Some of the games for the championship of the Scottish League drew 100,000 spectators.

Racing is booming and popular as ever, although now confined to Newmarket. On Derby Day there were eight races, and the victory of Gainsborough in the Blue Riband was a popular triumph for Lady James Douglas, who is the first woman to win the Derby. Her success was all the more pleasing because she is also the breeder of the winner.

Baseball is also taking a great hold on the English people, and in connection with the Fourth of July celebration King George was a prominent figure.

In making cake, the butter should be creamed first, then the sugar and yolks of eggs beaten into it, then the milk and flour and making powder.

SOLDIERS SWEAR THEY PAID $1,000 TO FRANKS. O'NEIL

Drafted Men Declare One-Time State Official Promised Their Release.

New York, July 23. — Two drafted soldiers testified yesterday at the trial of Frank S. O'Neil, formerly State Boxing Commissioner; Lieutenants Oswald L. Simpson and Leonard L. Mitchell, of the Quartermaster's Department, U.S.A., and Samuel Reichback, for conspiracy to violate the Espionage law, that they paid O'Neil $1,000 each to get them discharged from the military service or to have them transferred to the quartermaster's' department.

Pte. Isadore Latner of the National Army, declared he gave O'Neill the money in the Prince George Hotel, and Pte. Israel Ffankfater, of the National Army, said he delivered the money to O'Neil in another hotel. Latner also said that he gave O'Neil $200 to have Pte. Cecil Strouse released from military service, and that while O'Neill was pretending he would have them released from service or assigned to the Quartermaster's department he introduced him to Lieutenant Simpson.

Each soldier declared O'Neill not alone did not obtain his release from service or transfer to the Quartermaster's Department but he also failed to return his money to him. Latner admitted however that O'Neill did return the $20 he had given him to obtain Strouse's release.

Samuel Morel, hatter, of No. 23 West Fourth Street, testified that he "dickered" with Reichback to get his brother, Seymour Morel, out of the army "just out of curiosity." He said that Reichback had represented to him that for $3,000 he could obtain the release of Seymour from the service through a lawyer, whose brother-in-law was an influential man in Washington. He said his brother did not want to leave the service and in fact he is now in the trenches in France.

Newport Obeys Surf Ban; Farmerettes In Blue Pantaloons

NOT BATHING AT RESORT, BUT YOUNG WOMEN FARMERS APPEAR IN THEIR NEW UNIFORMS

NEWPORT, R. I., July 23.—Bailey's Beach, the most fashionable bathing place in New England, was devoid of bathers to-day for the first time in July in the histor yof Newport social colony.

The fact that the water was clear and warm and the weather excellent made many all the more anxious for their customary dip, but the government orders issued by Captain Joseph W. Oman, commanding the Second Naval district, were strictly obeyed. They are to the effect that no one shall enter the water hereabouts for three days, pending some important experiments in explosives.

Mr. Henry A. C. Taylor, president of the Spouting Rock Beach Association, was at the beach early this morning and gave instructions that all members should obey the order, which was done, although several wished to be allowed to take their own risk, but were refused.

Miss Dorothea Carroll's volunteer land army has adopted a new uniform. It consists of blue pantaloons with a smock of the color and a large brimmed straw hat with a blue band. On the arm are the initials "V.L.A." in red letters. Some of the young women, including the Misses Natalie and Enelie Winslow, daughters of Rear Admiral Cameron McRae Winslow, after working hard in their garden all the afternoon would not be denied their customary ice cream soda, and invaded Bellevue avenue today in their uniforms.

A LINQUIST.

"Does she really speak French as well as she pretends?"

"All the testimony I have on the subject is I heard her the other day tell her husband to send the shuffer to the garridge for the ottermobile."

HADN'T SEEN WELL DAY FOR 20 YEARS

Taylor Says Wife Is In Better Health Than He Ever Saw Her— Praises Tanlac.

"My wife has been a great sufferer from disordered stomach ever since I first knew her, but she is in better health now than I have ever seen her, and the reason is, she is now taking Tanlac," is what Richard A. Taylor said to the Tanlac representative the other day. Mr. Taylor lives at 3 Oak Street Place, Toronto, and is employed at the Consumers Gas Plant.

She always had a poor appetite and I don't believe I have ever seen her enjoy a good hearty meal like anybody else. What little she did eat seemed to sour on her stomach and the gas that formed from her undigested food would bloat her up till she felt perfectly miserable, and after meals she would often complain of a heavy feeling in her chest. Her food did not seem to do her a bit of good for she fell off in weight and I don't believe she has had a real well day till recently, in twenty years. Her nerves were shattered, she said she felt tired and worn out all the time, and she had so little strength and energy that her housework would almost break her down.

"I believe she has taken about every medicine there is on the market trying to get well, but nothing did her a bit of good until she got hold of Tanlac, and that is the only medicine she ever found that helped her any. One of her friends who had taken it, told her about it, so I got her a bottle. She has taken only four bottles so far and she is now feeling and looking so much better that her friends are congratulating her on her improvement. That stomach trouble has almost entirely left her and she is feeling stronger than ever. Why, she can do all her housework now without getting all tired out like she did before, and it sure is a pleasure to see how she enjoys her meals, like she does. Really, I was so taken up with the way she began to pick up after starting on Tanlac that I tried the medicine myself and it sure did me a world of good, too."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co, Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

NOTHING GLOOMY ABOUT SPLENDID CROPS THAT ARE RIPENING NOW

Farmers Themselves Have No Complaint, and That's One of the Surest Proofs That's All's Well —Bumper Harvest May Be Interpeted As Loyal Effort of Farmers.

REAPING BY AUGUST 1ST?

The jeremiads of the farmers in the seeding days of spring are perhaps forgotten in the presence of the most luxuriant and abundant crops the country has seen in years. In spring, as the sons of the farm were called up for military service, there were lamentations of the approaching plight of the country, especially the urban centres, for the farmers, some of them, threatened to feed only themselves, and there were predictions that the cities would pay for the inclusion of the rural boys in the draft.

To-day, however, the farmers themselves admit that there are on every hand promises of a golden harvest. Some of the fields are already ripening, the lush green of the maturing grain being touched here and there with the ripened colour of straw. Whole patches of this spreading gold are showing in the seas of grain throughout the country. The pea crop has rarely been so heavy, and spring wheat, oats, barley and other crops are all filling heavy heads. By August 1st harvesting should be general through out this county.

No doubt the farmers are as grateful as any class of the community that the prospects are so bright. In fact it would seem that in a patriotic effort they had exerted themselves in a great effort to secure as extensive a seeding as possible. In any case the farmer who failed to co-operate who blinded himself to the real stewardship of his acres, stands indicted by the Providence that has blessed alike the work of those who were with the country in its crisis and those who by their indifference and unmanly pet ulance were in effect against it. In many cases their fruits manifest their loyalty, and to the lasting credit of the farmers it should be realized that the most of them have loyally used their farms this summer in co-operation with the men in the factories and the men at the front, not omitting the women who are studiously saving food that was once thoughtlessly wasted.

DYING AIRMAN SEES HIS FOE DEFEATED

NEWPORT, July 24.—Dying in the arms of a Salvation Army supply truck driver, at the front in France, a British aviator, who had just been crashed to earth in a triangular battle in the sky, had the satisfaction of witnessing the defeat of his German antagonist by a French flyer just before he drew his last breath.

The struggle, according to a report reaching here, occurred just behind the allied lines and was witnessed by Ransom Gifford, eighteen-year-old son of Colonel Adam Gifford, head of the Salvation Army for New England. Gifford was hauling supplies to huts along the line when he was attracted by the air flight over his head. Suddenly one airplane shot downward in flames and crashed to earth less than one hundred feet from him. He ran to the wreckage and extracted the aviator, who was still alive.

Two French soldiers appeared and raced off for an ambulance. Gifford held the dying airman in his arms while the two watched the conflict still raging overhead. The French airplane put the German to rout, whereupon the English fighter, with a smile relaxed and expired.

Sailor collars are not smart. High collars that roll upward at the back and down in the front are not attached to coats. The collars that go on bodices of one-piece frocks and before they reach the collarbone, and the rest of the decolletage is untouched by any line of white.

Peterboro Organization Deals With the Housing Problem

Building and Loan Company Was Organized Here Thirty Years Ago

Thirty years ago the Building and Loan Company, organized for the benefit of the working man who, wishing to buy his home, was able to join this co-operative company and instead of paying rent, pay to the company so much a month and at the end of a given time own his own home. To-day, with practically the same board of directors, it stands a solid company with a balance of $20,000 in Victory Bonds.

The Society's Aim.

Mr. George Ball, who is an active member of the Board of Directors, when asked to-day what this society is doing towards the housing problem, said that if the working man had and would take advantage of the proposition offered by the company there would be no shortage of houses to-day as the company would gladly have advaiced such money as the prospective purchaser wished, for the asking. As it is to-day, the directors, who meet twice a month in the Ottawa Bank chambers, have many calls, but as to the number of applicants Mr. Ball was non-committal, saying only that scores benefit yearly where hundreds might.

On the board is Mr. T. B. McGrath, who has been an assessor for many years, and whose advice to those desiring to buy property is given free. The money paid back into the society is re-invested in the corporation of Peterborough, so kept in the place it is made. Mr. Ball deplores the fact that working men have not as yet reaped so great an oportunity for housing himself as has been offered.

At the meeting held a few nights ago to discuss the housing problem, as it has been called, not one member of this organization was appointed on the committee named.

HAS WORKED IN SIXTY-FIVE HARVESTS

To have worked sixty-five yearly break is a feat worthy of record, and Mr. Joseph Laidlow who is at present living at Brownton and a valued member of St. Alban's Mission is looking forward to accomplishing this as soon as harvesting begin.

Mr. Laidlow, who fas born in Yorkshire, England, i 73 years of age. He started work in the harvest field at the tender age of eight years and has never missed a harvest since. It would be interresting to know whether this contitues a record.

What the Real Estate Men Say

Workingmen Have Chance to Buy Homes on Easy Terms.

Following the publication in last night's Examiner, of the report of the public meeting on the housing problem, some real estate dealers have taken exception to the statement that working men had no chance to buy houses in Peterboro on easy enough terms to suit their means.

One firm state that they will have a number of houses ready to list for sale in a few days at very low prices, and easy terms.

One class of house is frame, and has complete three piece bath at a price of $1500.00, on terms og $100 down and $15.00 a month. The same house brick veneered for $1600 and $16.00 a month, and with an extra room at $1700, and $17.00 a month. They think such nice little homes as these with small gardens should meet the demand for the low priced workingman's home and surely as easy terms as could be asked by any one who had an idea of buying.

Trench hats of soft silk trimmed with narrow fringe are now in style.

Complete Statement of the Grievances of the Postmen

In response to Mr. J. H. Burnham's request the letter carriers fully set forth their case as follows:

Dear Sir,—

As requested we hereby beg to submit list of our grievances, and scale of pay of permanent and temporary letter carriers.

Scale of pay to men on the permanent staff:—

First year $2.00 per day, less 5 per cent. for retirement fund.

Second year, $2.25 per day, less 5 per cent. for retirement fund.

Third year, $2.50 per day, less 5 per cent. for retirement fund.

Fourth year, $2.75 per day, less 5 per cent. for retirement fund.

Fifth year $3.00 per day, less 5 per cent. for retirement fund.

To the above a war bonus from April 1st, 1917, was granted: $100.00 per year.

Scale of pay to temporary men is $2.50 per day until a vacancy occurs when they are placed on the permanent staff and their wage is reuced to $2. per day less 5 per cent retirement fund plus $100.00 per year war bonus.

Grievances:—

We demand that when a temporary man is appointed to the permanent staff his salary be increased and not decreased, for at the present time instead of drawing per day as a temporary he received only $2.22 after the 5 per cent. is deducted and the war bonus added whether married or single, which we claim is impossible to live on these days.

We also demand that a temporary man receive the same scale of pay as a permanent man as he does the work just as well as the permanent man.

We would be satisfied if all men started on whether temporary or permanent receive $1,000.00 per annum rising annually $100.00 till a maximum of $1,400 be attained or a commission be appointed to look into the matter and report within 14 days.

Yours truly,

On behalf of letter carriers of Peterborough, Ont.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with the writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Pardon me for saying you were wrong in your issue of yesterday, when you state that we have gone back a number of years in our postal regulations. In those times of stand and wait at the wicket, one had the satisfaction of knowing that who came first was first served. It is different with our present postmaster. I was one of the many that called at the post office for my mail, and noticed that the inside staff were in sympathy with the letter carriers and I did not for one moment expect to see anything different. Once every five minutes a person got a letter or told there was person got a letter or was told there was stood at the wicket for half an hour. I was standing back of these for 20 minutes.

Our postmaster looked out of the wicket and he looked over the crowd and picked on one of the late political work hands who caught the wink and was handed his mail from a side wicket. Another got the sign and stepped up to the little door to be opened again very likely a little later. Time rolled on and I, in disgust, strolled out.

No, Mr. Editor, it is not the days of long ago. The man first served was not at all in sympathy with the postmen. Oh, how he grumbled about them wanting more pay, how they owned motor cars and had everything heart could desire.

Of course we can understand why this man does not like a strike of government employees. Don't you know? I think I do.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,
Maurice E. Ketcheson.

Sir—

At the last session of parliament a bill to abolish what is known as patronage was passed and became law.

It had the effect of taking out of the hands of members almost the whole of their constituency's business which henceforth is to be transacted at Ottawa without any "interference" from the members. This idea was silly enough and some members protested against it, but instead of being given credit for an honest desire to accept and discharge their responsibility to their constituents, they were dubbed wirepulters, patronage men, etc. The truth of course was and always will be that if members are honest they should have as much as possible to do in the business relations of constituencies with governments leaving it to their own people to cut their heads off if they transgress. Members are not square and honest, they should not be elected. To elect them and then deprive them of the power of representing their constituents leads to just much trouble as the present postmen's strike. The members of the constituencies like the letter-carriers were refused a hearing and their correspondence was not even enswred. In Toronto the whole six members failed to receive even an acknowledgement of their letters and telegrams. Some of these days the utter folly of empowering officials at Ottawa to do as they like while members are ignored, will down upon the public again and as the Mail and Empire said on Monday, democratic principles involve democratic responsibility which cannot and must not be evaded by any patent process of centrailzation at Ottawa. There is no royal road to good business. It depends first as much upon the man as upon the method.

CANADIANS IN THE OLD LAND

Story of Ambulance Driver Has a Peterboro Interest.

An incident of the way Canadians find one another "over there" by the mere pass-ward of voice even when in the disguise of Imperial uniform, is told by Miss Snider, of the Army Service Corps, a daughter of Major Snider, R.N.W.M.P., and a niece of Mrs. Carnagie of Peterborough. The story is coroborated by Major Scarth.

Urgent Message.

Miss Snider had an urgent message one morning to go to Victoria Station to pick up a very severe case to take to the Perkins Bull Hospital on Putney Heath. Her first surprise was when she found the patient able to walk with the help of a cane to the ambulance into which, with a little assistance, he climbed.

He took a seat at the frone end, and, after the motor had started on its journey, he began a conversation with the pretty driver. (This story is built on a foundation of their two stories, finished off by a reading between the lines.) She replied as well as she could without taking her eyes off the business of driving, and by the time the hospital for Canadian officers was reached they had struck up quite an acquaintance, and each discovered that the other was Canadian.

Further questions and answers at the gate disclosed the fact of their respective names; and when the officer, Major Scorth, heard the name "Snider" he asked if by any chance she were any relation to Major Snider of the R.N.W.M.P. She confessed to being his daughter, and it turned out that Major Cearth had known the father in Western Canada, where he had spent many years, in the Yukon, later serving in South Africa.

Though Major Scarth was considerably over age, he was ready to serve his country again and got, on his way to France, as far as Dover. But one day he slipped on the icy hil-side and mroke his lef, fractured the knee-cap—a very difficult thing to heal — and spent several weeks in the Perkins Bul Hospital convalescing. No speeches in the officers' mess were more eagerly listened to thon the major's, as he always had some interesting stories, one of which was his meeting with the daughter of an old friend under peculiar circumstances.

A NINTH INNINGS WIN FOR THISTLES

Louis Yeotes' Team Wins Exciting Battle From Matthews-Blackwell Team by 6-5—Packers Came From Behind and Tied the Score in the Eighth Only to Lose Out in the Final Chapter.

The League standing.

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Thistles	5	1	.833
Riversides	4	1	.800
Orientals	2	3	.400
Matthew's-Blackwell	1	4	.200
Ol Laval	1	4	.200

The Thistles are still in front in the Twilight League race because they have won one more game than their nearest opponent, the Riversides. Incidentally the Thistles came near to dropping to second place when they met the Matthews-Blackwell team in a league fixture at Riverside Park last night. Louis Yeotes' team won by 6 runs to 5, pushing the winning run over the plate in the ninth but it was a tight squeeze and the game was the most exciting battle of the season. The Thistles took an early lead and when the Pork Packers went to bat in the eighth the Yeotes aggregation were 4 to 1 in front. The Matthews gang staged a rally that netted them four runs and when the smoke cleared away they were ahead 5 to 4. The Thistles came back and tied the score in their half and then Mahood's double and Neary's single with none out in the ninth broke up the game.

There was some rattling good fielding with a sensational one handed catch of Bartley's long fly by Coursey and a lighning fast double play. McLeod to Cherrett to Mahood featuring. The two second basemen McLeod for Thistles and Rahmel for Matthews, both had a busy night.

Neary pitched fine ball for the winners, and Close for the losers also worked well.

Thistle got a pair of cheap runs in the second. Shaw singled to start with and Jackson beat out a bunt. Ahearn's roller to Rahmel forced Jackson, Shaw going to third. Bartleg popped to Cunninghom and Shaw took the Matthews team by surprise when he tore for the plate.

Cunningham threw to Montgomery at third and on the latter's low throw to the plate both Shaw and Ahearn scored. Mahood ended the session by fanning.

In the third Matthews got one back. With one gone Montgomery hit to left, stole second went to third on Neary's bad throw to second and come home on Lowe's single. Cunningham flied to left and Coursey beat out a roller but Pillings best was an easy fly.

In their half the Thistles came through with another. With one down McLeod singled and stole second. Cherrett was safe when Montgomery fumbled his roller, McLeod going to third Cupoli's grounder was deflected by Close over to Rahmel who threw the bat to rout at first. McLeod scored. Shaw fouled out to Lefave to end the innings.

The Thistles made it 4 to 1 in the fifth. After Neary had grounded to Rahmel, McLeod singled and Cherrett drew walk. A double steal moved the runners up and Shaw's smash through first scored McLeod. Shaw stole second but Jackson grounded to Lowe.

There was no further scoring until the eighth when the Matthews aggregation came through with a rally that caused a bunch of excitement. Lowe first up was posed and stole second. Cunningham hoisted one to Ahearne who dropped it and Lowe went to third. Cunningham stole second. Coursey's single, his third of the night scored Lowe. Pilling tapped a roller to Jackson and Cunningham scored beating the throw to the plate. Rahmel flew out to Cherrett, Lefave rolled one to Neary and was out at first. Coursey crossing the rubber with the tying run. Close hit to Cherrett whose throw pulled Mahood off the bag and Pilling scored putting the Pork Packers ahead. Rehill ended the rally by fanning.

The Thistles tied it up in their half. Cupoli opened with a smashing single to left which Rehill failed to see. The batter was out trying to steal second. Shaw got a left when Pilling dropped his fly and stole second, scoring on Jackson's timely smash to left. Ahearne grounded to Rahmel and with Jackson on third. Coursey made a sensational catch of Bartley's long fly to right.

Matthews went out in order in their half of the ninth but the Thistles were there with the punch. Mahood first up walloped a double to left which Rehill apparently did not see and Neary smashed a single over second scoring Mahood with the winning dun and it was all over.

FORCED AT LAST TO ADMIT TRUTH.

German Newspaper says that a Million Americans are in France.

Geneva, Switzerland, July 23. — Americans were mentioned on Saturday for the first time by the Arbeiter Zeitung, of Vienna. The newspaper states that the Americans have changed the situation for the Entente nations, not only in the political but in the military phases of the conflict. The newspaper says:

"There is no further doubt that there are a million Americans in France. The genius of American organization has obtained stupefying results. Germany finds herself faced by three powers whose combined population is three times greater than hers."

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

One half pint of turpentine mixed with one half pound of beeswax makes a good floor wax. The wax is melted, then mixed with the oil and one half pint of drier.

Really good rubbers for canning will undergo the following test without a crease: Fold rubber and press tightly, then turn it over and fold in the same place.

Odd bits of cream can be put into a jar and kept in the refrigerator; when you have collected a quart, churn it and you will have one pound of delicious fresh butter.

To bake beans properly they should be kept covered with water until the last hour of baking. Then bring the pork to the top of cups and bake to evaporate the water from the beans.

WORRIED.

Willis—How is your garden coming?

Gillis—Very poorly. The directions on the package say to measure the seeds carefully, and it has taken me since yesterday to get the dimensions of seven of them, they're so darn small.

STORIES OF LISZT

How the Famous Master Played to a Hidden Audience.

A SURPRISE AT THE FINISH.

For a Moment it Filled the Hostess and Company With Dismay, but Proved a Case of All's Well That Ends Well—A Snub For a Tactless Baroness.

Liszt resented people counting on his playing. When Baroness K. inveigled him into promising to take tea with her, because he knew her father, she, on his accepting, invited a lot of friends, holding out hopes that Liszt would play. She pushed the piano into the middle of the room—no one could have possibly failed to see it.

Every one was on the qui vive when Liszt arrived and breathless with anticipation. Liszt, who had had many surprises of this sort, I imagine, saw the situation at a glance. After several people had been presented to him, Liszt, with his most captivating smile, said to the hostess:

"Madam, where is your piano?" and looked all about for the instrument though it was within an inch of his nose.

"Oh, monseigneur! Would you, really * * * ?" advancing toward the piano, triumphantly. "You are too kind. I never should have dared to ask you." And, waving her hand toward it, "Here is the piano!"

"Ah, yes," said Liszt, who dearly loves a joke, "I wished to put my hat on it."

Very crestfallen, but still undaunted, the tactless baroness cried, "But, monseigneur, you will not refuse, if only to play a scale—merely to touch the piano!"

But Liszt, as unkind as she was tactless, answered, coldly: "Madam, I never play my scales in the afternoon," and turned his back on her and talked with Madam Heibig.

On another occasion Liszt wrote to me that he would bring some of his songs to try over at 5 o'clock. I inclose his letter. What a chance, thought I, for me to give pleasure to some of my friends who I knew were longing to see him. Although he had said entre nous in his letter, and I knew that he really wanted to look through the songs alone with me, I could not resist the temptation—though it was such rank disobedience—and said to them:

"Liszt is coming to me at 5 o'clock. If you would like to hear him, and consent to be hidden behind a door, I will invite you."

They all accepted with rapture and were assembled in the little salon before the time appointed. The door was left open and a large screen placed before it.

Johan fetched Liszt in our carriage, as he always does. I received him and the book of "Lieder," which he brought with him. (Only Johan and Nina were present.) He opened the book at "Comment disaient ils?" one of his most beautiful songs, which has an exquisite but very difficult accompaniment. He played with fairy fingers, and we went over it several times. I could see the screen swerving and waving about, but Liszt's back was turned, so he could not see it.

After we had finished tea was served, and then he said, "Have you heard my 'Rigoletto?'"

"Yes," I said, and added, "but not by you."

"Well," he said, "I will play it for you. Your piano is much better than the one I have. It is a pleasure to play on it."

The screen, now alive with emotion, almost tipped over. After "Rigoletto" he played "Les Soirees de Vienne," and this time the screen actually did topple over and exposed to view the group of badly frightened ladies huddled behind it. I shuddered to think how the master would take this horrible treachery.

He took it better than I expected—in fact, he laughed outright. The ladies came forward and were presented to him and were delighted. I am sure that Liszt was, too; at any rate, he laughed so much at my ruse and contrition that the tears rolled down his cheeks. He wiped them away with his pocket handkerchief, which had an embroidered F. L. in the corner. This he left behind and I kept it as a souvenir. — Mme. de Hegermann-Lindencrone in Harper's Magazine.

Behind the Times.

Speeder—Think of it! Here's this old earth making one rotation in twenty-four hours, the same as it did 6,000 years ago.

Jinks—Well, what of it?

"Great Scott, man! Can't we devise some way to speed her up a little?"—Life.

Either.

You can't judge a man by his actions. The fellow who deliberately walks in front of a quick moving auto may be a perfectly proper object of sympathy, and then again he may be a professional damage seeker. — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

By the Foot.

"Growing? Why, every time I get home from a trip I find that that baby of mine has grown another foot."

"Gee! She'll look like a centipede pretty soon."—Houston Post.

Do be sincere. If you haven't the courage of your own opinions you will never do much.

OMENS IN BASEBALL.

A Manager's Method of Turning a Superstition to Account.

Writing on baseball matters in the New York Tribune, John J. McGraw has this to say about the superstitions of the players:

"I recognize the superstitions of ball players. For example, back in 1904, when Bowerman was with the team, he came to me one day and said:

"'As I came in today I saw a team of white horses driving past the Polo grounds. That's a good sign. Watch me kill the ball this afternoon.'

"He did. The belief in his superstition had given him confidence. Bowerman spread the tidings of the white horses around the clubhouse. The next day somebody else saw the white horses, so the day after. By the end of the week the entire team was hitting like a house on fire. They all believed in the superstition, and it gave them confidence. One day my shortstop, Dahlen, remarked:

"'Funny those white horses always happen to drive past the ball park just when we are coming into the clubhouse. It's certainly lucky.'

"I heard him and couldn't keep back a smile. On the day Bowerman told me he had seen the horses I made up my mind that everybody else would see them as long as it helped their batting. So I engaged a man to drive past the Polo grounds every day. That is a fact, and it shows the lengths to which a manager will go to cater to ball players' superstitions."

DALTON'S EXPERIMENT.

Showing What a Genius Can Do With Crude Apparatus.

The great English chemist Dalton was a schoolteacher. He worked without a laboratory and with crude apparatus, mostly made by himself from simple materials. Here is an example described in his own words:

"Took an ale glass of a conical figure, two and a half inches in diameter and three inches deep; filled it with water that had been standing in the room and consequently of the temperature of the air nearly; put the bulb of the thermometer to the bottom of the glass, the scale being out of the water. Then, having marked the temperature, I put the redhot tip of the poker half an inch deep in the water, holding it there steadily for half a minute, and as soon as it was withdrawn I dipped the bulb of a sensible thermometer into the water, when it rose in a few seconds to 180 degrees."

He then determined the temperature of the water at the bottom after five minutes, after twenty minutes and after an hour and found that it rose gradually from 47 to 52 degrees. This simple experiment proved that water has the power to conduct heat, which had been denied by no less an authority than Rumford.—Youth's Companion.

The Conscientious Chinese Child.

One of our missionaries, writing of a little girl in the school under her care, says: "Last night Wah Noo told me she wanted to be 'a' whole Christian,' as she called it. So we had a long talk and tried to think of all the wrong we had done that day and confess it to each other. She counted these wrongs on her fingers: 'I did not brush my teeth as you told me to do; I did not take off the lower sheet on the bed when I made it up, and I know I ought to always; I got angry with one of the girls at school; I did not use my soap when I took my bath; I did not try to do my example in multiplication; all the other girls did theirs wrong, so I thought I would too.' "—Cor. Christian Herald.

Poetry and Punctuation.

In his poem "Narcissus" Robert Bridges, the English poet laureate, has banished the comma entirely, so that a procession of adjectives may be taken, at the reader's option, as separate qualities or as qualifying each other. Thus one may call his hero "almighty wondrous" or regard him as being both. Mr. Bridges' principles of punctuation are not obvious. He loves the exclamation mark, using it five times in the twenty-eight lines of the poem, and sprinkles dashes about with prodigality. He adopts the colon and does not slight the interrogation mark, while using now and then a full stop.—Chicago News.

A Lucky Escape.

"I owe my success in life to politics."

"I was not aware that you were a politician."

"I'm not, but I thought I was once and got myself nominated for an office that, if I had been elected, would have paid me about $1,500 a year. I was so badly beaten that I dropped politics forever and took up the business that has brought me a fortune. It makes me shudder when I remember that if I had been elected I might now be afraid of doing something that would deprive me of the lodging house vote."—Chicago Herald.

Reckless.

Mr. Sapleigh—No, I'm not feeling very well, you know. I have thought once or twice lately— Miss Keen—Good gracious! And then you wonder why you are feeling ill. You really should not do such reckless things.—Boston Transcript.

The Retort Courteous.

Nell—That girl has a finger in everything. Belle—Yes, she's had it in some engagement rings you'd like to have.—Baltimore American.

God educates men by casting them upon their own resources.—Newell Dwight Hillis.

CAMERA USED NOW TO CANDLE EGGS

French Apparatus Which Shows Up Bad Eggs Without Fail.

Bad eggs are unfailingly detected by the camera. This has been demonstrated in France, where experiments are being conducted with a photographic egg-testing apparatus, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The idea of utilizing the camera instead of the human eye for candling is a new one. So far it has not been carried past the laboratory stage, but even though obstacles prevent its commercial utilization at present, it is of more than passing interest. Eggs are held in a half dozen oval holes provided in a metal plate. Their large ends point toward a common centre. While intense light is passed through them, they are photographed. A powerful lens is used and an exposure ranging upward to three minutes is made. The result is a picture that shows the size of the air chambers in the eggs.

PUBLIC MEETING FOR POSTIES HAS BEEN POSTPONED

There were no developments at this afternoon's meeting of the postmen

A telegram from the Federated Secretary, Mr. McMordie, made it clear that the men are expected to wait his notification before returning to work. This telegram was filed last night and was probably delayed by the congested business in the telegraph offices. It simply referred to to-day's meeting in Ottawa and urged the men to wait until the result of the conference with the Cabinet is announced.

Mayor Duncan and Ald. Jones attended the afternoon meeting. The postmen decided to postpone the public meeting which Mayor Duncan had called for this evening at the request of the men. It was felt that a favorable announcement might be received late this afternoon thereby forestalling the motion that would have been passed to-night.

Hence the meeting is held over pending the outcome of the Ottawa conference.

The postmen regret very much that the postal difficulty interferes with the quick distribution of a mail from overseas and also the separation allowances which came in from Ottawa However, this is a coincident which they could not foresee or help. The men point out that their demands have been ignored since 1914 when they were first promised redress by Ottawa.

It was believed that the strike would be over by evening; the men expect that the Government will meet them now in their request for a decent living wage.

Ald. Jones said that his sympathies were with the men. He had no idea their wages were so small until the strike was declared. The average labourers get 40 cents an hour, Ald. Jones said and he felt that the letted carriers had just as hard work.

WILLIAM LANGFORD PASSED AWAY TO-DAY

Was a Prominent Figure in Public Life—A Loss to Peterboro.

William Langford, senior, 592 Water street, one of the pioneer residents of Peterboro, died this morning at his home after a very short illness.

He was born in Queens County, Ireland, in 1846 and came to Ontario when a boy of 9 years of age. Later when a young man he settled in Peterboro since when he has been an active worker in all branches of public life for the uplift and building of the city. Since '85 as a contractor he has been instrumental in building most of the larger public buildings in the city numbering among these the former Quaker Oats plant and parts Court House besides many of the of the more important business places o fthe city. He was one of the oldest members of the 57th Regiment in which he held the rank of major. This he joined in '64 and in '66 was active in the Fenian raid and has for many years been a conspicuous figure with the veterans in their parades.

WILLIAM LANGFORD, Sr.
Whose death occurred early this morning.

In religion he was a Presbyterian and a regular attendant of St. Andrew's church where he will be greatly missed. In politics he was a staunch Conservative and always an active supporter of the candidate for that party in the city leaving no stone unturned in forwarding the interest of the man he supported.

He leaves of the immediate family his wife, five sons and two daughters namely: Alderman Wm. Langford jr., E. Percival, Edwin, Pte. Robert with the infantry overseas and Flight Lieut. Ernest in France, Miss Dorothy and Miss Roma at home.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon at 2.30. Service at the house conducted by Reverend Mr. Rowand. Interment at Little Lake Cemetery.

Served in the City Council.

The late Mr. Langford's interest in public affairs found impression in seven years of service as a member of the municipal Council. From 1888 until 1891 inclusive, and during the years 1896, 98 and 99. It was in 1899 that the elections were by a general vote, changing from the ward system, under which Mr. Langford had represented the North Ward. In July, 1905, when Peterborough was incorporated a city, and a Court of Revision was established as a seperate body instead of being a committee of the Council, Mr. Langford was appointed chairman which position he retained until 1918.

In In 1901 and 1902 he was a member of the Board of Education. During the past winter he assisted in the revision of the Building By-law which the Council is still holding in abeyance. In these and by other means, Mr. Langford bore a full share of his responsibility as a citizen.

He has left a permanent stamp on the North Ward. He was a cabinetmaker by trade, and occupied the furniture shop where Mr. J. D. Craig is now carrying on business. When he sold his business he launched into the building trade for which he immediately showed himself well fitted. The first house he built was on George street in the north end. He built most of the dwellings in the block bounded by George, Antrim, Water and Smith streets. The store occupied by Mr. D. Kerneghan, and houses on Water street south of Antrim were also constructed by Mr. Langford who contributed largely to the upbuilding of that section of the city.

Other and larger works will remain monuments to his ability as a contractor. Trinity Methodist Church, the Collegiate Institute, the Bonner-Worth factory, the Turnbull Departmental Store, the first steel frame building in Peterborough, the first Quaker Oats plant and several schools were all erected under his supervision. For a time he was in partnership with Mr. Richard Sheehy.

Active in Military Affairs.

Mr. Langford was a member of the 57th Regiment for 40 years, from 1863 until 1904. He joined as a private and held the rank of Major and Quartermaster when he retired. He was a veteran of the Fenion Raid in 1866, and was for years Captain of No. 2 Company of the 57th, this company being located in Peterborough at that time before the entire regiment was transferred to this city.

In short his years were full of activities from which the community derived larger benefit than accrues from most men's daily work and interests. In this respect his life was exemplary. He belonged to that group of citizens who worked for the upbuilding and progress of Peterborough in those days before the C.G.E. Company located here and gave Peterborough its first real impetus.

CANADA'S PART IN THE STRUGGLE

Canada Is a Heavy Producer of Munitions—A Series of Advertisements.

The Department of Labour and the Imperial Munitions Board, are running a series of advertisements in the press showing what Canada has done in the way of producing munitions for the common cause.

Fifty-five per cent. of all shrapnel, 42 per cent. of all the 4.5's; 27 per cent. of all the 6-inch shells used in the whole British army, is Canada's contribution. This record can only be maintained by uninterrupted co-operation between employer and employee, and all labour differences should be submitted to a board of arbitration. The Canadian munitions output is as important now as it was at the beginning of the war. The Huns' U-boats are now almost completely mastered, and the shells are going across in an almost uninterrupted stream to the front line trenches.

STABBED IN STREET FIGHT

Lindora Marcatulio in St. Joseph's Hospital With Grave Wounds and His Alleged Assailant Charged With Attempted Murder.

ON PARNELL STREET

LINDORA MARCATULIO in a serious condition from two knife wounds in the back.

LOUIS MARCATULIO, his cousin, slightly wounded on the hand.

NICHOLAS DEBERARDINI, in jail on a charge of attempted murder.

Stabbed twice in the back, Lindora Marcatulio lies dangerously wounded in St. Joseph's hospital; and, charged with wounding or causing bodily harm with intent to commit murder, Nicola Deberardini is in jail, following a fight on Parnell street last night about 11 o'clock. One of Marcatulio's wounds is high up between the shoulder blades, and the other, the more serious of the two, is under the left arm and it is feared that the left lung was pierced. Dr. Malcolm McCulloch, who is attending him, preferred to withhold for the present the results of his examination, but speaking generally he said that the man's condition was none too satisfactory this morning.

From the police reports, the scrap developed out of what seems to have been trifling causes. In the afternoon a number of Italians were playing cards for soft drinks at Luigi Marcatulio's store on George street, north of Sherbrooke street. The stakes were soft drinks, and it is stated that Deberardini refused to pay his share. Words were passed, but the incident blew over without any portent of the evening's trouble. Luigi Marcatulio is a cousin of the injured man.

The Aftermath.

In the evening the Marcatulios were sitting on the verandah of Lindora's house at 471 Parnell street, the police learned. A little group of friends and relatives were with them, when Deberardini approached.

It is alleged that the latter stopped in front of the house and uttered in Italian a threat against Lindora Marcatulio and all his relatives. From that point things broke fast and furious, and in a clamour of shouting.

The stories the police gathered seem to lack coherence in some details, probably because the darkness obscured the progress of the fray to the eyewitnesses, but in the principal features the reports dovetail closely. Marcatulio fell first with a wound between his shoulders. His cousin, Louis, dealt Deberardini a smashing blow on the head with a chair and sent him sprawling in the middle of the road.

By this time quite a crowd had gathered. The excitement was at a fever point. To the shouts of the men were added the cries of the women when they saw a dark, sinister stain spreading on Lenodra Marcatulio's shirt. It seems to have been the women who helped him to rise, and as they supported him up the steps of the house, Deberardini, who had recovered from the blow with the chair, struggled from the dust, and rushing up the steps is said to have stabbed Lindora Marcatulio the second time, the knife entering his body below the left arm. Louis Marcatulio closed with Deberardini and tried to wrest the knife from him, but in the attempt was cut on the hand and quickly resorted to the chair again. He brought it down on Deberardini's head, and with that the hostilities ceased.

Police Called.

P. C. McIntosh was on duty at the corner of George and Charlotte streets at 11 p.m. when Samuel Gentile arrived with the news of the scrap. P. C McIntosh hurried to the south end and found Lindora Marcatulio on a chair in his home at 471 Parnell street. He ordered the man put to bed and rendered first aid. Sergeant Reid and P. C. Dainnard located Deberardini at Nicholas Febbo's house, 493 Parnell street and placed him under arrest. The police searched for the weapon which the accused is charged with using, but were unable to find it.

Deberardini was remanded for a week by Magistrate Rush this morning.

Blood stains on his head indicated the wounds caused by the chair with which Louis Marcatulio hit him twice.

Lindora Marcatulio's blood-soaked undershirt shows two punctures, each about one inch wide, which coincide with the wounds. The clothing is all of fine quality, including silk shirts that would make a fitting display when new in any smart haberdasher's shop.

P. C. McIntosh's first aid is said to have saved the man's life, as he was bleeding freely and was sitting on a chair with the blood gushing at every breath.

ALLIES STILL ADVANCING AT SEVERAL POINTS ON THE WESTERN BATTLEFRONT

Enemy Counter Attacks Were Broken Up—British Gain Ground—Allies Crossed the Marne in Pursuit of Enemy.

A RICH HAUL

Canadian Press.

PARIS, July 22.—Strong counter attacks delivered last night by the Germans on the front between the Ourcq and the Marne were broken by the Allies, the war office announced today. Allied positions have been maintained.

Enemy counter blows were delivered in region of Grisolles seven miles north west of Chateau Thierry and Bezu—St. Germain and four miles north of Chateau Thierry. North of the Ourcq and between the Marne and Rheims the enemy reaction was limited to artillery fire.

Violent Storms.

PARIS, July 22.—Violent storms in many districts in France have done serious damage to crops. The thermometer in Paris yesterday was 91.

Canadian Press.

BRITISH OFFICIAL

LONDON, July 22. — Further ground has been gained by the British in the Hebuterne region on the front between Albert and Arras, the war office announced today. The British likewise in conjunction with the French carried out a successful enterprise to the south of Villers—Bretonneaux east of Amiens in which prisoners were taken. German trenches were entered during the night by British raiding parties at several points on the front including Neuville, Vitasse and north of Bailleul and Prisoners were taken.

Germans Fall Back.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 22.—South of River Ourcq yesterday under pressure from the west and from Franco-American troops which crossed the Marne, Germans fell back rapidly and last night the Allies were on a line marked by the villages of Grisolles and Epieds, representing advance of five miles from west and three miles from the south. South of the Marne the Franco-Americans made rich haul of material. Germans evidently mean to hold on at all costs to their flanking positions in the mountain of Rheims and on the plateau above Soissons. On the main field between Aisne and Marne, the Germans were seen driven back a considerable distance. They been pushed back over the Soissons - Chateau Thierry road at several points.

Between Marne and Rheims, the British, French and Italians took two towns and a number of prisoners.

STILL ADVANCING

WASHINGTON, July 22.—General Pershing's communication says, the Americans by actual count took seventeen thousand prisoners and five hundred and sixty guns and are still advancing steadily.

Canadian Press.

LONDON, June 22. + American troops yesterday crossed the river Marne between Charteves and Gland east of Chateau Thierry and captured wood of Barbillon.

Call for Help

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 22—Crown Prince has been obliged to call for help from his cousin Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria.

German divisions from army in north has been hurried down to protect the western flank of the defeated army which has been driven back over the Marne and ejected from Chateau Thierry by the Franco-American troops.

Using Gas Shells.

LONDON, July 22.—Germans are stubbornly resisting the French crossing of the Marne, but the French have succeeded in getting two elements over at Mezy and Courcelles which are constructing footbridges under heavy fire. Germans are using gas shells in large number.

In Albania.

ROME, July 22, (Official)—Italian troops are continuing to gain ground in the bend of the Devoli River in Albania. Advancing troops yesterday captured hundred prisoners and captured seven machine guns.

DECISION OF SUPREME COURT IS BINDING ON ALL PARTIES

Principle Laid Down Has to be Followed by Courts of Inferior Jurisdiction—R. B. Bennett Leaves Ottawa.

DESTINATION UNKNOWN

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, July 22.—The decision of the Supreme Court on Friday in the Gray case is a matter of common practice and is binding, on all courts or judges below. In any case where the Supreme Court lays down a principle it has to be followed by courts of inferior jurisdiction, whether or not they may concur in it. The only court which could reverse the judgment of the Supreme Court is the Privy Council.

R. B. Bennett, K.C., left the capital on Friday last without divulging his intentions regarding the habaas corpus proceedings initiated by him at Calgary. In a general way he had no apology or excuse to offer for having precipitated a controversy which compelled a special session of the highest tribunal in the land.

"The plighted word of a nation should be kept," said the former member for Calgary. Some of Mr. Bennett's friends and associates at Ottawa showed an undoubted coolness towards him ,but that did not appear to disturb his equanimity, however, the judgment once delivered, he left on the first available train, it is believed here for the West via Toronto. It is not in the power of Mr. Bennett, to have the judgment in the Lewis case in Alberta referred to a higher court for the Alberta tribunal gave a verdict in favor of his client.

The government here contemplates appealing the case to the Supreme Court in October though doubt still remains as to their power to do so. It is not customary for the crown to appeal a habaas corpus judgment when that judgment is given in favor of the applicant. That is why C. C. Robinson, K.C., of Toronto, was directed by the justice authorities to find a case in Ontario which could be brought direct to the Supreme Court for adjudication and that is why Messrs Chrysler and Geoffrion were employed to plead the case for Gray who himself bore no part of the expense. A speedy judgment was desired so that the validity of the order-in-council might be established. It will be for the Supreme Court in October to say whether it has jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the Bennett case. Meanwhile the working of the regulations cannot materially be interfered with.

THE WEATHER

Sunday was a warm day, the warmest we have had this season, and probably with as high a temperature as we will have this summer. Ninety-five degrees in the shade were the official figures. Saturday's' were 87. The lowest temperature last night was 64 degrees, as compared with 50 to 55 degrees, the usual figures reached.—W. P.

The Germans Used Cavalry

A Formidable Force of German Horsemen Wiped Out.

(United Press Despatch.)

(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 22.—American troops, facing their first cavalry charge of the war, utterly wiped out a formidable force of German horsemen east of Rheims and defeated what apparently was an ambitious attempt to cut the Allied lines and reach Chalons.

So far as is known it is the first time the enemy has employed cavalry since the counter offensive began.

Broke Up Attack.

Immediately afterward the same American unit broke up a combined attack of infantry and tanks. The Americans held an important sector on a slight rise behind a chalk coloured hill, over which were the enemy positions. When the German cavalry topped the hill and swept down upon the Americans they ran into a unit which has a remarkable record for sharpshooting.

Opening up with machine guns, automatic rifles and Lee-Enfields, the Americans quickly dropped men and horses. The artillery joined in, adding to the slaughter. The cavalry dwindled until only a handful remained. These galloped back over the hill to the German lines.

STRIKE IS AVERTED

Bombshell Fell in the Shopmen's Camp Last Tuesday—Threaten to Cancel Charters.

STRIKE BALLOT

Montreal, July 22. — It was announced this morning that there will be no general strike of railway shopmen in Canada, at least for the present.

On Saturday afternoon the shopmen's committee in conference at the Alexandra Hotel, adjourned indefinitely, and the western members left for their homes the same night. Returns from the strike ballot showed clearly it would be impossible to tie up the railways effectively, especially in the east. While the west came out strongly for a strike, twenty eight hundred out of three thousand shopmen in Winnipeg, voting "yes," only one local lodge in Montreal voted to strike.

A bomb shell fell in the shopmen's camp last Tuesday in the shape of a telegram from the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labour, in Washington, giving notice that a strike would entail cancellation of all railway union charters in Canada.

The result was as above stated, the west holding for independence and the east for international fealty.

SLAV SOLDIERS HAVE DESERTED IN LARGE NUMBERS

Over Five Hundred Were Shot and Three Thousand Arrested.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, July 22.—British wireless service reports serious mutinies and revolts in Bohemia and Hungary. Jugo-Slav soldiers have deserted by the wholesale and escaped to the mountains after killing their officers. At Manaros-Szjet, 150 officers and 500 Czecho-Slovak soldiers who mutinied, were shot and three thousand others arrested.

Local Postmen Still on the Job

Peterboro's "posties" were carrying on today the same as usual but it is understood tha ttheyhave adopted a policy of watchful waiting for the back salaries they are expecting Pending further information there was nothing new in the situation, but the letter carriers have reached a decision that unless the promises made them are fulfilled something is going to happen to the smooth working distribution of the mail the citizens enjoy daily.

POSTMEN ON STRIKE

The Letter Carriers' Strike is Confined to Toronto—Mails Tied Up

HIGHER WAGES OFFERED

(Special to Examiner.)

TORONTO, July 22.—It is expected in postmens strike will be of short duration. The men have been offered three dollars a day and it is expected they will accept it.

OTTAWA, July 22.—At the meeting on Friday night last the Ottawa carriers think the Toronto postman should await the decision of the dominion convention in September.

Meantme the government has declared that a bonus of $150 will be immediately given to men who are receiving less than $1,200 a year and of $100 to those receiving between twelve and fifteen hundred a year. This bonus, it is stated, is in addition to the war bonus granted in 1917.

A CABINET MEETING

When it comes to the question of raising maximum and minimum salaries to $1,400 and $1,000 respectively the Government contends that this is something which involves an amendment of the civil service act and that it is for parliament to deal with such a phase of the question. Postmaster General Blondin declares that the whole matter of salaries will come before the Cabinet Council when the Premier and his colleagues return. Meanwhile he advises the men to accept the bonuses and remain at work.

The civil service commission has instructed the post office department to disregard the provision of the civil service act in replacing striking employees under the act the commission makes all appointments to the service it is realized, that to replace strikers it will be necessary to employ a large proportion of women.

NOT RECOGNIZED

OTTAWA, July 22.—There has not been no walk out of postmen so far as Ottawa is concerned. The local carriers have refused to recognize the request of Toronto postmen who voted to strike today. They declare that they regret this but state that it is in accordance with the decision of the Allied Trades and Labor Council.

450 ARE OUT.

TORONTO, Julp 22.—Letter carriers this morning considered the Government offer of increased wages and decided to continue their strike.

Four hundred and fifty carriers are out and there is no delivery or sorting of mails.

HAVE CANADIAN WOMEN ILL-SHAPED FEET?

An interesting interview with a prominent Shoeman who makes the statement that Canadian Women are a quarter of a century behind the times in shoe ideals—He says they still bow to the Fetich of shoe sizes, while the American woman buys a shapely shoe in spite of the size.

THERMOMETER WAS UP TO 87 TO-DAY.

The highest the thermometer registered to-day was 87 degrees, but the air was damp and sticky and the heat severely felt. While the temperature has not registered as high as it did last year, the heated spell has set in a week earlier than it did in 1917, when the dog days came the last two weeks in July and the first week in August.

FARMERS BENEFIT AS RESULT OF THE CO-OPERATION SALES

Splendid Success Marks the Handling of the Wool Graded to Guelph—Opposition to Extension of Time for Use of Grade Stallions.

THE SHEEP-BREEDERS MEET

GUELPH, July 18.—The 38 representatives of the Agricultural Department from the majority of the counties of Old Ontario who are in annual convention here spent a busy session in attendance at lectures on soil fertility by Professor R. Harcourt of the O. A. C., drainage problems by H. Scott, of the College Drainage Department, and later visited the Winter Fair building, where they witnessed a demonstration of the work of receiving weighing and grading of wool sent in by farmers from all parts of the province. The amount of wool received for co-operation grading and sale has this year totalled 700,000 pounds to date, and consignments are still arriving, though the busiest part of the season is over. The main part of the clip has been sold to Canadian mills at prices that average 10 cents higher for all grades than was received last year for the wool graded and sold at Guelph.

Dr. G. C. Creelman, president of the Ontario Agricultural College and Commissioner of Agriculture for the province, acted as chairman at the meeting following the luncheon provided by the Ontario Sheep Breeders' Association, at which the agricultural district representatives were guests. He congratulated the sheep breeders on the success of their undertaking in co-operative wool-growing and complimented the officers in charge of the work on their faithful attention to the interests of the consignors, paying particular tribute to R. W. Wade, secretary of the Sheep Breeders' Association who is largely responsible for the success of the work.

John Newstead, Mayor of Guelph, welcomed the guests and members of the Sheep Breeders' Association present.

Dr. Creelman, in introducing the Hon. G. S. Henry, said that he was glad to be able to say that in the new Minister of Agriculture we have a man with a training in agriculture who cannot be equalled by any other in the province.

Advantages of Co-operation.

The Minister of Agriculture spoke particularly to the district representatives, whom he met yesterday as a body for the first time. He promised to be present at a session of their conference at the O.A.C. later in the week, when he would make it his business to get closely in touch with representatives and their work. He said that the work of co-operative gathering of wool is an example of what opportunities are possible for the farmers in disposing of their products, comparing the prices obtained at the co-operative sales with those paid to individual sellers of wool. He foretold a great future for co-operation, and added that the district representatives should make it their business to encourage co-operative selling. We know that our farmers of today are business men, and as high figures exist now for products of the farmer we can look with confidence to big production, in spite of the shortage of labor and big expenses entailed in producing. He referred to the new dog law, which so favorably affects sheep breeders, as an evidence of the up-to-date legislation passed by the Ontario Government and pointed out that in addition to arranging for the interest of the farmers by such means, the Government is always prepared to lend active aid to any scheme for the advancement of agriculture through educational channels.

Mr. James Douglas, of Caledonia, president of the Ontario Sheep Breeders' Association, among other speakers, paid high tribute to the efforts of R. W. Wade, and gave the following account of the week accomplished. This season 3,450 growers have shipped their wool to Guelph for grading and sale, only one county of the province being unrepresented. Up to date 700,000 pounds of wool have been received Mr. Douglas expressed regret that of the amount received about 35,000 lbs., of the wool had been consigned to the rejected class owing, he said, to the presence of burrs, chaff and dirt in the fleece. This situation, he said, was improving year by year. He suggested to the district representation that they further improve the condition of the wool clip by informing the farmers in their districts of the exact requirements of the purchasers of wool for manufacture.

Horse Breeders Meet.

Following the sheep-breeders' meeting a conference of representatives of the Ontario Horse-Breeders' Association, stallion enrolment board and agricultural representatives was held to discuss the matter of the distribution of pure-bred stallions in the province. Wm. Smith, M.P., president of the Ontario Horse-Breeders' Association, presided and informed the district representatives that the association had decided to be present to meet them on the invitation of Secretary R. W. Wade, who had suggested that great benefit to the horse industry might result from the efforts of the representatives in encouraging the breeding of good horses in their several districts. This matter was discussed at length by the representatives and members of the Horse-Breeders Association. C. F. Bailey pointed out that from the secretary's figures it could be seen that about 600 grade stallions will exist in the province next year when the law against their use comes into effect. It would be unfortunate to antagonize the owners of these stallions, he said, and he expressed the hope that the district representatives would do all in their power to bring about the substitution of pure breds for these grades. It has been suggested to gather a number of pure-bred stallions at Ottawa or elsewhere for sale to stallion owners. Mr. Bailey suggested the encouragemen of horse-breeders' clubs. Good heavy horses are hard to get at present, he said, and the situation is largely due to the fact that the farmers are careless in their selection of a stallion. Nothing would be of greater benefit to a county district than the institution of a club for the purchase of a pure-bred stallion.

"I Need Hardly Say"

how thankful I was to get out alive, and fully made up my mind that I would write and tell you how useful Dr. Chase's Ointment was," writes a survivor of the Gallipoli Peninsula campaign. "We found that it afforded instant relief from poison from shrubs and bushes, and got to using it for all manner or minor wounds and grazes."

One Man Creates a Lot Of Excitement at Omemee

Arouses the Whole Neighbourhood in an Effort to Get a Few Cows Out of the Grain—Omemee News of Interest.

Great excitement was caused in this vicinity early last Sunday morning by what was thought to be the cries for help of a drowning man which seemed to come from the direction of Green Landing. One of our citizens north of the village heard cries and immediately ran towards the house and sent in an alarm to the telephone office where central called to Mr. Percy Parsons, who is an expert oarsman to go to the rescue.

A number of other citizens awakened by the shouting, ran down to render any possible assistance, even the village doctor was ready with the necessary equipment to revive the victim. After searching for some length of time and making inquiries of all who are accustomed to go up and down the river, and finding no trace of an accident the party was reluctant to give up the search. However after much wonder and anxiety the searchers were relieved to find that the excitement was all caused by a man with great lung power calling for he p to get his cattle out of his grain.

SUMMER HEAT HARD ON BABY

No season of the year is so dangerous to the life of little ones as is the summer. The excessive heat throws the little stomach out of order so quickly that unless prompt aid is at hand, the baby may be beyond all human help before the mother realizes she is ill. Summer is the season when diarrhoea, cholera infantum, dysentry and colic are most prevalent. Any of these troubles may prove deadly if not promptly treated. During the summer the mothers' best friend is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and keep baby healthy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE RAISING OF MR. GILBERT THOMPSON'S BARN IN OTONABEE.

It was "bees" of this kind that added a picturesque touch to rural life in the days when they were common. Mr. Thompson is a city man living on Aylmer street, and the farmers have evidently found him as jovial and kindly as did his neighbours in the city. This barn is 100 x 40 feet. Mr. George Sloan is the carpenter in charge of the work. Mr. Thompson purchased this farm last winter and stripped many acres of wood for city fuel.—Photo by Roy.

SAFE PEOPLE MAKE A SAFE DEMOCRACY

A Mere Democratic Form Does Not Insure Freedom and Right Government—Selfish, Dishonest and Immoral Individual Lives Will Ruin Any Nation.

MUST HAVE GOOD CITIZENS

Of all the illusions that have possessed mankind none has a longer or more consistent record of disappointment than the notion that peace and happiness are to be found in a form of government. From Euphrates, 2,500 years before Christ, to the present congress the ingenuity of man has has been exercised to discover some formal way by which his conduct in regard to his fellow-man could be regulated to common satisfaction. Democracy, pure- selected delegated; autocracy, theocracy, all have been tried and retried with new hopes ever leading to new failure. For man has always striven to blame his own shortcomings of his form of government neglecting the simple truth that only in himself lies the secret. Democracy as a form of government is no cure-all for social ills, though democracy as a rule of individual conduct would go far toward removing those vexations of existence which so far have defied the skill of the wisest lawgivers.

2,000 Years Ago.

If this seems to be an impossible task, one that was undertaken some two thousand years ago and is yet so far from completed, we can take another view of the effort for democracy. We can see our efforts turned to the prevention of the military, political, and economic growth of Germany which would give that nation eventual domination over the earth, including ourselves. We can look upon this war as one of self-preservation pure and simple. But that is a selfish war in which several democracies have joined for the protection of their own interests, political and economic. In this case the safety of democracy depends on how thoroughly we win the war, how powerless we leave Germany to resume it either by force of arms or economic force. There is nothing altruistic in this view; it is purely self-interest, and it guarantees nothing for the future in the way of peace on earth beyond that which we are able to impose by the methods we are new using.—T. J. Dillon in- Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

The Struggle For Amiens

By CANADIAN OVERSEAS

AMIENS.

The great battle in France is at a standstill for the moment.

It is a struggle for Amiens; a struggle for Ypres and Arras—any place that gives an opening to the sea.

For some time past all our thoughts have concentrated on Amiens. Up to this battle the town retained much of its old life, a gay place full of life and enthusiasm; all through the war it has kept its sprightly civilian life as has perhaps no other town in the British war zone.

In 1914 the Germans reached the city, stayed there little more than a week and then hastily departed—put to flight at the battle of the Marne.

Soon Amiens came into the British war zone, but with this peculiarity it has been left to this day under the French sentineship. On entering or leaving you have to slow up at the challenge and you salute the French blue as well as the British khaki.

In the early days the city was bombed, but the cathedral was not touched. The cathedral, as every reader of Ruskin knows, is the most beautiful and the most wonderful thing ever made of stone. Like many cathedrals here it is badly placed—hemmed in by a mass of poor architecture, but the thing itself is matchless. To-day it is in great peril, for if the Hun finds he cannot take the town he will leave few buildings standing.

A glance at the map will reveal the importance of Amiens. The Somme here navigable feeds Amiens, as well as do four valuable railway lines. Then, too, its position in relation to Abbeville is important. The value of the town is strategically basic. The eight or ten miles which now part the enemy from it gradually drop down a steep switchback into a plain. All these factors urge the Hun to his supreme effort and to-day the old cathedral city has become the symbol of our hopes. If they capture Amiens they have seized one of the most important centres of traffic in Northern France—a place where many railways and roads converge, and they will imperil our contact with the main French force and open up other grave possibilities.

It has aroused the British nation once more. There has been no such stirring up of the spirit of our people since the first months of the war—the soul of the country is again aflame; the wild enthusiasm of the early days is replaced by the stoutest resolution. It is a fight to the death, and there is no blenching. When all is said the great struggle is an infantry battle, and it is as true to-day as ever that the infantry arm is the queen of the battlefield.

The infantry with the aid of machine guns will probably decide the issue in spite of the many innovations the war has produced.

This battle cannot be compared with the battle of the Marne or the first battle of Ypres. Both of these were miracles, and we have no right to count on a third at this stage. The truest parallel is the battle of Verdun. Both sides are putting forth their fullest strength and making their supreme effort. What has happened has partially transformed the character of the war on the western front.

The Germans have restored the war of movement over the greater part of the front—a thing they have tried to accomplish ever since they forced trench warfare upon us. It is now open warfare and at a time when it is most advantageous to them, on account of the thousands of troops released from Russia. It is unpleasant to be forced out of land which we thought we had forever—such is the hypnotic effect of trench warfare—but with trench warfare on an elaborate scale the war might go on for years.

In a war of movement rapid changes take place. We may even lose Amiens, but the loss of Amiens, valuable though it is, would be insignificant, and the daily shifting of the line which seems so much to us after the intensive trench fighting, is rendered unimportant compared with the general issue.

In the end our armies should benefit greatly by open fighting and finally gain the hoped for victory.

ARRAS.

After Amiens, Arras is probably the most observed town in Northern France to-day. Like Verdun in 1916, so Arras to-day is the mighty hinge on which the battle line swings.

Arras illustrates how difficult it is even for years of shell fire from heavy artillery, to get a large town. In 1914 the French and Germans had a tremendous fight for Arras. Our armies were busy in Ypres so we did not observe it. The town was shelled heavily, and finally the Germans sat down in one of the suburbs and stayed there until they had to go at the battle of Arras in 1917.

At some points only eight or twelve yards separated our trenches from the enemy's, but the two sides saw nothing of each other for the trenches were in the thick of buildings. Before the battle of the spring of 1917 a system of tunnels was built linking up underground quarries and cellars in Arras and suburbs which provided safe quarters for a great number of troops and long subways led to the trenches. All these underground billets were electrically lit.

Despite years of shelling, Arras is rebuildable. The civic buildings and the cathedral are in ruins, a few houses have not yet been touched, but the majority are in ruins. In a way the ruins of Arras are different from those of Ypres, Bapaume and Peronne. Bapaume is only a heap of rubbish. In March, 1917, the enemy mined it to pieces before he left, leaving only the town hall, but under that he had left a slow trap which took eleven days to work and killed all who settled in it. So Bapaume, like Ypres, is mere rubbish, and Peronne is about as dead; but Arras shows houses here and there where one or two walls are carried away, and within everything is as the family left it. Clothes still on the wall, children's toys still in the cupboards, endless little signs of family care and pride, a testimony of the French wife's neatness and frugality.

BETHUNE.

Bethune until the war was a busy thriving town in which the remains of an old Artois fortress blended picturesquely with the brick buildings. But is is not this that attracts the Hun and makes his efforts for it so persistent. His reason is that important canals join there and the town itself lies on the Pas-de-Calais coal fields.

For months he has tried to bomb it out of existence; and it was no uncommon thing for the inhabitants to be driven into their cellars half a dozen times a night by Hun aircraft. Some streets are more or less intact, others have big gaps blown in them. Corner premises stand tottering, with the lower stories ripped away, supported by shattered beams. They lean over in the most fantastic manner, giving the impression that they must fall at any moment.

In the half destroyed building the people do a thriving business. All the timid and those who had nothing to keep them there fled long ago. Others remained and carried on, a contemptuous shrug and a malediction were all they vouchsafed the Bosche. Such is the brave French spirit that has helped Bethune and many another town through long dark hours.

BAILLEUL.

Each place has its own special importance, often made important by the war. Such is Bailleul, or the civilians this place dropped into oblivion early in the war. He may remember of reading of fighting near there in 1914. But for the soldier is it different.

It was the mecca to which he would willingly walk ten miles or ride twenty to visit, even with the restricted meals, for it stood unharmed by shell fire and life was so quiet there and full of the little commonplace gossip which took you away from the war.

So, for the men from the trenches of Ypres, Hill 60, Hooge or Sanctuary Wood, it held pleasant memories.

Behind lay the level miles of Flanders, the burning ruins of Ypres, the church tower of Poperinghe, Dixmude and occasionally the faint trails of smoke from the steamers from Dunkirk. Before lay France with the slag heaps of the mining district near Bethune in the distance, and Bailleul lying among the hop fields in the valley beneath.

And now the smoke curls up from the ruins of the town, and it is only a place in the memory.

PETERBORO SIXTY YEARS AGO

As already observed, this emigration was conducted under the auspices and at the expense of the British government. The expenses attending it amounted to £21 5. 4. sterling per head. Each head of a family was located upon 100 acres of land. He had a small log house built for him, and was furnished with 15 months provisions. In addition to these he received 1 cow, 1 American axe, 1 auger, 1 handsaw, 1 pickaxe, 1 spade, 2 gimlets, 100 nails, 1 hammer, 1 iron wedge, 3 hoes, 1 kettle, 1 frying pan, 1 iron pot, 5 bushels seed potatoes, 8 quarts of Indian corn; and, if they were very poor, blankets in the proportion of one to each grown person, and one among three children. The number of persons actually located by Mr. Robinson in 1825 in this district was 1,878; 621 men, 512 women, and 745 children. The result of the first year's labour, given by Mr. Robinson in his evidence before the Parliamentary Committee, was as follows:

1386½ acres of land cleared and fenced, at £4 per acre	£5,548
87,799 bushels of potatoes, at 1s.	3,389 19 0
25,623 bushels of turnips, at 6d.	640 11 6
10,438 bushels of Indian corn, at 2s. 6d.	1,305 16 3
363½ acres of wheat, sown in the autumn of 1826, 2 pounds per acre	828 0 0
9,067 lbs. of maple sugar, at 4d	151 2 4
40 oxen purchased by their labour, at £7 each	280 0 0
80 cows, ditto, ditto, at £4 10s each	360 0 0
166 hogs, ditto, ditto, at 15s each	124 10 0
Halifax Currency	£12,524 19 0

It has been said of this emigration, or more properly of the plan upon which it was conducted, that it proved abortive; that the Emigrants contented themselves with living upon the produce given them by the government, trusting to Providence, rather than in their own well directed labours, for the future. But the above statement of the result of their first year's labours in the wilds of America, furnishes an effective refutation of this statement, and justifies to the fullest extent the character for industry which their chief on every occasion gave them. Among the tabular statements will be found a detailed account of the emigration under the auspices of the Hon. Peter Robinson, to which, as being the first settlement upon an extensive scale in these counties, considerable interest naturally attaches.

In the year 1826, His Excellency Sir Peregrine Maitland, then Governor of the Province of Upper Canada, who had taken a deep interest in the immigrations of 1823 and 1825, visited the new settlements in this district. Addresses, breathing a spirit of deep gratitude to the government for their removal to this country, a high appreciation of the kindness and constant solicitude for their welfare evinced by Mr. Robinson, and a warm attachment to the British throne, were presented by the emigrants settled in the townships. One address, a verbal one, from the English settlers on the Communication Road of Smith, pointed out in unmistakable terms the great advantage that would accrue to the settlement, if a good mill were erected instead of the apology already alluded to. His Excellency appears to have taken the hint, for immediately afterwards the mill, now known as Martyn's, was erected under the superintendence of Mr. McDonell, and at the government expense. So important an acquisition to the comforts of the settlers was duly appreciated by them, as the address to the Earl of Bathurst, then Colonial Secretary, in the following year, amply testified. This mill was afterwards sold to Messrs. Hall and Lee who continued to work it for many years.

During the same year a number of gentlemen, settlers in this district, met together for the purpose of deciding upon a name for the new town, the reservation for which had been made as early as 1818, and the survey of which had been completed in 1825. The choice was not difficult to make. The eminent services of the Hon. Peter Robinson in the settlement of the country, and the high estimation in which he was held by all who had come in contact with him, suggested the propriety of a more lasting tribute being paid to his name. Hence the choice of the name "Peterborough," a name which continually calls to mind the services of one, who though laying no claim to being the founder of this little colony, was justly entitled to be considered as among the most active promoters of its settlement.

FENELON FALLS FLOUR MILL WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE

The Building Was the Property of Of the Town.

Fenelon Falls, July 20. — Fire broke out at an early hour yesterday morning in the large stone building near the dock, which has been leased and operated by Mr. J. H. Brandon as a grist mill for many years. The alarm was sounded shortly after four o'clock, the fire spreading rapidly through the interior of the building. Everything in the main building was destroyed, including a quantity of grain. The flour which was in the annex, was saved by the efforts of a number of the citizens who carried a large number of sacks containing it to a place of safety. The fire brigade worked manfully to save the building, machinery and contents of the mill, which are a total loss. The stone walls, which for a great number of years have been a landmark for miles around the village are still left standing, the wooden annex also escaped. A great loss of revenue to the community will be felt as a result of the fire as the building was the property of the town. Some insurance was carried.

Beware of Poison Ivy; Danger Season Now

THREE LEAFLETS WITH WHITE BERRIES IDENTIFY PLANT THAT PRODUCES SERIOUS AND PAINFUL EFFECTS.

Berries red—have no dread;
Berries white—poisonous sight;
Leaves three—quickly flee.

This "jingle of the jungle" is perhaps more practical than poetical, as it will help the memory in distinguishing between the poison ivy and the non-poisonous plants it resembles. At this season people are continually asking: "What is poison ivy? What does it look like? What is the cure?"

Poison ivy has three leaflets and white berries. The Virginia creeper, which it resembles closely, has five leaflets, and purple berries.

However, it has been said that the small greenish flower of the poison ivy in early spring is followed by purplish berries in the fall; so the surest test at all seasons is the difference between the leaves of the poisonous and harmless plants.

Another member of the poison ivy family is the poison elder. It is a short or small tree, usually about 12 feet in height, although sometimes it grows to a height of 30 feet. It is found in swamps and low marshy places. The berries are white.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 21.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 21.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 21 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

FRUIT DEALER ADVISES CITIZENS TO GO AFTER OWN BLUEBERRIES

Scarcity of Labour Will Tend to Keep Price High—Canners Are Rounding Up Supplies in the Grimsby District—Reason For High Price of Raspberries.

BLACK CURRANTS SOAR

Canners are offering 24c a box for red raspberries in the Grimsby district, it was stated this morning by a local dealer, and this accounts for the local retail price of 35c. At that figure they take a place in the front rank of war luxuries, and many a citizen will hesitate a long time in search for a reasonable excuse for indulging in this bit of extravagance, while those with long purses will never feel the pinch, and some may not even come to know of the difference.

Locally, however, it is believed that the price must fall considerably below 35c. There are no canning factories in this district, and the price will be regulated only by the demand from local consumers.

Pick Blueberries.

"Tell the people to get busy and pick their own supplies of blueberries," said one dealer this morning. "There will be a scarcity in nearly all fruits, and the citizens needn't expect ordinarily moderate prices."

Black currants are selling for $3.00 a basket at the shipping points. This is nearly 300 per cent. increase on old prices, and is explained by the assertion that a few black currants go a long way in making jam. Their peculiar taste is so marked that it will permit a generous dilution of apple pulp. Other fruits do not offer this particular trade economy, it is stated, and hence there is a general scramble for black currants.

Blueberries will certainly not be cheap, although the crop is said to be a heavy one. Last Sunday, fifty-one automobiles were counted at Scott's Mills, near Burleigh, and eight miles further north there were others. Before starting on one of these picking expeditions, a tender-foot in the rock country should acquaint himself of the most expeditious method of gathering the berries.

Local prices of blueberries will be high because of the scarcity of labour. The story is told that at Bobcaygeon a foreman on a lumber drive quit work to gather blueberries, which brought 18 cents a pound in 'Caygeon. And he was earning $3.50 a day on the drive.

The soaring prices of berries will doubtless encourage many citizens to go into the country after wild raspberries, which are beginning to ripen.

East Peterboro Registration

The returns for the registration of the man and woman power of Canada in the district of East Peterborough, have just been sent in to the Canada Registration Board at Ottawa.

While the report has been about completed, for some days a few minor details had to be obtained before the report could finally be submitted. The fact that the registration day was about the last day of the school term, many of the school teachers, who acted as deputy registrars, had dispersed for the holidays, so when further details were asked for a delay was caused in locating them, and this caused some delay in completing the returns. Naturally also, in a district of such wide area, being nearly sixty miles in length and thirty wide, and in most parts inaccessible except by stage or car, there has been some delay in obtaining many details necessary to make the report complete.

Few people have any conception of the immense amount of detail such a work as the registration of man and woman power of the country involves. If such a work is to be of any service it must be accurate and reliable. In compiling the necessary information, the registrar availed himself of the clerical help of the Nelson Typewriter Company, where it was done most efficiently.

The Registration.

The information secured by this registration will be of immense benefit to the government in shaping legislation and conditions for the future. Our arch enemy has had the benefit of such knowledge for many years, and it has enabled them to intelligently legislate for their country and bring it to such a degree of efficiency as we have to acknowledge they possess at the present time. If our Empire does not want to be handicapped in the world race in the future, as they undoubtedly have been in the past by German efficiency, they will have to take every advantage possible of the means at their disposal, not the least of which the knowledge they have obtained by the registration of man and woman power of the Dominion.

Too much praise cannot be given to the teachers of the schools, who acted as deputy registrars at the several booths, for the splendid and patriotic manner in which they carried out the work assigned to them. This is the first time they have ever been entrusted with such a public task and it stands to the credit of our educational system that they have such a splendid and patriotic body of teachers in charge of the education of the youth of our country.

Divided Into Districts.

The whole riding was divided into districts and a prominent resident was asked to have a general supervision over the locality in which he resided. These district deputy-registrars gave their time free, and in many cases supplied their own cars or modes of conveyance free of charge. Special mention should be made of the splendid work done in this respect by the Rev. R. McEachern of Keene, Mr Matthew Breckenridge of Westwood, Rev. Percy Robert of Indian River, Rev. W. H. Noble of Norwood, Mr. John Davidson of Havelock, Mr. Robert Duff of Lakefield, Rev. D. Clare of Warsaw.

The registrar was greatly assisted also by Public School Inspector Richard Lees, who took great pride from the fact that the teachers under his supervision were asked to take such a prominent part in such an important national undertaking and who did such credit to themselves.

A Big Rush.

Most of the registration was done prior to registration day, so there was no great rush at any of the registration booths on that day. Some surprises at the largeness of the totals at the more populous centres and the smallness of the totals in the less populous districts. This is partly accounted for by the fact that many of the female registrants were averse to letting it be known—especially to one of their own sex—as to their age and other personal matters.

In such a rural constituency it was rather surprising to find that so many men who had farming experience (over 400) offered their services to help on the farms during harvest. Especially was this so at Havelock, where there are so many railroad men who offered almost to a man to assist on the farms if required.

The government in this time of stress called for voluntary workers to assist in this important work, and their appeal was not in vain. Those who have assisted and given their time and services free have the consciousness of knowing that they have done "their bit" to assist in "winning this war," and are entitled to the thanks of the people at large. That the country has been saved a very large expenditure at the present time, when our government have to resort to such strenuous means to provide for the boys at the front, is a matter of mutual congratulation.

The total number of registrants was 9,246, of which 4,473 were males and 4,773 were females, making a majority of 300 females over males.

Over Two Hundred Registrars.

There were two hundred and thirty-nine persons acting as deputy registrars and assistants.

The names of the deputy registrars who had charge of districts, are as follows:

Rev. R. R. McEachern, Keene district.

Matthew Breckenridge, Westwood district.

Dr. Hess (Reeve), Hastings, S. E. Asphodel district.

FARMERS ARE NOT SUFFERING

SEVERAL OF THEM REPORT LOTS OF HELP.

Casual conversation with a number of the farmers at the market this morning unearthed the fact that none have had any trouble with the help problem. All reported "plenty to do but someone ready to do or doing it." and in many cases the fact that women are adapting themselves splendidly to conditions and working in the field. "We won't need any help to take in the hay because there is none this year but the grain crops are splendid. Potatoes are exceptionally promising," was the general opinion. The farmers are confident that, unless we have unusually strong winds, the apple crop will be good.

WAS WELL KNOWN IN PETERBOROUGH

TORONTO, July 18.—Rev. John Salmon, who for more than a quarter of a century was a well known clergyman in Toronto, is dead in California, according to news which has just reached Toronto. It is seven years since the Rev. Mr. Salmon left Toronto to take up work in California. While on the Pacific coast he has been most active in all religious work, and although he was in his 88th year, preached three times on the Sunday preceding his death. His presence was always noted at all gatherings connected with the religious welfare of Toronto when he was here, and he was also actively interested in foreign missions. He made several trips to foreign countries for missionary conference. One of such trips was taken about a year ago. Bethany church, of which he was the pastor in Toronto, stood where the present General Hospital is now located.

The deceased was well known in Peterborough, having preached here on many occasions. He frequently occupied the pulpit of Bethany Tabernacle in this city, and will be remembered by the older residents of Peterborough.

DIVING RECORD IS MADE BY A SOUTH SEA ISLANDER

MADE A DIVE OF 205 FEET AT SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, LAST MARCH.

A new world's record for high diving was made at Sydney, Australia, late in March, during a water carnival for the purpose of raising war relief funds. A Solomon Islander named Aick Wickman dove 205 feet, which easily surpasses any existing figures for such a feat. Wickham, a swimmer and diver of note, who is employed by the Sydney trolley service, was persuaded to attempt the dive as part of a lengthy program of acquatic events held at the Deep Rock swimming pool. A high platform was erected near the top of the cliff-like side of the pool and at the announced hour for the dive there were thousands of spectators present to witness the perilous feat.

The Solomon Islander admitted that when he reached the top of the tower and looked down at the pool he was badly rattled, and desired to quit, but the fear of being accused of cowardice forced him to go through the performance. He leaped off, and was able to retain both consciousness and equilibrium for the first 150 feet, after which all became blank. Wickham struck the water in a semi-prone position with such force that he was completely knocked out for more than ten minutes. When taken from the water he was bleeding from a dozen places about the body.

The Story of the Stairs

Every time you go up stairs you can test your state of health — the condition of your blood.

Do you arrive at the top of the stairs breathless and distressed? Does your heart palpitate violently? Do you have a pain in your side? Perhaps you even have to stop half way up, with limbs trembling and head dizzy, too exhausted to go further without resting. These are unfailing signs of anaemia. As soon as your blood becomes impoverished or impure the stair-case becomes an instrument of torture. When this is so you are unfit for work; your blood is watry and your nerves exhausted, you are losing the joy of an active life and paving the way for a further break down and decline. In this condition only one thing can save you. You must put new, rich, red blood into your veins without further delay and so build up your health anew. To get this new, rich, blood give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, and they will give you new vitality, sound health, and the power to resist and throw off disease. For more than a generation this favourite medicine has been in use throughout the world and has made many thousands of weak, despondent men and women bright, active and strong.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Obeying God: Matt. 4:18-22; John 14:22-24; James 1:22-27.

Golden Text: If ye love me ye will keep my commandments.—John 14:15.

1. Matt. 4, 18-22, Why did Jesus call men to be his apostles who were very busily engaged in other occupations?

2. If these men had refused to follow Jesus, preferring to continue the profitable ocupations in which they were engaged, what would have been their condition in eternity?

3. If God should call a Christian man to any position, and he refuses, why should he or not remain a Christian?

4. John 14:22. Why is it that worldly people have no experience of God's presence with them, and no realization of the love of Christ in their hearts?

5. Verse 23. Would you say or not, and why, that no person is a true Christian who commits wilful sin?

6. What reason would you give for the fact that the majority of professed Christians seem to have no experience of the love of God as a constant realization nor of Christ always dwelling in their hearts?

7. Verse 23. What is necessary for a Christian to do in order to have eyes to see, ears to hear, and to have sensible and constant fellowship with God?

8. Jesus teaches here that it is our duty and privilege to "keep his words," and by implication that we do not love him unless we do so; what then is the standing of professed Christians who openly confess that they go contrary to his words daily?

9. What proportion of professed Christians whom you know, including yourself, habitually keep Jesus' words?

10. Verse 24. Would you say or not and why that not loving Jesus is a sin in itself?

11. Does God make it possible or not and why for everybody to love Jesus?

12. If a man truly resolves and by the grace of God is determined to "keep Jesus' words" how long will it be before the love of Jesus springs up in his heart? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the Club.)

13. Verse 24. Jesus' words are God's commandments; are they easy or hard to keep, and what is essential to keep them? Give your reasons.

14. James 1:22. Of how much use is going to church or making a profesion of religion if we are not "doers of the word?"

15. Verses 23, 24. A man who glances at himself in a mirror and forgets what he looks like, is like a man who sees his disfigured moral image, and the gospel restorer in God's mirror, and turns away from it; what is the fate of such a man?

16. Verses 25, 26. See II Cor. 3:18, and say how nearly a man's moral image should be like God's, and how it may be attained?

17. Verses 27, 28. What part does the control of our tongues play in living to please God?

18. Pure religion is to help the needy and keep ourselves unspotted from the world; to what extent can we do this?

Death of Three Cows From White Paint Should Be Warning

Farmers who use white lead in the painting of their stables should be warned by a recent experience of the Nicholls Hospital Board, in which three of the hospital's cows died after eating old paint that had been thrown into a remote part of their pasture with other rubbish. The pasture was rented from Mr. James Finnie, who after using the greater part of a pail of high grade white lead, threw the container into what seemed an out of the way part of the field with other rubbish. The cows wandered finally to this part of the field and in their foraging sampled the contents of the paint pail. They soon after became sick, and although a veterinary was called they died from the effects of the white lead. The experience proved a costly one in the loss of the three cows, but it should be heeded by the public especially by owners of cows to whom the moral will be obvious.

Allies Are Still Hammeirng Enemy at All Points

German Reserves Are Coming Into Action and the Enemy Is Preparing to Make a Stiff Stand on Certain Sectors.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

(United Press Service.)
(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, July 24.—The German drive southward between Soissons and Main De Massiges, was one of three pushes they contemplated this summer. Two toward Paris and one toward the Channel Ports, according to information from prisoners. The recent effort which resulted so disastrously and gummed up the whole progamme, was aimed toward Chalons and Epernay. The French and Americans have captured German officers who were temporarily appointed mayors of French cities to be occupied, including the two named. Captured Boches also declare that a large number of divisions were in Flanders for a drive against the British, while they were concentrating 85 divisions (42,000 men) for the Champagne operations.

Failure of Drive.

The Flanders drive was to follow the Crown Prince's push as soon as the latter had attacked and a certain degree of success attained.

Many prisoners captured near Soissons have been identified as recently removed from Flanders, indicating the failure of the Champagne drive which disrupted the contemplated Flanders campaign.

German officers say the third drive towards Paris was to be undertaken late this summer or early in autumn, if the events of the one just stopped did not carry clear through to the coveted city. Prisoners are doubtful as to whether these other two drives will be carried out as planned, since a great number of extra divisions were used on this front last week and many of them, were so badly shattered they will not be fit for use as storm troops inside of four months. The majority of intelligent German prisoners, however, believe the Kaiser will start another offensive this summer, an even a larger scale.

Lack of Confidence.

In regard to the confidence of the German people which is admitted to be at low ebb, many prisoners frankly say they do not know, and do not care, about Germany's future concerning drives. They are sick of war.

During the enemy retreat, German officers say the Allied artillery fire compelled them to fall back so fast they were unable to maintain an effective counter-barrage, and while the Allies were bombarding Boche positions preparatory to local attacks, German outposts were forced to take cover and many were captured before they could come out of their hiding places.

Artillery Used.

In some regions the fighting was carried on almost entirely by artillery and machine guns, the Germans being so far ahead that rifles and grenades could not be used. German prisoners testify to the destruction wrought by our heavy guns on railway, roads and important junctions, which were necessary to the enemy retiring. The German plan of retiring with machine-gun squads to fight rear-guard actions at many points failed on several occasions when their guns and their crews were captured. The Boche gunners did not know that their comrades had already fallen back.

The German movement within the salient north of Chateau Thierry, which had been northward since the enemy retirement began to-day was reported to be southward. It is believed there fresh replacements of troops and that the Germans are preparing to make a stiff stand in certain locations.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, July 24.—Raids were carried out by British troops last night in the region south of Bucquoy and northwest of Albert, says to-day's War Office report. Few prisoners were taken. The German raid on the British lines northeast of Bethune on the Flanders front was repulsed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY, Wednesday Morning, July 24. — French, British and Americans are still hammering the flanks of the Crown Prince's army. The Germans are known to have brought up fresh support forces at some points, but the Allies report the situation favourable.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, July 24.—Germans last night delivered a counter-attack in the vicinity of Vrigny, five miles southwest of Rheims, the War Office announced to-day. The attack was repulsed. There was great activity by artillery during the night along the front between the Aisne and the Marne, and northwest towards Rheims.

Order Rescinded.

ENEMY APPEARS DETERMINED TO AVERT A RETREAT

Huns Are Preparing for a Desperate Stand Along the Present Battle Front.

POSITION OUTFLANKED

(By John De Gandt.)

PARIS, July 24.—The Germans appear determined to avoid a prolonged retreat and are reported to be preparing for a desperate stand along the present battle front. Further Allied successes under these conditions will thus imperil more than 400,000 Germans in the Soissons-Rheims pocket, as their forces within the salient have grown to that figure. French and American troops are overcoming the bitter resistance, and are progressing northeast of Chateau Thierry and south of the Ourcq. The enemy position at Oulchy Le Chateau (which already is reported to have been rendered untenable by the Allies) is outflanked.

Huns Being Forced Back

New German Divisions Are Constantly Being Identified—Heavy Fighting

(United Press Service.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 24.—Despite orders to hold to the death, the Crown Prince's rear guard is being forced to give way before the allied attack along practically the whole battle front.

Prisoners declare units of the rear guard were ordered to remain at their posts and hold off the enemy to the last. Before the violence of the American assault they are being wiped out or taken prisoner.

The advance is proceeding cautiously at all points, however, owing to the great mass of German reinforcements and their increasing resistance. On many sectors the battle occasionally loses all resemblance to a rear guard action, and appears as though the Germans intended to make a permanent stand. New German divisions are constantly being identified.

TROOPS ARRIVE SAFELY IN ENGLAND

Canadian Press:

OTTAWA, July 24.—The safe arrival in England is announced of a transport carrying 3,635 Canadian soldiers, including infantry drafts from London, Kingston, Ottawa, St. Johns, Que., Niagara, Winnipeg and Regina, cavalry draft from Toronto, probationary medical officers and details.

STEAMER TORPEDOED

Thirty-two Thousand Ton Ship Sent to the Bottom by Enemy Submarines.

ELEVEN ARE DEAD

Special to The Examiner:

AN IRISH PORT, July 24. — The Cunard Line steamer Justicia, thirty-two thousand tons, has been torpedoed and sunk. She was built for the Dutch line, but taken over by the British government before completion. She was returning to America after delivering a large contingent of American troops.

The Justicia was torpedoed Saturday morning. She carried a crew of from six to seven hundred. Eleven are dead. The Belfast Evening Telegraph, which announces the sinking, says ten torepdoes were discharged at her, four of which were exploded by gunfire.

(Special to The Examiner.)

BERLIN, Via Copenhagen, July 24—The British steamer Justicia has been torpedoed and sunk, the German Admiralty officially announced to-day.

German newspapers express great satisfaction that the steamer was sunk while under American control. Submarine commanders, in their official reports, stated that the Justicia was equipped with large steel anti-torpedo nets, "rendering her destruction difficult."

The mention of submarine "commanders" indicates that several U-boats probably attacked the big steamer.

Four Hundred Landed.

LONDON, July 24.—Four hundred survivors of the torpedoed liner Justicia have been landed at an Irish port, it was announced here. Survivors reported that only one of ten torpedoes fired at the vessel was effective, and that it wrecked the engine-room, stopping the ship.

Another Hun Peace Offer

Berlin Paper Admits That Suggestions for Peace Have Been Made—The Terms.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, July 24.—Germany has made suggestions for a peace conference to the Spanish Government, says the Socialist Vorwaerts of Berlin.

The suggestions are:

First—Germany wants no annexations or indemnities in west;

Second—Peace treaties with Russia and Roumania may not be questioned;

Third—The principle of self-determination of peoples has not been discussed but may be settled at peace conference where the fate of Belgium also is to be settled;

Fourth—Balkan question is to be settled around conference table;

Fifth—The freedom of seas, dismantling of Gibraltar and Suez Canal, and the right for Germany to use coaling stations;

Sixth—The colonial question is to be settled on basis of status quo.

The Vorwaerts considers this a very reasonable peace programme.

NOTHING GLOOMY ABOUT SPLENDID CROPS THAT ARE RIPENING NOW

Farmers Themselves Have No Complaint, and That's One of the Surest Proofs That's All's Well —Bumper Harvest May Be Interpeted As Loyal Effort of Farmers.

REAPING BY AUGUST 1ST?

The jeremiads of the farmers in the seeding days of spring are perhaps forgotten in the presence of the most luxuriant and abundant crops the country has seen in years. In spring, as the sons of the farm were called up for military service, there were lamentations of the approaching plight of the country, especially the urban centres, for the farmers, some of them, threatened to feed only themselves, and there were predictions that the cities would pay for the inclusion of the rural boys in the draft.

To-day, however, the farmers themselves admit that there are on every hand promises of a golden harvest. Some of the fields are already ripening, the lush green of the maturing grain being touched here and there with the ripened colour of straw. Whole patches of this spreading gold are showing in the seas of grain throughout the country. The pea crop has rarely been so heavy, and spring wheat, oats, barley and other crops are all filling heavy heads. By August 1st harvesting should be general throughout this county.

No doubt the farmers are as grateful as any class of the community that the prospects are so bright. In fact it would seem that in a patriotic effort they had exerted themselves in a great effort to secure as extensive a seeding as possible. In any case the farmer, who failed to co-operate, who blinded himself to the real stewardship of his acres, stands indicted by the Providence that has blessed alike the work of those who were with the country in its crisis and those who by their indifference and unmanly petulance were in effect against it. In many cases their fruits manifest their loyalty, and to the lasting credit of the farmers it should be realized that the most of them have loyally used their farms this summer in co-operation with the men in the factories and the men at the front, not omitting the women who are studiously saving food that was once thoughtlessly wasted.

Resistance Is Stiffening

Crown Prince Is Throwing New Forces Into the Battle—Prisoners Increasing.

(By Webb Miller—United Press Service.)

PARIS, July 24. — The German Crown Prince has suddenly changed his plans for a strategic retreat in the Soissons-Rheims salient and has determined to fight it out there. This decision, indicated by stiffening enemy resistance and increasing reinforcements, was borne out by German prisoners to-day, who declared the withdrawal order has been countermanded. They could offer no explanation, but military experts believe German politicians, fearing internal effects of a huge retirement, forced a change in the plans.

The Crown Prince continues to order new divisions into the pocket, drawing these reinforcements from as far north as the main British front. German losses in this region are now estimated at from 125,000 to 150,000 men, including 25,000 prisoners.

WILL HEAD CABINET.

AMSTERDAM, July 24. — Former Minister of Public Instruction Sussauer has succeeded Von Seydler as head of the Austrian Cabinet, despatches from Vienna to-day declared.

WILL BE CONSCRIPTED.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 24.—G. H. Roberts, Minister of Labour, intimated in a speech to-day that if munition strikers do not return to work at once they will be called into the army.

TRANSFERRED TO LONDON.

The seat of government seems to have been transferred from Ottawa to London, where it was after the Seven Years' war, and those at home seem lothe to "carry on" and give decisions, and are postponing almost everything until the return of those in England. This is no way to hold up the country's business."

Such is the impression Mayor Church of Toronto has formed of the situation at Ottawa after a visit to the capital on official business, and he seems to have described the conditions accurately and convincingly. Throughout Canada the sentiment is growing steadily, judging from the press comments everywhere, that it is high time that Premier Borden and the members of his cabinet wound up their visit in England and got back in harness at Ottawa. They will find plenty of work awaiting them, especially in view of Mayor Church's charge that the rear guard who have been left in charge of affairs in Canada are putting everything off until the tourists come home.

A COMPLETE FAILURE.

Beyond the casualties inflicted upon the enemy, the recapture from him of ground for which he had to pay a heavy price, the successful battle which the French and American troops have been waging against Hindenburg's masses is valuable because of the effect it will have not only on the morale of the Germans at large but on the morale of the army as well. German soldiers were told that the offensive which commenced over a week ago was a battle for peace. They were led to believe, it is evident that their task would be an easy one and after a huge German victory there would be an end to the slaughter. But the victory failed to materialize thanks to the shrewd tactics of General Foch and the remarkable fighting qualities of the French and American troops. Not only have the Germans failed to achieve a single one of the principal objectives in the drive but they have lost part of the ground they gained in the earler offensives. From the German standpoint "Der Friedersturm" has been a complete and collapsal failure.

A WELCOME CHANGE.

The new rates of pay for returned soldiers who wish to take a course of vocational training, are a step in the right direction, as they should tend to influence a larger number of soldiers to take advantage of the re-educational facilities provided, than has been the case under the old method. It has been decided that henceforth single men who are receiving vocational training, will be paid $50 a month during the course, while in the case of married men, there will be an allowance of $38 a month for the soldier and $35 for the wife, with the latter allowance increased according to the number of children, reaching as high as $56 for six children, so that in the latter case the total monthly income of the family while the soldier is being refitted for civilian life, would be $94.

Returned soldiers should note carefully the fact that pensions have nothing to do with the vocational training courses. They are entirely distinct, and are dealt with by a medical board, which does not take into consideration the question of whether or not the man whose case is being considered is going to receive a re-educational course. Quite properly there will be no cut in pensions because the soldier sees fit to take advantage of the opportunity that is being given him to earn a better living.

GERMAN PROPAGANDA.

The extent of the German propaganda programme in the United States has been strikingly revealed by America's secret service officials who have been investigating the activities of Teuton agents. It is stated that fully $90,000,000 went into a corruption fund by which it was hoped not only to gain control of American newspapers and magazines, but also to foster pacificism in a number of American colleges, and to carry on financial and commercial enterprises for the benefit of the Germans. Ambassador Bernstorff and Dr. Heinrich Albert, the German financial agent in the United States, were at the head of the campaign.

This propaganda was of course commenced early in the conflict, and is a characteristic example of how Germany makes war. Any method, however cowardly or dishonourable, no matter what laws of neutrality are violated, is justified in German eyes if it helps the dishonourable cause of the Teutons. This insidious backdoor intriguing was used in accomplishing the downfall of Russia, and was chiefly responsible for the disaster that overtook the Italians last year. It did not succeed in the United States as far as keeping America out of the war was concerned, but it did produce results in the hundreds of cases of munition plants, ships and railway properties that were damaged.

The latest revelation of Germany's treachery in the United States will surprise no one now—the world at large is ready to and is justified in believing any charge that may be brought against the Kaiser and his agents.

SERVICE CHEVRONS

Among returned soldiers in Peterboro as well as throughout Canada the wearing of service chevrons has been the subject of many arguments and there has been considerable dissatisfaction with the system used in the Canadian army. The chevrons worn at the bottom of the sleeve are intended to show the length of time the soldier has served at the front and in the Imperial army are only allowed to be worn by soldiers who have seen active service in France or Belgium or any of the other fronts where the Union Jack is being maintained against the enemy. Amongst Canadian soldiers however, the ruling has been made that their overseas service should count from the date of their leaving Canada with the ridiculous result that men who have never faced the enemy and whose service, through no fault of their own perhaps, consisted of duty in England have been wearing the same mark of distinction as the soldiers who have been in the thick of the fighting.

A cable from England indicates that the men back from France are disgusted with the regulations. It is said that General Sir Richard Turner, V.C., now in command of the Canadians in England and who did brilliant work at the front in the early stages of the war has declined to wear any chevrons and his example is being followed by many others. The complaint is made that at Argyle House there is a Canadian major who has spent his whole time since going overseas in clerical work in England who wears one red and three blue chevrons as well as the Order of the British Empire and a Russian decoration. An effort is being made in England to have the regulations altered and prevent the present condition of affairs.

ARBITRATION ADVISED.

Newspaper advertising, which has played a prominent part in Canada's war effort, in encouraging enlistments, in making the Victory Loan a success, in raising the Patriotic Fund, and in the giving of the necessary publicity to the Military Service Act is again being called upon for service—this time by the Imperial Munition Board, which is using the advertising columns of the press to deliver a message to those associated in the manufacture of munitions. In a most striking display advertisement the Board gives the story of what Canada has accomplished in munition making. It will be a surprise to many Canadians that last year Canada produced 55 per cent. of all the shrapnel, 42 per cent. of all the 4.5's, and 27 per cent. of the 6 inch shells used by the British army. "This is a proud achievement," the advertisement remarks and the figures are indeed remarkable.

The Munition Board's purpose, however, is not only to give publicity to the record achieved by this country, but to prevent, if possible, that record from being interfered with during the present year. The pace set last year can only be maintained as the Board points out, if there is "uninterrupted co-operation between employer and employee." The message that the advertisement carries to the manufacturer and the employee alike is, "arbitrate." The Board recognizes that there are bound to be differences over the matter of wages and hours, grievances of some kind or another are bound to crop up and require adjustment, but no such differences or grievances should be allowed to interfere with the output of munitions. The troubles should be referred to independent judgment and both parties should be satisfied with the decision arrived at. Nothing must be allowed to prevent Canada's production of munitions to fall below last year's mark.

THE END SOON.

"The fate of the world will be decided before this year's leaves turn brown on the trees, and perhaps before the harvest is gathered in. I believe it will be decided in our favour."

This is the most impressive portion of an article written by one of the world's greatest war correspondents, Philip Gibbs, the English journalist, whose despatches from France have been among the most thrilling word pictures of the war. Mr. Gibbs, who has been at the front since the beginning of the war has always been known as a conservative, sane writer, and his opinion that the issue on the western front will be decided this year, is, therefore, more than unusually important. Mr. Gibbs calls attention to a fact that many people are inclined to overlook and that is, that in spite of the heavy masses of German troops used in the attacks on the Aisne-Marne front, there is still opposed to the British forces a huge concentration of men. "The enemy is still immensely strong," says, "and one's mind is staggered by the number of men he has crowded on to this western front. The war correspondent regards the situation between the Aisne and Marne as most momentous. Opposite the British, he says the German commanders, Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, General Sixt Von Arnim, and other noted leaders, have been preparing for months for another blow at the coast. A vast amount of preliminary work has been carried out and the enemy is ready to strike.

The developments of the next day or two may alter the whole complexion of the war. An extension of General Mangin's sucess in the Soisson's district, menacing the Crown Prince's armies, would compel the enemy opposing the British to send divisions to the Champagne, and instead of a huge offensive aimed at the Channel ports, Rupricht and his leaders may have to be content to remain inactive.

Mr. Gibbs points out that the enemy must do whatever they do within the next two months or so, and after that they will be forever on the defensive, because their reserve powers cannot maintain the same level as ours, with America's legions behind us."

FOOLING THE HUNS.

It will take a lot of articles such as the one published below from the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger, to convince the German people that they have nothing to fear from America. For many months the German press has been feeding its readers such rubbish as this, probably at the instigation of the Gemran high command, anxious to keep from the people of knowledge of the real situation.

Here is the sort of thing the Germans are being told, taken from a Berlin newspaper:

"If they have any sense left in the Entente capitals, they must see that all prospect of America saving the situation hos disappeared. We are far from wishing to underestimate America's splendid human material. Anyone who knew the Americans in the Boxer war must have been pleased with their tall, sinewy men, but must have recognized at first glimpse that these troops knew little of military discipline. A strongly developed spirit of independence makes an undisciplined crowd of soldiers.

"The American soldier fights or marches if he wants to do so, otherwise nor. . . . These fellows were smart, but each one was for himself."

The paper says that even Roosevelt was convinced of this and said that American troops could only be compared with militia. After America's entrance into the war only 400,000 volunteered, the article goes on to say that compulsory service was necessary, thus the new army has not the desire to fight like the old army, says the paper, "and what is this army to replace? Ten million Russian soldiers fully equipped and from a nation born and bred in militarism. Even if America makes up the deficiency in numbers it is impossible to give them the same training as the Russians."

The paper says that America has not even the same advantages as Poland for training an army, and that, anyway, the American army cannot be considered as a factor in the enemy ranks until 1920 at the earliest, and then only if transports and American armament industries came up to the standards of the old military nations. It is alleged that the U-boats will prevent this possibility.

A TOMMY'S TRIBUTE

Some of those who persistently criticize the Y.M.C.A. war work are inclined to say that it is not difficult to get an officer to say nice things about the activities of the Red Triangle in the war area but that tributes from the Tommies are not often heard and then only from men who in peace times were Y.M.C.A. members and therefore inclined, so the critics say to be prejudiced in its favour. The other day the Examiner published a very strongly worded eulogy of the Y.M.C.A. written by Major General Watson, Commanding the 4th Canadian Division. To-day we are indebted to the wife of a Peterboro soldier overseas for an opportunity to print the opinion of a Canadian Tommy on the same subject.

The soldier in question enlisted here as a private early in 1915 and has been at the front going on three years. When the controversy over the Y.M.C.A. was launched by the resolution passed by the provincial branch of the G.W.V.A. at Hamilton, this soldier's wife wrote to her husband and asked him what he thought about the work of the Red Triangle. And his reply, which does not lose any weight because the soldier in question happened to have rather a poor opinion of the Y. M. C. A. before he enlisted is as follows:—

"I am sorry to know that some of the returned men have such a poor opinion of the Y.M.C.A. for the Y is certainly doing a good work out here. The men that say that the Y never gave away anything but stationery have never been within miles of the line because their statements prove it. I have never been in any part of the line at any time where there was not a Y. M. C. A. where a fellow could always get free coffee. Last winter or rather a year ago last winter when we were in what was supposed to be a quiet section, that as before we took Vimy Ridge, there was a Y in an old ruin of a house at the end of our communication trench and there was free coffee all the time. I know three different Y's between the front line at Passchendeale and Ypres where there was free coffee and within a mile of Ypres at a broken down village called Vlamertinge there was a Y open giving away coffee 24 hours a day to thousands of men either going in or coming out of the line. When we were at the Somme there were Y.M.C.A.'s all over and one could get a drink of something hot at nearly any time.

When we were at Sanctuary Woods on the 2nd of June 1916, there was a Y at Zillebeke Dugouts with free cocoa and biscuits and at the same time all the Y's around gave both coffee and cocoa and biscuits free of charge. A Peterboro boy who got out of the front line safe in the Zillebeke battle was wounded in a line up in front of the dugouts while waiting his turn to get some cocoa."

Down at the base where I was last Christmas and where there are dozens of Y's every Y gave a concert and a free tea, consisting of different kinds of cake, bread and butter, sandwiches, fruit, oranges and coffee and believe me it cost something."

"As I said before those that say that the Y never gave anything but stationery have not been within miles of the line or else their time was so short that they did not have time to see anything or to take a look around."

The Y.M.C.A. question will likely come up at the Dominion Convention of the Great War Veterans and the result of the discussion in view of the financial statement that has been published by the National Council will be awaited with interest.

Grant of a Million Dollars to Avert Stock Demoralization

Western Authorities Will Take Steps To Prevent Exportation of Young Cattle.

SITUATION IS ACUTE

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, July 20.— An emergency grant of a million dollars will be made by Manitoba, to avert the demoralization of stock raising in the province it was gleaned from statements made by cabinet ministers at a conference with K. McGregor, of the Canada Food Board.

An immediate special session is within the possibility if the grant cannot be obtained by order-in-Council, so acute is the situation. It was believed the Provincial government was urged to prevent the exportation of young female cattle from Manitoba.

Market Flooded.

Thursday morning 4,000 cattle were in the stock yards. Wholesale dumping being due to the larger prospective fodder shortage. The big supply has the tendency to lower prices, attracting United States buyers, who will snap bargains, sending the stock into the United States, where it will find a ready market.

Female cattle would thus be cleared out of Manitoba and Saskatchewan to a large degree, creating a situation in stock raising which would not be fought down for 15 or 20 years.

NO EXCEPTIONS FROM INCOME ASSESSMENT IN HAVELOCK

Judge Huycke Granted Appeals of Property Owners Against Court of Revision's Action in Striking Off Many Persons From Income List.

The property owners of Havelock have won a complete victory in their appeal against the action of the Court of Revision in striking off the income assessment of a number of the villagers, the majority of whom were employees of the C.P.R. The appeals were finally disposed of yesterday afternoon by Judge Huycke. All of them were allowed with the exception of one man who has married and several others who are overseas. It was stated that the assessor erred in assessing these ratepayers for income. All the others who were escaping the income tax were put back on the list and will be assessed as required by statute. The total amount of the assessment involved is said to be close to $26,000. Mr. G. N. Gordon represented Mr. Alex. Primrose, who lead the forces of property.

A FORECAST OF THE PEACE CONFERENCE AS SEEN IN GERMANY

(By Lieutenant A. A. Milne.)

In the Reichstag the other day Herr Kapp made the following spirited protest:

"In view of the great success of our U-Boats we must not allow ourselves to be induced on the conclusion of peace to agree to restrict the use of U-boats by international regulations. We need the weapon for the maintenance of German power at sea."

The debate in progress was upon the naval estimates. Otherwise Herr Kapp might have carried his theme further. He might have said for instance:

"In view of the great success of our system of murder, rape and arson in Belgium, we must not allow ourselves to be induced on the conclusion of peace to agree to restrict our brutalities by international regulations. We need these weapons for the maintenance of German power on land."

He could then have called attention to the great success of the baby-killing Zeppelins, and have deprecated any attempt to restrict the activities of bomb-droppers by international conventions. War on civilians, he could have pointed out, was necessary for the maintenance of German power in the air.

But, as we have said, he was speaking on the naval estimates, and had perforce to confine his remarks to U-boats. The policy of "sinking without a trace" had been successful; it was necessary to Germany; therefore it must go on—not only in this war, but in the next one.

One can understand Herr Kapp's reasoning, for he is a German. But since he is a German, one cannot understand his anxiety in the matter. What is Herr Kapp's trouble? Surely he is sufficiently at home in his country to know that the German use of U-boats in the next war will not depend in the least upon whether it is prohibited or not prohibited by international regulations? It will depend solely upon whether it is necessary for the maintenance of German power. Herr Kapp has lived long enough in Germany to know that this is the only consideration which determines the use of any weapon in Prussian Lands.

He would know too, the formula for the introduction of any new weapon into the German War Book. It is a simple one, and has been used many times in the last three and a half years. Let us suppose that in the next war Germany decides to torture her prisoners to death systematically, instead of in her present haphazard way. The process of instituting the custom would be as follows:

First the German High Command would announce its decision to the German Government, justifying. it on the grounds that it was necessary to a German victory.

Then some member of the German Government would blurt it out publicly, recovering himself sufficiently, however, to explain that it was the only possible means of averting defeat at the hands of the wicked enemy.

Finally, German Wireless would make it clear to all the world that England had been doing it first.

Whereupon Herr Kapp would be quite comfortable about it. Indeed he would probably let himself go on the subject in the Reichstag, affirming that in the art of torturing Germany had established such a clear superiority over England, that no future international regulations must be permitted to rob the Fatherland of this weapon in the next war but one.

There are very many Herr Kapps in Germany. The German Government consists entirely of Herr Kapps. How many of them will be present at the Peace Conference? If they are all there, then we can follow already the course of those negotiations for which the whole world is anxiously waiting. The negotiations will turn upon the next war. How is the next war to be fought? Is it fair that Germany, who has obtained several local successes by submarine-murder, indiscriminate bomb-dropping, well-poisoning, torture of prisoners, deportation and enslaving of civilians, should be deprived of these aids to victory in future? Certainly not! . . And excited faces will lean across the table, and angry Teutonic fists will thump thereon indignantly . . . . .

Details of the peace? That is not the important matter. The chief business is to arrange about the next war.

Indeed, why not settle a date for it?

And, to save trouble, decide that Germany shall win it?

FIFTH IN A SERIES OF OFFENSIVES SINCE MARCH

First, Started March 21, Created a Salient Whose Sides Couldn't Be Widened—Germans on Defensive for Last Month, Barring the Assault on Rheims.

ATTEMPT TO BREAK LINES

The fifth in the German series of offensives begun since March 21 covers a front of sixty-five miles, extending from Chateau-Thierry, east up the Marne to beyond Dormans, then north-east with a semi-circle north of Rheims, then due east to the Main de Massiges. This last is a hill thirty-two miles from Rheims and six miles west of the Argonne Forest.

A year ago the Imperial Crown Prince, from April until nearly the end of July, attempted to break the French lines between Rheims and the Argonne Forest, alternating his attacks here with others on the Aisne, these last principally to recover the Chemin des Dames. He failed, using up seventy divisions in three months, with a total casualty list which is said to have approached half a million. Then the front became comparatively static until, on the first of the present month, the Germans attempted a rush from the semi-circle on Rheims with three divisions, supported by two others, and were either held or made to relinquish newly acquired positions by barrage and infantry counter-attacks.

The offensive begun on March 21, called the Battle of Picardy, was launched from a sixty-mile base and attained a forty-mile perpendicular, with its vertex on the Somme, six miles east of Amiens. Its objects were twofold: (1) To reach Abbeville and the sea, with the corollary of isolating the armies north of the river and investing the Channel ports, and (2) to annihilate the French Army or force it back on the defences of Paris, with whatever corollary that situation might produce on the French body politic.

But the flanks of the Picardy salient held—in the north from the ridges protecting Ypres and Arras; on the south by the French positions on the Chemin des Dames, and the watersheds of the Ailette, Oise and Aisne.

A series of attempts to force the southern barriers having failed, the Germans on April 9 attempted to force the northern ones. They thus developed between Ypres and Arras, from a base of twenty miles, with a perpendicular of fifteen, what is known as the Lys salient. This was nearer Ypres than it was Arras; and for twenty miles north of Arras the line, including the Lens sector, has remained static to this day.

The Lys salient being held on its flanks, just as the Picardy salient was held, the Germans' next move was to return to their failure at this salient's southern barriers.

The Third.

On May 27 they launched their third offensive from Noyon over a front of forty miles to Rheims. They crossed the Aisne on an eighteen-mile front and reached the Marne on a six-mile front, between Chateau-Thierry and Dormans. They managed to deploy to some extent on the east of the Marne front, but were held on the north bank of the river.

This third offensive was stopped and neutralized on May 31. On June 9 the enemy, on an extension of its base westward, between Noyon and Montdidier—twenty miles—launched the fourth offensive with Compiegne as its obvious objective. His maximum penetration was seven and a half miles, which immediate counter-attacks reduced to less than five. It was held almost from the first and died away on June 11.

Both the third and fourth offensives were rendered abortive by the Allied troops, instead of retreating before the enemy's advance, deploying right and left, thus strengthening the flanks—making them in these instances invulnerable—and depending on prepared positions to stop the enemy's centre.

From June 11 until yesterday the Germans, save for their assault on Rheims on July 1, have been practically on the defensive, while limited local offensive made by the Allies from Ypres down to Chateau-Thierry and almost daily air operations over the enemy's supply bases and lines of communication, have broken up his formations, delayed his concentrations, and robbed him of several valuable strategic positions—east of the Forest of Nieppe in the Lys salient, north and south of the Somme before Amiens, north-west and south-east of Montdidier, north-west and south-east of Soissons, and finally north-west of Chateau-Thierry, where the Americans, first, from June 6 to June 12, and then on July 3, gained ground, including the strategic position of Vaux, which measurably strengthened the French positions as far north as the Soissons sector and protected the Marne from an enemy crossing west of Chateau-Thierry.

THE ROAD TO THE FRONT

By CANADIAN OVERSEAS.

All roads to the front are the same—very straight. You can see them running up and down hill for miles ahead of you, and they are hard and smooth kept by the British army.

As you pass along you meet groups of turbaned Indians working at them or bands of smiling, chattering Chinese, or maybe Arabs or Nubians. Their costumes supply a pleasant touch of colour and picturesqueness.

Strings of motor lorries pass along. Horsemen, infantrymen with all their goods and chattels on them going to or from the line.

Bordering on all roads to the front are settlements of wooden or tin huts with their gardens; villages whose only inhabitants seem to be the British soldiers and the few French who have remained to attend to 'Tommy's' wants.

In the early part of the journey these villages are what they were in peace times, tidy and thrifty. Later the landscape alters, trees no longer shade the road, only their blackened stumps are left.

Shell holes, mounds, old trenches, tangles of barbed wire, twisted and shapeless farm implements and all sorts of debris take the place of cultivated fields, and instead of the comfortable, tidy village there are piles of ruins.

Sign posts are abundant, no one can go astray or wander into danger unwittingly. Well back one is warned of "precautionary gas zone"—never "alert zone" and nearer still "respirators must be worn" or "steel helmets must be worn," and so on.

Towards evening this road to the front teems with life. Men with mess tins fetch evening meals. Men stroll leisurely on with a firmer purpose, and lights in the huts twinkle. Thus is the life along the road to the front.

Very different a is ruined city such as Arras, at nightfall. Once it was full of life and domesticity; once the evening hour was filled with the laughter of families re-united after the day's work. Now the jagged walls are open to the gaze of any stray soldier who may pass by.

So much quiet happiness destroyed! And as the Verey Lights shoot up and in their brilliancy search the ruins for a remnant of life, it strikes a note of almost intolerable sadness.

General Foch is Moderating His Drive on the Aisne

Allies Are Preparing for the Inevitable German Counter Attacks —Safeguarding Paris.

LOCAL OFEFNSIVE

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, July 22. — General Foch is moderating his drive between the Aisne and the Marne, for the apparent purpose of consolidating his gains and preparing for the inevitable German counter attacks. A forward movement on a gigantic scale before the Americans are fully ready to participate, would be to accept the German terms on which such a battle should be fought. General Foch is now declining to be inveigled into playing Germany's game under such conditions. The Aisne-Marne thrust must be considered as a local offensive which, however, has already had major consequences through safeguarding Paris, and driving the Germans north of the Marne. General Foch must not be expected to press forward recklessly after having already secured such highly important results.

USING UP RESERVES.

Von Hindenburg is unquestionably piling his reserves into the northern and central areas of the Aisne-Marne salient, especially about Soissons and Fere En Tardenois, which are the most important pivots of the Present German resistance. In this respect General Foch has gravely interrupted Von Hindenburg's future offensive plans. The morale effect in Germany of a confused offensive strategy at the Kaiser's headquarters will be very great, coming so closely upon the dismissal of Foreign Minister Von Kuehlmann for predicting that peace cannot be won on the battlefield.

Von Hindenburg, therefore, will resort to desperate expedients in order to try to wrest the initiative from General Foch.

RUST CAUSES AN ENORMOUS LOSS TO CANADIAN FARMER

Shrub Causes Wheat Rust—West Banning Barberry—At Same Time a New Variety of Early Rust-escaping Wheat is Being Successfully Grown.

What rust on grain has cost the farmer in coldcash through startling reductions on yield, and what, in turn, the consequent cut in spending power has meant in hardship to earners in eastern Canada who produce goods Western Canadian can buy, cannot be calculated. But no two representative grain growers or manufacturer would hesitate to declare the cost to Canada as one expressed in expressed in terms of hundreds of terms of hundreds of millions of millions of dollars.

Many people now foresee the utter extinction of the rust menace in Canada in the eradication of the barberry plant, and in the development by Seager Wheeler—the Luther Burbank of the Canadian wheat world—of a variety of the great essential cereal that matures some ten days earlier than that generally grown in the Western provinces.

It seems to have been proved absolutely that the decoraive barberry—expect the Japanese sort—is the chief cause of the propagation of rust trouble, and already in the spring wheat belt in the United States and in Canada an organized campaign is working for the eradication of the barberry in all sections likely to infect the growing grain.

DENMARK BENEFITS

It was all brought out in Congress in Washington by Hon. George Young, of North Dakota, that the settlers in the colony of Massachusetts in 1755 were aware of the intimate relations between the Barberry plant, and rust on wheat, and that a law was passed thirty years ago providing for the rooting out of the shrub in that jurisdiction. Denmark, however, has begun the modern crusade, and the Hon. Mr. Young says that rust has practically disappeared from the wheat fields of that progressive Scandinavian country since the carrying into effect of the campaign against the innocent-appearing barberry.

Apparently this plant is "host" for the rust, which is carried on the winds as far as two or three hundred miles. When the climatic conditions are suitable, it fasterns to the wheat, and then, to complete the cycle, the parastic returns to the barberry, which preserves it in health during the winter.

NEW, ADVANCED WHEAT.

For the past eleven years, on his farm near Rosthern, on the Canadian Northern Railway, in central Saskatchewan, Seager Wheeler has been "breeding" a strain of wheat that matures early. But there is added significance that by the time the rust usually develops on wheat in the west, his wheat has developed to the point where it can do practically no harm.

While little has been said in public in Canada, the leaders in Canadian agriculture have been closely watching the rust evil in all its ramifications. Now, Dean Rutherford, of the University of Saskatchewan, Saskateen, points out: "The people of Saskatchewan are fully aware of the fact that rust can come to use from Dakota or and get started when our condiand gets started when our conditions are favorable to its propagation and spread. The states to the south are waging war against the barberry. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and I think Alberta have included the barberry bush amongst their noxious weeds. Steps are being taken to have it destroyed in all Department of Agriculture in interesting it self in this important question, and has under may carefully planned investigations with reference to it."

ITS GOOD POINTS

Seager Wheeler says of his new "breed" of wheat:

"'Red Bobs' matures a week to ten days earlier than even Marquis. While it is not altogether rust-resistant, it is practically immune, owing to its stage of filling at the time rust begins to develop, so that rust cannot do any damage to the grains, as it will be filled before rust makes any headway in the crop. Of other good qualities its great strength of straw enables it to be grown on land and stand up where other sorts would (expect Kitchener) lay down, owing to excessive soft growth in rich land. Another good quality; The heads fill completely, where in other sorts many heads have empty spikelets.

ORIGINATED IN AUSTRALIA.

"Red Bods is being grown this season in many districts in the prairie provinces. In a broad sense Canada must regard it as a good gift from Australia. Out there, in 1905, a farmer 'crossed' a wheat without a name with a barley called Nepaul. A hard, beardless good milling wheat was the result, but—it was unmarkable because it was white. Some samples came to this country, and experiments with it were made during a period of several years. Then Seager Wheeler in 1917 began his experiments with it. By dint of great care and patience he has got the "Red Bobs," named after the late Field Marshall Roberts.

Anarchy Reigns In Polish State

Nothing Being Done to Relieve Suffering, Reuter's Learns.

LONDON, July 23.—Reuter learns from a Polish source that at a recent meeting of the Council of State at Warsaw the representative of the Inter-Party Club, which is the real exponent of public opinion in Poland, and which comprises three-fourths of the elected members of the council, declared that the Council of State does not represent the Polish nation. He proceeded: "At a moment when the whole world recognizes the Polish question as an international one, the political aspirations of the Poles as just and their realization as a necessary condition of a new world based on justice and liberty—at this moment on Polish territory nothing is done by Governments of powers which are able to carry out their promises to prove that they have any real intention of reconstructing the Polish State."

He emphasized the fact that the present condition of life in Poland makes it impossible to carry on peaceful legislative work.

"The country is devastated and reduced to misery," he asserted, "this produces anarchy and the Government has no means of maintaining order or of alleviating the misery, which is increasing to a terrible degree. To this must be added, the sufferings of thousands of Polish prisoners of war, of those who were forced to emigrate to Russia and cannot return the fate of the Polish army corps in Russia and the Polish contingents now interned and under trial."

Reuter also learns that at Cracow it was admitted at the last meeting of the municipal council that owing to the food shortage criminals had to be released from prison and that at the end of the week all prisoners would for this reason have to be set at liberty. Anarchy is rampant, and burglaries and thefts are increasing in such terrifying fashion that mutual protection of property and wounded will have to organized.

How Peterboro County Man Met His Death in the West

Patrick Vincent Killen Was Dead Within Five Minutes After He Fell Into the Water—Piece of Orange Stuck in His Throat.

The following clipping is taken from the Saskatchewan News:

ROCKING A BOAT CLAIMS A VICTIM AT CARLYLE LAKE.

Carlyle, Sask., July 14. — (Special.) — Patrick Vincent Killen, age 28, employed by W. C. Jones, of Tilston, was drowned at the Carlyle Lake resort this afternoon. In company with another young man and a young lady, all of who were attired for bathing, the deceased went out in a boat, and when about sixty feet off the shore at Sandy Beach, the boat upset. The young lady was rescued by another boating party which happened to be close by, but Killen sank immediately, and though taken from the water within five minutes of the accident, was quite dead when recovered. He was at once attended by three doctors and a nurse who happened to be summering at the Beach. All was to no avail. It was evident that the party had been eating oranges, as when they started pumping the water out of Killen's stomach, a piece of orange was found stuck in his throat, and the doctors decided that he probably died from choking rather than drowning.

RAPID PROMOTION FOR PETERBORO BOY

Left Peterboro as a Private And is Now Second in Command of Battery

Early in 1915 a boy of 18 years of age J. H. Cobb, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Cobb, 223 London street gave up his position as elevator boy in the Cressman's store and joined the 21st Battalion as Private J. H. Cobb. After training in Kingston he went overseas with that battalion and on completing short training went to France This was in the early stages of the war when bombing had not as yet developed to a fine art but was beginning to take its place in the fight. Into this branch young Cobb who seemed to be possessed of iron nerve and absolute fearlessness of danger entered with heart and soul obtaining such proficiency that his work attracted attention and he was promoted to Corporal and Sergeant and chosen as leader of bombing raids.

OFFERED COMMISSION

In July 1917 on the strength of his work he was offered a commission and sent to England. Returning to France the young lieutenant pursued his eventful course and in due time won his Military Cross. Before long he was promoted to a captaincy and this was but a milestone in his career as information indirectly received states he has now received his majority. Pursuing his course Pte. Cobb of 1915 is now second in command of the 4th trench mortar battery according to a casual reference in a letter received lately.

PARENTS UNAWARE

Quite unaware of their son's prowess his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cobb were surprised to learn from Revd J. C. Davidson that his address had been changed from lieutenant to his present rank. Mr. and Mrs. Cobb, members of St. John's Church, have been residents of Peterboro for 10 years.

COUNTER-ATTACKING.

Tuesday evening bulletins.

LONDON, July 23.—Germans are west side of Soissons, Chateau Thierry salient and on the Marne and fighting with desperation.

WILLIAM LANGFORD PASSED AWAY TO-DAY

Was a Prominent Figure in Public Life—A Loss to Peterbo

William Langford, senior, 592 Water street, one of the pioneer residents of Peterboro, died this morning at his home after a very short illness.

He was born in Queens County, Ireland, in 1846 and came to Ontario when a boy of 9 years of age. Later when a young man he settled in Peterboro since when he has been an active worker in all branches of public life for the uplift and building of the city. Since '85 as a contractor he has been instrumental in building most of the larger public buildings in the city numbering among these the former Quaker Oats plant and parts Court House besides many of the of the more important business places of the city. He was one of the oldest members of the 57th Regiment in which he held the rank of major. This he joined in '64 and in '66 was active in the Fenian raid and has for many years been a conspicuous figure with the veterans in their parades.

WILLIAM LANGFORD, Sr.
Whose death occurred early this morning.

In religion he was a Presbyterian and a regular attendant of St. Andrew's church where he will be greatly missed. In politics he was a staunch Conservative and always an active supporter of the candidate for that party in the city leaving no stone unturned in forwarding the interest of the man he supported.

He leaves of the immediate family his wife, five sons and two daughters namely: Alderman Wm. Langford jr., R. Percival, Edwin, Pte. Robert with the infantry overseas and Flight Lieut. Ernest in France, Miss Dorothy and Miss Roma at home.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon at 2.30. Service at the house conducted by Reverend Mr. Rowand. Interment at Little Lake Cemetery.

Served in the City Council.

The late Mr. Langford's interest in public affairs found impression in seven years of service as a member of the municipal Council. From 1888 until 1891 inclusive, and during the years 1896, 98 and 99. It was in 1899 that the elections were by a general vote, changing from the ward system, under which Mr. Langford had represented the North Ward. In July, 1905, when Peterborough was incorporated a city, and a Court of Revision was established as a seperate body instead of being a committee of the Council, Mr. Langford was appointed chairman which position he retained until 1913.

In In 1901 and 1902 he was a member of the Board of Education. During the past winter he assisted in the revision of the Building By-law which the Council is still holding in abeyance. In these and by other means, Mr. Langford bore a full share of his responsibility as a citizen.

He has left a permanent stamp on the North Ward. He was a cabinetmaker by trade, and occupied the furniture shop where Mr. J. D. Craig is now carrying on business. When he sold his business he launched into the building trade for which he immediately showed himself well fitted. The first house he built was on George street in the north end. He built most of the dwellings in the block bounded by George, Antrim, Water and Smith streets. The store occupied by Mr. D. Kerneghan, and houses on Water street south of Antrim were also constructed by Mr. Langford who contributed largely to the upbuilding of that section of the city.

Other and larger works will remain monuments to his ability as a contractor. Trinity Methodist Church, the Collegiate Institute, the Bonner-Worth factory, the Turnbull Departmental Store, the first steel frame building in Peterborough, the first Quaker Oats plant and several schools were all erected under his supervision. For a time he was in partnership with Mr. Richard Sheehy.

Active in Military Affairs.

Mr. Langford was a member of the 57th Regiment for 40 years, from 1863 until 1904. He joined as a private and held the rank of Major and Quartermaster when he retired. He was a veteran of the Fenion Raid in 1866, and was for years Captain of No. 2 Company of the 57th, this company being located in Peterborough at that time before the entire regiment was transferred to this city.

In short his years were full of activities from which the community derived larger benefit than accrues from most men's daily work and interests. In this respect his life was exemplary. He belonged to that group of citizens who worked for the upbuilding and progress of Peterborough in those days before the C.G.E. Company located here and gave Peterborough its first real impetus.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MR. JOHN BAIN

John Bain, a well-known resident of Peterborough, died suddenly this morning at his residence, 365 Patterson street. The deceased who was fifty-six years of age, is survived by two sons, namely Private George Bain in England, and Thomas C. Bain at home. He started off to work this morning in his usual good health, but was compelled to return, passing away some time later in his son's arms.

The late Mr. Bain has resided in Peterborough for upwards of forty years. His wife pre-deceased him about five years ago. One brother, David, resides near Kingston, and a sister, Mrs. J. Lawson, resides at Middleville, Ontario. The deceased was a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at two o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

Last year he had an excellent large crop and this year it will be as good if not better. Mr. Williams is specializing in potatoes, and this year the greater part of his market garden is used for this production.

MESSAGE OF FORMER PETERBORO MAN

BELIEVES STATES SHOULD HAVE GONE INTO WAR SOONER.

"The only comment I can make upon the war is this, I wish to God the United States had gone in with Canada and the others in beginning. We had all the potential resources to complete the combination that was necessary to defeat the Teutonic outfit. But we did not have the quick insight that was displayed by Canada and the entire British Empire. Never mind; we are all in it now; and with the blessing of God we will stand together until there will be no more Germany and no more Kaiserism. I thank you for your many kindnesses and remain

Yours truly,
PATRICK J. MURPHY.

The foregoing heartening message was received by Tax Collector W. T. Green from Rev. Father Murphy, a former resident of Peterborough but now in charge of the mission at Dalhart, Texas.

Allies Are Still Hammering

der for a retirement and has declared to fight out on present lines.

General Foch is making the most of his opportunities in the Soissons-Rheims pocket without playing into German hands by the reckless expenditure of men. He is advancing where possible without a large toll of casualties, and is contenting himself with gains elsewhere under stiffening enemy resistance. At the same time the Allied Generalissimo is keeping the Germans guessing and interfering with their withdrawal of reinforcements from other parts of the line by splendidly timed local operations. The attack north of Montdidier yesterday while relatively void of geographical importance, was a great move tactically. In addition to capturing three villages and 1,500 prisoners he showed the German high commander the danger of weakening their lines to aid the Crown Prince.

Notable Advance.

In the Champagne the most notable advance in the main front recently is that reported on the west side of the salient. Official despatches report the Allies occupying the railway from Trossnes to Fereen Tardeno. This is at a point within five miles of the latter city southeast of Oulchy le Chateau. The operation and the pounding of the British in the Ordre Valley, on the opposite side of the salient, has resulted in an appreciable narrowing of the pocket.

PARIS, July 24.—An unofficial estimate to-day placed the German casualties in the recent Champagne fighting at 180,000. This figure is discounted in military circles.

PRISONERS TAKEN

ROME, July 24.—Italians are still pushing ahead in Albania and one of yesterday's results was six hundred prisoners.

HARDWARE AND METAL MARKET

Another eight to ten-cent advance in linseed oil has been recorded during the week, and the future is one of decided uncertainty. Most certainly lower prices are not looked for and that even higher levels may be reached seems quite possible. Seed shows another jump in price for the week, and the outlook for supplies is none too bright.

Mixed Paints.

Mixed paints are in a very firm position, and that a higher level of prices will be reached seems more than likely. The advances in linseed oil, with prospects of further ones being made, coupled with the recent advances made in white lead in oil, are considered factors.

Eavetrough, conductor pipe, ridge roll and kindred lines have made an advance of 10 per cent. during the week. This follows higher prices named on corrugated sheets, metal ceilings and shingles some time ago, and is in line with predictions made in Hardware and Metal at that time.

Roofing Materials.

Revised prices are announced on tarred roofing felt, tarred and dry building paper, coal tar, roofing cement and heavy dry and tarred strawboard. The present scale of prices provides for advances in each instance, which, while not very heavy, reflect the tendency of the market.

Manufacturers of woodenware are faced with continually increasing costs which is borne out in many advances on their lines. Among the lines affected this week are clothes pins, clothes horses, pastry boards and skirt boards, with higher levels looked for on tubs.

Wood Waste.

Wool waste and wipers have both reached a higher level of quotations. One manufacturer of cow ties, doz and halter chains, tie-out chains and kindred lines has announced new prices which show an advance of about 12 1-2 per cent., though jobbers have not yet changed their quotations.

Other lines to undergo revision during the week are food choppers, single-barrel shotguns, cross-cut saw handles, toilet clippers, flashlight bulbs, mouse and rat traps, steel squares, night latches, tackle blocks, rivet sets and egg beaters. Advances are recorded in each instance. —Hardware and Metal.

GROCERY MARKET

Featuring the markets for the week are the announcements of new prices on jams, dried fruits and early canned fruits and vegetables, says the "Canadian Grocer" for this week. The general tendency is upward, jam prices showing a sharp upward trend to higher levels than had been expected, due, it is said, to the exceedingly high prices which had to be paid for fruits

PRICES HIGHER

Prunes are higher, with reports pointing to the Government as a heavy buyer, the 50s, 60s and 70s being largely absorbed by this source. Choice peaches are also to go to the Government, and other grades offering to the trade show a fairly sharp advance. Apricots and seedless raisins opened about the same as last year, while seeded raisins will range at least 1c up. Laid-down costs in Canada will be enhanced owing to the new schedule of packing charges, the increased freight rates and heavy rate of exchange.

CANNED GOODS.

The canned goods trade has kept remarkably active in view of the fact that the season is so well advanced. Tomatoes are running low and are not being offered at all by one jobber. Corn, too, is scarce. Peas, beans, etc., are in fair supply, but it is thought that there will be less old pack to meet the new than in previous years.

Price changes are few and are confined to some revisions on mill feeds, advances for strawberry jams in glass jars and on sewing machine oil. There has been, also, a firming tendency on figs in mats.

DEMAND FOR STARCHES

Demand is heavy for starches and also for corn and cane syrups; this is better than usually obtains for the summer season. The use of these is somewhat stimulated by the scarcity of other essentials.

Coffee markets are firm and strong, as also are those of tea, with a strong likelihood of advances being made, particularly for coffee. The reports concerning damage to the growing crop of coffee in the South are taken here with reserve until facts are available.

PEANUTS EASIER

Peanuts are easier in Southern markets, and this may be reflected here in future shipments. There is every indication that shipment of these will come along as required. Stocks of all nuts locally are fair, and manufacturing interests are fairly well covered. Orders placed to arrive are largely sold, and in view of this stocks on hand will be absorbed quickly enough.

Sugar continuous rather a scarce commodity, though no serious shortage is reported as yet. Some shipments are coming along, and the general feeling seems to be that supplies to carry over the preserving season will be available.

CATTLE MARKET

A sudden rush of buying on the p of the shorts towards the close of market sent corn prices skying to advance of 3 5-8c. to 4 1-4c. at the cl of the Chicago market yesterday. T sudden turn of the tables took bears by surprise, as they had c fidently figured out that on the ba of heavy receipts and most favoura weather the market should be enti ly against the bulls. THE SPIRIT OF THE AMERICAN BOYS

Letter From Nephew of Mrs. T. Sandercock of Peterboro.

Some idea of the spirit of the American boys may be gained by the following letter received recently by Mrs. Thomas Sandercock, 12 Inverlea street, from her nephew, Rollin Livick who went overseas with the Sammies recently.

June 1, 1918.

I am having a few days rest after being in the trenches again. There was lots doing this time. Sure gave the Boche H——. There kamerad stuff doesn't go with the boys in khaki.

Would like to have been photographed when I got back. I don't think I was ever so dirty in my life. The trenches were chalk and lime, My clothes were almost white, but have been outfitted with a new suit since my return so am spick and span.

There are to be no more packages from home. Not even if you send a request and it is O. K'd by the censor. Wish I could get an auto strap razor, as I lost mine in the trenches. Haven't one toilet article left as I lost them all in the excitement.

See by the papers Germany is hitting the allied line again along the Aisne and Somme. She seems determined to break the line at all cost—a thing which she will never do. When the time comes the Allies will strike so hard she'll never come to.

According to reports, U. S. is waking up. Well, its about time. They may as well stare the facts in the face for the war is past the jawbone stage.

I heard from Frank Devine. He tells me they are on the move, but I don't know where to——undoubtedly the front.

Yours truly,
Rollie Livick.

POTATO BLIGHT IN PETERBORO

OWNERS SHOULD IMMEDIATELY APPLY PREVENTIVE TO PLOTS NOT AFFECTED.

Potato blight has made its appearance in several Peterboro gardens, and the owners are much concerned as to the extent of its ravages. It will be some days before the full extent is known and in the meantime the owners should take advantage of every precautionary measure known to preserve the crops.

The blight is due to a germ which attacks the potato near the ground, and gradually spreads through the stalks killing the leaves and stem. Warm weather following rains is very conducive to the growth of the blight and at such times it is very likely to be noticed.

Bordeaux mixture is used as a preventive and with it is mixed arsenate of lead, and this mixture has been used for years, and if applied in time is said to be a good preventive. While its success in preventing the spread of the disease once the plot has been affected is not great, its chief value lies in its preventive qualities.

Consequently plot owners whose plots have not yet shown signs of being affected should immediately apply the mixture, which also serves as a poison for the potato bugs.

AVELOCK COUNCIL'S ACT WAS ABSOLUTELY ILLEGAL SAID JUDGE

operty Holders Appeal Against he Council's Order to the Court of Revision to Strike Off Income Assessment.

TOWN IN TWO CAMPS

The appeal entered by Havelock operty owners to compel the Com- to levy an income tax on the resi- nts to whom by statute it applies s adjourned yesterday afternoon His Honour Judge Huycke until xt Monday. Mr. F. D. Kerr, solicit- for the council, objected to the C. R. statement of the salaries of their ployees resident in Havelock, and manded that the company produce records of the wages paid to the lway men.

The appellant, Mr. Alex. Primrose, s partially successful yesterday. e names of Dr. Holdcroft, Dr. Wat- and Mr. H. F. McNicholl, manag- of the Bank of Toronto in Have- k, were ordered to be placed on assessment list for income tax. Altogether, there are nearly hundred persons who will be ected by whatever decision is ched by Judge Huycke at the next aring.

It was stated that the Havelock uncil, by a majority of one, recent- decided to suspend the income tax within the municipality. This action resulted in practically dividing the town into two camps, the one including citizens to whom the by-law would work an advantage, and the other comprising property holders who felt that the taxes lifted from income were unloaded on to their property.

Mr. Alex. Primrose became the leader and spokesman of the landowners in their determination to prevent, if possible, the accomplishment of the Council's designs and of the effectuation of the resolution that had been passed.

In his comment yesterday, Judge Huycke stated that the Council's course was absolutely illegal.

BERRIES ARE GOING TO WASTE IN THE NORTH COUNTRY

Mr. Charles Gladman Has Just Returned From a Trip.

Mr. Charles Gladman returned today from the north country. In speaking of conditions up north, Mr. Gladman said that the wastage this year in blue berries will, if the government or some organization does not take the matter up and send some help to pick them, be a serious oversight. Between Schwanigan and Sudbury there are enough blue and black berries growing wild to feed all Canada and if these could be gathered and dried they would aid materially in the situation.

LAYING ON OF THE HANDS HEALS THE INDIAN ARMY

Englishman Credited With Remarkable Success in Hard Cases—Athletes Under His Care Break Records in Sports.

GENERAL IS CURED

LONDON, July 26.—The gift of the "healing hands" is usually associated with the activities of the quack or medical faker in this country, but a letter received from India by Mrs. Ibbotson of Burnley appears to throw a new light on the subject. The writer, Capt. Ramsbottom, says:

"Men who ought to have been attending the medical tent daily were constantly missed. Enquiries were made and it was found that your husband was setting them right. Some were suffering from sprains, gravel rash, wounds, blood-poisoning, etc., and there was one case of dislocation.

"Ibbotson was sent for, questioned by the doctor for 40 minutes, and then he promised to cure in a month a soldier said to be practically hopeless from shell shock. The doctor ridiculed the idea, but allowed your husband to try. In twenty-nine days the man threw away his crutches and on examination was pronounced sound, greatly to the surprise of the camp.

"Ibbotson was warmly congratulated and promoted as depot masseur, while the man swears that your husband is a wizard. Since then the cures he has brought about are simply amazing. Men cheerfully wait at his tent door in a blazing sun for treatment. I've seen men carried off the field shrieking with pain taken to your husband and come away in an hour's time smiling.

"The men have blind faith in him. His fame has spread as far as middle India, where he was sent to treat a major-general, who had had no relief after thirty days' treatment. Your husband put him right in four hours. What he does or what is his secret we cannot tell, but he is credited here with being the cleverest man at his work in India.

"We engaged him as football trainer to our team, which was doing poorly. He gave them treatment, and they carried all before them in the All-India Cup competition. When the team won the cup in the presence of 20,000 men enthusiasm broke all bounds and they nearly pulled Ibbotson to pieces with delight. In the brigade sports he trained Lieut. Ingham, who broke all records for India for the 100 yards, and he trained Sergt. McNee, who left all competitors standing in the mile race."

Obeying God: Matt. 4:18-22; John 14 22-24; James 1 22-27.

Golden Text: If ye love me ye will keep my commandments.—John 14: 15.

1. Matt. 4, 18-22, Why did Jesus call men to be his apostles who were very busily engaged in other occupations?

2. If these men had refused to follow Jesus, preferring to continue the profitable ocupations in which they were engaged, what would have been their condition in eternity?

3. If God should call a Christian man to any position, and he refuses, why should he or not remain a Christian?

4. John 14:22. Why is it that worldly people have no experience of God's presence with them, and no realization of the love of Christ in their hearts?

5. Verse 23. Would you say or not, and why, that no person is a true Christian who commits wilful sin?

6. What reason would you give for the fact that the majority of professed Christians seem to have no experience of the love of God as a constant realization nor of Christ always dwelling in their hearts?

7. Verse 23. What is necessary for a Christian to do in order to have eyes to see, ears to hear, and to have sensible and constant fellowship with God?

8. Jesus teaches here that it is our duty and privilege to "keep his words," and by implication that we do not love him unless we do so; what then is the standing of professed Christians who openly confess that they go contrary to his words daily?

9. What proportion of professed Christians whom you know, including yourself, habitually keep Jesus' words?

10. Verse 24. Would you say or not and why that not loving Jesus is a sin in itself?

11. Does God make it possible or not and why for everybody to love Jesus?

12. If a man truly resolves and by the grace of God is determined to "keep Jesus' words" how long will it be before the love of Jesus springs up in his heart? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the Club.)

13. Verse 24. Jesus' words are God's commandments; are they easy or hard to keep, and what is essential to keep them? Give your reasons.

14. James 1:22. Of how much use is going to church or making a profesion of religion if we are not "doers of the word?"

15. Verses 23, 24. A man who glances at himself in a mirror and forgets what he looks like, is like a man who sees his disfigured moral image, and the gospel restorer in God's mirror, and turns away from it; what is the fate of such a man?

16. Verses 25, 26. See II Cor. 3: 18, and say how nearly a man's moral image should be like God's, and how it may be attained?

17. Verses 27, 28. What part does the control of our tongues play in living to please God?

18. Pure religion is to help the needy and keep ourselves unspotted from the world; to what extent can we do this?

The threatened "cold wave" in the Northwest failed to materialize, except in a very limited section. Those who rushed into the corn and oats buying Wednesday on the expectation of frozen crops had to revise their calculations when it was learned yesterday that instead of low temperatures, midsummer heat prevailed over all the West and Southern States. The result was a sharp decline in two markets, corn at Chicago closing from 3 1-2c. to 4 5-8c. lower, and oats 1 1-4c. lower. Winnipeg oats closed 1 3-8c. to 2 1-4c. lower. GERMANY IS BEGGING FOR GOLD AND GEMS

Government Making Frantic Appeal for Valuables to Back Up Its Credit—Mark So Depreciated That They Must Strip the Country of Everything Negotiable.

SELLING THEM TO NEUTRALS

Facing a steady decline in the purchasing power of its paper credit abroad, the German Government is making desperate efforts to get hold of the jewels owned by its subjects in order to sell them in the neutral countries with which it is still doing a limited business, and thus strengthen the position of the mark.

This plan was discussed more than two years ago, but at that time the opposition of the German jewelry trade, which was making huge profits out of selling diamonds, &c., to war profiteers, was effective, and the scheme was held up. During the last few months, however, the exchange problem has become so acute that the Government has come out openly and announced its intention of selling as many jewels to neutrals as possible.

German newspapers just received in New York show that during the big drive made in the week of June 16-22 to round up the gold coin and ornaments still in the hands of Germans whose patriotism had not been strong enough to induce them to turn over their valuables to the Reichsbank, special emphasis was laid upon the great benefit that would accrue to the empire through the acquisition of diamonds and other costly gems.

ISSUES FRANTIC APPEAL

Part of the almost frantic appeal printed in the German papers as an advertisement over the signature of Rudolf Havenstein, President of the Reichsbank, read:

"The world war is hurrying to a decision. Every one of us knows the object for which we are fighting. The purchase of gold by the Reichsbank and the sale of jewels in neutral countries by the diamond administration are for this object. This action strengthens the gold held by the empire. It increases our economic powers. It will contribute toward insuring us an honorable peace and the reconstruction of our peacetime industry. The sacrifice of gold and jewels called for by the Reichsbank counts * * *among the necessary works of preparation with which we intend to oppose the enemy and to make sure that the final victory perches upon our banners."

An article in the Vossische Zeitung of June 19, explaining the need for jewels and telling how their sale abroad was effected, read in part:

"The 'Jewel and Gold Purchase Week' that began on the 16th inst. has the object of not only providing the Reichsbank with gold, which it needs for the strengthening of its reserve and the improvement of the conditions connected with the covering of its notes, but also with jewels. The fact that the collection just opened aims also at the purchase of jewels has caused considerable surprise among the public. Many persons have wondered what our banking institution could do with jewels.

"Those asking such a question overlook the fact that Germany, now as formerly, must attach value to the importation of certain articles from neutral coutries, and is dependent upon the maintenance of a balance in the exchange of the neutral lands that is available there at any time. To reconstitute permanently these balances, which are constantly diminishing, in proportion to the amount of our imports from these countries and to make them larger than before, if possible, is and will remain the task of the administration of our Imperial Bank. The systematic carrying out of this policy is naturally only possible if the necessary means for obtaining the proper legal tender are always at hand. As such means jewels; next to gold, come into consideration.

SOLD IN NEUTRAL LANDS.

"The jewels bought up by the diamond administration are sold by it to purchasers from the neutral countries. An established principle insists that the jewels sold to the buyers abroad must be delivered only upon payment. As a matter of principle no credit is allowed to the neutral buyers."

The Reichstag com

The Reichsbank, according to the explanation in the Vossiche Zeitung, doesn't make any profit on the sale of jewels abroad, as, in case the minimum price fixed by the original owner is exceeded, the full amount paid by the foreigner goes to the seller, for whom the diamond administration appears to act as an agent Of course the German seller is paid depreciated German currency, while the Reichsbank has the benefit of strengthening its credit abroad. The Vossiche Zeitung remarks that, although thus far the principal markets for German jewels have been Switzerland, Haolland and th eScan Switzerland, Holland, and the Scandinavian countries, the events in the East have increased the number of neutral countries, and that in Eastern Europe there was likely to be a better demand for the big, yellow diamonds than existed in the West.

As in the case of the Eighth German War Loan campaign, the aid of the military twins, Hindenburg and Ludendorff, was sought in the gold and jewel roundup and the signatures of these personages under brief pleas to the public prominently displayed in all the newspapers of the empire. Hindenburg declared that "In war our gold belongs to the Fatherland," while Ludendorff opined that "He who retains gold fails to appreciate the gravity of the hour."

The Frankfurter Zeitung remarked, in its issue of June 19, that it was a bad sign for the spirit of the times when, after four years of such a terrible war, it was still necessary to carry on special campaigns to induce the people possessing gold and jewels to turn them over to the Reichsbank for the good of the Fatherland, and went on to say that, according to Treitschke, in the days following 1813, it was regarded as the deepest disgrace to possess gold or gems.

Early reports of the result of the week's campaign showed that $450,000 in gold and jewels had been collected in Hamburg, $200,000 in Breslau, and large sums in other cities, including Berlin, from which complete data were not yet available.

Mr. Arthur Hainge, Ashton Farm, Perley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country; our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days".

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

AN AWKWARD ENCOUNTER

CHAPTER CXXVIII

"I just met George, and he said you were in here alone, and, as I have had no luncheon, I told him I should join you," she said, with an air of surety that amazed me. She knew I did not like her—that I never willingly went where she was—that I had, on more than one occasion, shown my dislike so plainly she could not help but see it, yet she had the audacity to force herself upon me.

"I am nearly finished, myself," I told her, as coldly as I could speak. Mr. Howard was finished when I came in, so I ordered very little. I did not breakfast until nearly ten."

She gave the waiter her order, then turned to me. She asked:

"Why didn't you join us last night?"

"I have been very ill, and have not been sitting up late."

"Oh, but you were up. I saw you looking in at the grill room door."

I never had been so absolutely nonplussed in my life. My face turned crimson, I knew. How I hated this woman! Before I could frame an answer, she went on in a mocking voice:

"I didn't tell on you, so don't look so distressed."

HELEN REGAINS HER COOLNESS

"Tell on me? I do not understand Mrs. Collins," I said calmly.

"Oh, don't pretend you don't run so that George wouldn't see you—or was it because you were cross, that he hadn't asked you to join the party?"

I don't believe there ever lived anyone who felt more like committing murder than I did, at that minute. Yet, I managed to keep cool. I had spoken of my husband as "Mr. Howard" each time, but she persistently ignored it and continued to call him "George." This always angered me, and it did so now.

"How do you know he hadn't asked me to join the party?" I asked. I would see how far this woman was in my husband's confidence—just how intimate they were, how much she knew of our relations.

"Simply enough! Because he said so."

"Mr. Howard knows I am not well enough to remain up until three o'clock in the morning," I would let her know that I was aware of the time he returned. She laughed tantalizingly:

I see; you were awake! You might might as well be up having a good time, as lying in bed worrying."

"Worrying? That was the last thing I thought of doing. Why should I worry?" Where the strength came to parry this woman's unkind thrusts, I never shall know. But I felt like a different being. I had borne all that I should bear, and she knew it hurt. From this time on I would be different! I had often heard of the "last straw"; well, George's leaving me alone while he spent his time with her, on the night before, and now her insulting words and manner, were the "last straw" with me. George had wanted me to be different. I would be! He would see that I was changed, and others—principally Julia Collins and her set—should see it also.

JULIA COLLINS SHOWS SURPRISE

"Most women worry, when they are left out," she said, but I saw the look of astonishment come into her face, even tho she quickly masked it.

"Yes, when they are jealous of anyone with whom their husbands happen to be. But when one feels as I do—that, because of many things, my husband prefers me to anyone else—there is no cause for worry."

"You are very sure of George!" she scarcely hid the sneer by her short laugh.

"I am! You see, Mr. Howard had known all you Moreland women long before he met me. Had he preferred you, he would not have asked me to marry him. That is a self-evident fact, so needs no explaining. And most men, I notice, prefer to marry a young woman rather than one of their age or older."

The blank amazement in Mrs. Collins face told me I had hit home, and gave me such courage as I had never felt since my marriage.

"One would think George a Methuselah, and his friends the same age, to hear you talk!"

"No—Mr. Howard is quite a young man, and of course his friends are quite young also. But, as I said, he had known them all long before he knew me; and he evidently preferred a woman much younger than one his own age, or a trifle older." I had an idea that Julia Collins was a little older than she acknowledged, and when she flushed angrily I was positive that I was right.

"You are to be congratulated on having such entire faith in your own attractions," she said, just as the waiter brought me my check. Then she added: "You haven't thanked me for not giving you away last night."

"I have nothing to thank you for, Mr. Howard knows you saw me," I told her untruthfully, but feeling ni regret that I had prevaricated.

Sun Burned Skin

You want a healthy summer tan. But sometimes you get it too quickly and then there is a few days of suffering.

The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment takes out the stinging and burning and leaves the skin delightfully soft and smooth.

Because it is equally effective in relieving stings of insects and ivy poisoning as well as chafing and skin irritations it is invaluable in the summer camp.

CHINA PAINTING

SLANG IS HARDY.

Some Supposedly Modern Phrases Are Really Centuries Old.

Much of the current slang supposed to be modern is not new. For instance, "kid" (child) goes back as far at least as Massinger's "Old Law" (1599).

"I am old, you say. Yes; parlous old, kids, and you mark me well. Kidnap (to nab a kid) was certainly not a new word to De Foe or Bunyan. "To skip out" is accounted slang, but in Wycliff's translation of the Bible we read, "Whanne barnabas and poul herden this, thei skipten out."

In "Ralph Roister Doister," the first English comedy, about the middle of the sixteenth century, an actor says, "Nay dame, I will fire thee out of my house," which certainly has a modern ring.

Goldsmith in "The Good Natured Man" (1768) says, "If the man comes from the Cornish borough you must do him," and this will require no gloss for the modern reader.

"Not in it" is found in Shakespeare's "Winter's Tale." "They have a dance which the wenches say is a gallimaufry of gambols because they are not in it."

"Cut it out" goes back as far at least as Sheridan's "Critic" (1779), "The performers have cut it out."

The optimistic brakeman who had both legs cut off by a train and who, when a bystander tried to console him by saying he ought to be thankful he wasn't killed outright, replied, "I'm not kicking," was only using a Biblical expression. "Wherefore kick ye at my sacrifice?"—Edward A. Allen in Forum.

SAWING GRANITE ROCKS.

Steel Wires and Sand and Water Are the Apparatus Used.

Stone is still sawed by hand, even in great cities, where the latest appliances of the mechanical art are to be found. Yet the mechanical sawing of rock is at least sixteen centuries old and in recent years has reached a stage of perfection.

The idea of using a metal cord and a mixture of sand and water for sawing stone was patented by Eugene Chevallier in France in 1854. His apparatus, with scarcely any change, was used not long ago in cutting a trench through the Pont Neuf, in Paris.

The principle upon which the mechanical stone saw works is described by Victor Raynouard in La Science et la Vie as follows:

An endless rope composed of three steel wires twisted together is set in movement and draws with it a grinding granular substance, pressing this hard upon the stone that is to be sawed. The mordant substance is grit mixed with water. The stream of water renders the movement easy and prevents the heating of the cable. The ends of the cable are joined by splicing.

The hardest rocks, such as porphyry, are now sawed more easily than the softer, such as marble, but not so rapidly. Marble is sawed at the rate of nearly nine inches an hour, granite at from six to seven inches an hour.

Wedding Presents.

Wedding presents originated in a feudal tribute from the vassals to their lord. When feudalism ceased the presents became voluntary. In the days of Queen Elizabeth a pair of knives or scissors was a common gift and symbolized the cutting of unfaithful love.

With a String.

"Mamma, can't we have anything we want?"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Recompense

By SAIDEE ESTELLE BALCOM

Gordon Strong drew back in the shadow of a building and fixed his glance upon the frail, forlorn figure of a young girl twenty feet away clinging to the rail bridge guard and staring fixedly down into the depths of the rolling river. He noted that she was not more than eighteen, her face was colorless and her pose strained. Her hand slid along the iron tubing as though seeking a firm clutch to lift herself over the obstruction for a death plunge. In an instant he was at her side:

"My girl," he said gently, "are you in trouble?"

She threw up one hand to shield her face at the kindly tones and the words sympathetically expressed. Then she burst into an uncontrollable torrent of sobs and tears. Strong did not at once break in upon the misery of the poor creature. He relaxed his clasp, but stood near to her.

"You can trust me, as a man having a sister and one as dear," he spoke finally, "What can I do for you?" Lucy Baird lifted her tear-stained face and her dimmed eyes scanned his own.

"Yes, I could trust you," she said, brokenly, "but of what avail. The bitter end has come, and rather that," and her hand swept toward the river, "than a continuation of struggle, homelessness and hunger. Why should you trouble about me? You don't know me. I am nobody. I came to the city after father and mother died, but I had no trade and what work I did get was at starvation rates. I know you mean kindly, but it will come to the river, or worse, at the last."

"Not if I can help it," declared Strong encouragingly. "I know what trouble is. I am in the midst of struggles as vital as your own. Come, let us see what the care and friendship of true hearts will do for you."

One hour later Lucy Baird was the welcome guest of Mrs. Eunice Bryan, the sister of Strong. The next day a new friend appeared, Miss Inez Bodley, his fiancee. Lucy was divided between smiles and tears, her honest, earnest heart touched to its depths by the kindness of strangers who treated her as a guest, rather than as a mendicant.

Gordon Strong had told this waif that he, too, had his troubles, and he did not exaggerate. This had happened: he was abroad on business for his uncle, Robert Mills, when he received news of his death.

He had turned to the city to find out that Acton Blake, a distant relative, had claimed heirship to the estate of Mr. Mills under a will several years old. Strong, knowing full well that Blake was an unworthy profligate and schemer who had been utterly cast off by Mr. Mills, at once prepared to contest the will. That a later one in his favor had been made there was the positive evidence of its witnesses, but the document could not be found.

Blake had acted with due celerity before Strong reached the city. He had taken possession of the office of Mr. Mills and had sold its contents to get hold of ready cash. When Strong located the purchaser he found him to be a cheap junk man. The latter, questioned as to the contents of desks and file cases, informed Strong that he had dumped great masses of old documents into his paper scrap heap. Strong bought the entire contents of the paper bin. He removed them to the loft of a barn at the rear of his sister's home. He hoped that among the papers of his dead uncle some document might come to light dispite the legality of the claim of Blake.

Lucy begged for work to do to repay her kind protectors and Strong explained to her about the paper refuse. She intelligently set about the task of going through the same. Strong was busy elsewhere, and day after day his faithful helper delved into the great heap.

Twice Lucy had noticed a lurking form in the alley at the rear of the loft, acting suspiciously. One evening she came from the loft into the house, laboring under the strain of some disturbing influence. She questioned Mrs. Bryan as to when her brother would be home, and when she learned that he was staying late at his office that evening left the house.

She missed him at the office. He had evidently gone home and she hastened to return. Strong had reached home just as a great glow illumed the rear of the lot. The barn was in flames. Later he knew that an emissary of Blake had set the blaze. Just then he was dismayed at the fact that the papers amid which he hoped to find some important documents, were destroyed.

He, Inez, and his sister were rather dejectedly discussing the circumstance when Lucy came rushing into the house, breathless and excited.

"Fire has ended your task, Lucy," spoke Strong.

"But it was ended," cried Lucy, "See! only two hours since I came across—this."

"This" was the latest will of Robert Mills, and as he eagerly scanned it Gordon Strong knew that there need be no further delay as to his marriage, for he was a rich man.

"Bright little helper!" he said, clasping the hand of Lucy. "Never look back at that dark hour in your life, when you realize how much you have done to make us all happy."

When Scanlan Wooed Minister Wu and the Chinese Officials.

When W. J. Scanlan was in the show business he invaded Washington on one occasion with a brand new comic opera. In order to give the piece a fine sendoff he formulated the plan of sending free tickets for boxes to the president, the cabinet members and other men high in social life.

"That won't do," one of his newspaper friends told him. "Too common. Do something picturesque. Why don't you go after Mr. Wu, the Chinese minister? If you get him he will bring down a lot of other diplomatic people."

Scanlan fell for the proposition and called at the Chinese legation.

"What sort of show is this?" asked Mr. Wu.

"It's a comic opera," replied Scanlan.

"Any good jokes in it?"

Scanlan said it was full of good jokes.

"Tell me some of them," commanded Mr. Wu.

Scanlan did so, and Wu got such a series of laughs out of them that he sent for his whole establishment, numbering thirty-two people, and made the embarrassed Scanlan tell them all over again.

"Now," continued Wu, "are there any good songs in this show?"

"The show had so many good songs," declared Scanlan, "that we had to throw some of them away."

"All right," said Wu. "Sing me some of the best."

"I sang them," said Scanlan, telling the story afterward. "But that wasn't so remarkable. I had to sing 'em. There were thirty-two Chinamen to make me sing 'em. The amazing part of the thing was that all thirty-two of them came to see the show that night."—Popular Magazine.

Her Art Not Appreciated.

Varnishing day at the Royal academy is always an important and interesting function. Canvases and panels that have been thirsty enough to absorb the oil from the whole or portions of the pictures painted upon them have once more the luster of their first painting restored by these pick-me-ups.

Members of the year's hanging committee are always at hand on these occasions to consider suggestions and complaints about their recent labors. The chief complaint was by a lady who found her work had been hung horizontally instead of vertically. It kind [illegible] possibly it had been accepted on the horizontal understanding.—New York Sun.

Why the Boiler Rumbles.

That noisy rumbling and clattering in the kitchen boiler after the gas water heater has been lighted for some time has scared many a woman. The editor of the Monthly Gas Chat says it need alarm no one, as it is caused by the expansion of the water as it is heated from the top of the boiler. The colder water below, rushing up to displace the expanded water above, will often cause a concussion.

ANDREW JACKSON'S FINE.

How Judge Hall Came to Punish the Doughty General.

When the war of 1812 was over vague rumors of peace drifted into New Orleans, but still Jackson did not feel justified in revoking the martial law, under which he had placed the city. While the city was in this state this peculiar incident started. A man named Louallier was tried as being a spy and was acquitted. This displeased Jackson, and feeling that in the martial law he had complete command of the city, he, in opposition to the court, retained Louallier in prison and sent Judge Hall out of the city with orders not to return until it was regularly posted that peace had been declared or that the enemy had left the coast.

The following day came the overdue notice officially explaining that peace had been declared and that the treaty had been ratified. Upon hearing this Jackson revoked the martial law and set all his prisoners free. Then preparing to send home the detached militia from Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky amid the greetings and demonstrations of the populace, Judge Hall returned to the city.

In order to uphold the honor, as it seems of the civil over the martial government, Judge Hall issued, on March 21, an order summoning Jackson to court for contempt of a habeas corpus writ and also to state his reason for so doing. The next day Jackson appeared in court in person. He held a written protest against the decision which was to be given.

Hall then imposed a fine of $1,000, remarking that "the duty was unpleasant, that he could not forget the important services of the defendant to the country, and that in consideration thereof he would not make imprisonment a part of the punishment."

The fine was promptly paid amid cheering of the crowd for the popular hero.—Philadelphia Press.

Great Apple Industry.

The apple industry in the United States today represents a stupendous commercial achievement. It had grown to 60,000,000 barrels in 1910; it dropped to 28,000,000 in 1911, and went up again to 40,000,000 barrels in 1912. From this date forward there is a continual increase in the production, for the great cities of the world are crying for apples, and people everywhere are just beginning to apprehend the actual value of this delicate fruit. We are turning backward to our heritage, for in the days of our great-grandfathers the common adage was: "An apple a day will keep the doctor away." Fruit as a part of the diet represents a most health-giving element.—Christian Herald.

Can't Be Cut Off With a Shilling.

French parents (or, at all events those with more than 2 shillings to dispose of by will) are precluded from the gratification of cutting a mutinous child off with a shilling. A reserve is established by law which no testator can bequeath away from his offspring. A Frenchman with one child can dispose of half his property according to his pleasure; the other half must inevitably pass to the child. Those with two children can dispose of only one third of their property, those with three children of one fourth, and so on according to the size of the family. Stern parents occasionally seek to evade the law by subterfuge, but the disposal of property in France is hedged round with so many restrictions that family black sheep are rarely indicted of their legal inheritances.—London Mail.

ORIGIN OF METALS

Varied Theories as to How the Ores Are Formed.

NATURE HIDES THE SECRET.

Science Has For Centuries Tried to Wrest It From Her, but Geologists and Mineralogists Are as Yet Unable to Agree Upon the Process.

You have read of that legendary Indian who while chasing game on a Bolivian mountain side seized a bush to prevent himself from falling, and the bush being pulled loose from its scanty hold on the rocks, he saw its crooked roots grasping masses of gleaming white ore and thus became the discoverer of the famous silver mines of Potosi.

You have also read, perhaps with itching fingers, of prospectors picking up nuggets of gold, worth a thousand dollars each or opening veins of quartz all shot through with heavy threads of the yellow metal.

You know that ores of gold and silver or of any other precious or useful metal are not to be found in everybody's back yard, but must be sought for in certain favored parts of the earth.

But has your intelligent curiosity ever led you to inquire how those ores came to be where they are and nowhere else? Have you ever wondered what makes a gold nugget?

Possibly you think that gold and other metals grow somewhat as fruits do—in soils and climates that are specially suited to them. Well, there is considerable truth in that idea, and the word "grow" is, in one sense, surprisingly applicable to such deposits.

But there is a great deal more in the matter than you would imagine, and on no subject has science fought more battles royal than on this of the origin of metallic ores. I think that there are some geologists who would rather find out this secret to the very bottom than discover the richest lode that the ribs of the earth contain. If they could do both that would be perfection, and we must not forget that knowledge is power.

Until about 400 years ago everybody who thought about it at all believed that veins of precious ore were distributed under the influence of the planets. At that time astrology held the place of science.

Finally George Agricola, a German mineralogist, who lived about the time when the gold and silver of Mexico and Peru were making Spain the temporary mistress of the world, hit upon a theory which came in substance very near the truth. He taught that water, penetrating into the earth and becoming heated, took up scattered minerals in solution and afterward deposited them as ores in cavities in the rocks. The mineral solutions he called the earth's "juices."

A couple of hundred years later the German geologist Werner set forth a view that became very famous under the name of the "Neptunist theory," from Neptune, the god of the sea. Werner's idea was that as the earth cooled down from the primeval nebula out of which it was formed it was enveloped in a universal hot ocean, holding in solution all kinds of minerals, and that when the rocky crust was formed the water leaking down into it deposited its metallic contents by chemical precipitation in veins and lodes wherever the circumstances were favorable.

But a hundred years ago the Neptunist theory, which had swept everything before it in the minds of men of science, met its Waterloo at the hands of Hutton, the Scottish geologist, with his "Plutonic" theory (from Pluto, the god of the infernal regions). Hutton's idea was that the materials which fill the metallic veins were melted by heat and forcibly injected into the clefts and fissures of the strata from below.

The "Neptunists" and "Plutonists" had a hard fight, with the latter holding the upper hand, until their theory had assumed a kind of compromise form, with water again playing the principal role. The American geologist, Van Hise, is the author of one of the latest theories, according to which meteoric water (condensed atmospheric vapor) penetrates deep into the earth's crust, and, with steadily increasing temperature, takes up mineral matter into solution. Spreading, as it gets deeper, the water reaches larger openings in the rocky crust, in which it ascends, with decreasing temperature and pressure.

There it deposits the ores, whose materials it has collected in its wanderings and carried along in solution.

But this is not the last word, and in recent years there has been a partial reaction toward the Plutonist theory. Besides, a great deal seems to depend upon the nature of the ore whose origin is in question.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

THE BATTLE OF MARATHON.

And the Mound Under Which the Old Grecian Heroes Rest.

A great Grecian landmark is the Soros, the mound erected over the graves of 192 Athenians who fell in the battle of Marathon, Aug. 12, 490 B. C. The mound is about forty feet high and 300 yards in circumference. Underneath the mound lie the heroes who died in this most decisive victory which prevented the Persians from invading Europe.

The battle had hardly begun when the Persians in immensely superior force, doubtless ten to one, pulled themselves together and by sheer mass broke through the Greek center. But this had been calculated upon beforehand. Miltiades employed strategy, making his line weak at the center, and allowed the Persians to break in. Then, with his heavy masses at the ends, he ground the Persian wings to pieces and fell upon their center. The most stubborn fighting, apart from the battle at the ships, was probably at this spot, half a mile from the shore. Six thousand four hundred Persians lay on this plain and along the shore, while 192 men of Marathon lay wrapped in glory on the field.

It was long suspected that the heroes of Marathon were buried under the mound, but Mr. Stais, one of the Greek ephori of antiquities, studying the plain, came to the conclusion that the surface of the soil had been raised by alluvial deposits eight to ten feet above the level of 490 B. C. In 1890 he drove a trench with a downward slant into the center of the mound and found the bones of the heroes with their weapons beside them.—Strand Magazine.

SINKING SHIPS.

If Completely Submerged They Must Go to the Bottom.

Answering a correspondent who writes: "I am very anxious to find out whether a ship will sink if the bottom of the ocean is at great depth or, at least, at such depth that the weight of the water would be greater than the weight of the ship. It is the opinion of many that at a certain depth the ship would remain suspended instead of sinking to the bottom. Please explain the exact truth of the matter," Edgar Lucien Larkin in the New York American says:

"Any mass that will entirely sink below the surface of the ocean will sink to the bottom of any sea or ocean on earth. This is because water is almost incompressible.

"Enormous pressure in hydraulic presses has been made upon distilled and also upon sea water, and the diminution of volume—that is, increase of density—is only 0.000044 for ocean water for each atmosphere, i. e., each addition of fifteen pounds to each square inch. Then water soaked wood would be increased in density by very nearly the same amount.

"Hence if all of the wood in a wooden ship sinks below the surface it must go to the bottom. The question of reaching the bottom of the ocean is decided for any kind of matter of any ship or boat by its behavior at the surface. If all of the material of the boat sinks at all below the surface, then it will fall to the bottom of any sea, there being such a slight increase in density of water at the bottom of the deepest ocean."

Height of Waves.

Among the most trustworthy scientific measurements of ocean waves are those of Lieutenant Paris of the French navy. The highest waves measured by him were in the Indian ocean between the Cape of Good Hope and the island of St. Paul. Thirty waves measured during a northwest gale there averaged twenty-nine and one-half feet in height, and six of them, following one another with beautiful regularity, were thirty-seven and one-half feet in height. Some still higher waves were seen, but not measured. In a moderate breeze the length of a wave was found to be about twenty-five times its height, but in a gale only eighteen times. — London Globe.

A Kind Wish For Mother.

The five-year-old found his mother looking a bit unhappy.

"Have you a pain, muvver?" he asked sympathetically. When she nodded he thought a minute and then exclaimed:

"I wish a fairy would come and turn your pain into a piece of cake." Then the small boy asserted himself over the angel child, adding, "And I would eat it."—New York Sun.

MAKING INVESTMENTS.

Safety of Principal Is More Essential Than Big Returns.

First, here is a quotation from a thrift preacher:

"Many fortunes have been made and many more will be made through wise investments. Many fortunes are lost, too, through unwise investments. But thrifty habits and consulting with experienced persons like conservative bankers will give one the wisdom necessary to handle money wisely."

Second, I set down a quotation from the advertisement of a wise and conservative investment banker:

"In lending or investing money all possible care should be taken to guard against hasty or impulsive decision. Every endeavor should be made to assemble such reliable information as will permit of the exercise of intelligent judgment. The man who assumes this attitude toward all investment propositions comes to have an increasing regard for the element of conservatism, and is ordinarily the first man to seek the co-operation of investment experts."

Conservatism in investment means, first of all, keeping the principal sum safe. What profits it to get 7 or 8 per cent a year on your money for three or four years if at the end of that time misfortune of any sort overtakes the company you invested in to such an extent that you would find what you have paid $100 for is worth only $75? And when you leave the road of conservatism in putting your money out to work this is exactly the experience you are likely to have.

Better keep your money in the savings bank, where it will earn about 4 per cent and where, if you wish, interest will be compounded, until you are positively certain of the soundness of the investment advice you receive. Adding to the saved sum in a savings bank, too, is a mighty good way to fasten the thrift habit upon yourself. Choose as your first adviser in investment some one who has selected investments for the savings bank. From him learn what the elements of sound investment are. Go slow!—John M. Oskison in Chicago News.

LURE OF THE OPIUM PILL.

And the Way the Cost Piles Up as It Enslaves Its Victim.

In the American Magazine appears an article entitled "A Modern Opium Eater," written by a former newspaper man, who became a victim of the habit and is now a convict in a penitentiary. The following extract from his article gives an idea of the amount of money required by an opium eater:

"By this time the cost of opium had become a very appreciable and permanent expense. From a few pills at first I increased my allowance day by day until it took thirty or forty 'fun' (a Chinese measure; there are seventy-six fun in an ounce) to give me the mental relief I craved. The physical craving—the body's demand for it—can be satisfied with approximately the same amount each day. The mental craving—the mind's demand—increases daily. What satisfies tonight is too little tomorrow, and so on. To feel even normal I now needed three or four times the half dozen pills which at first had given me such exquisite pleasure. To get the exhilaration, the soothed nerves, the contentment I craved, I, like each of the millions before me, had to use more and more each day.

"Thirty-six fun of opium at retail costs, at an average, $3. A fifty cent tip to my 'cook' and a quarter for the privilege of the room in which I smoked made my habit cost me about $4 a day, which made a ghastly hole in even the good salary I earned. I began to buy my opium by the can, paying from $25 to $30 for tins averaging 460 fun. The elimination of the retailer's profit helped temporarily, but the ever increasing demands of my habit soon overcame the saving."

Books Made by Slaves.

Some publishers in ancient Rome could turn out books rapidly and cheaply. A publisher of the Augustan era produced 1,000 copies of the second book of Martial in ten hours, and these, sold at about 12 cents apiece, gave him a profit of 100 per cent. This was done by employing slaves carefully trained to write swiftly and legibly. Working in batches of 100, with an overseer dictating the book in hand, the task was completed in a very short time. As soon as the copies were written they were revised, corrected, rolled up and bound. Being slaves, the men required only maintenance from their master, and thus he could afford to sell their productions at a very low rate.

From One Thing to Another.

"We sent Gladys Ann to cooking school to get her mind off her piano playing," said Mr. Cumrox.

"Did the plan succeed?"

"Yes. Now we're trying to persuade her to study political economy so as to get her mind off the cooking."—Washington Star.

HE ENFORCED THE RULE.

But In Doing It Grant Proved His Good Hearted Nature.

General Grant was a kind and warm hearted man in spite of a certain brusqueness of manner. A story that General Logan used often to tell is to the point.

At the time General Logan was with General Grant at Holly Springs, Miss., General Forrest, the Confederate cavalry leader, had just captured a train of supplies, and General Grant had issued an order to his men to scour the country for twenty miles round in order to get food for his troops. The country had already been swept pretty clean, and the new demands brought a good deal of hardship on the people of the neighborhood. At many of the homes there were only women, old men, children and faithful colored servants. These people, hungry and without money to buy provisions, were often forced to apply to the northern army in their distress. Food was always given them if they would take the oath of allegiance to the United States.

One day a rickety carriage drew up before General Grant's headquarters, and from it alighted an elderly woman and her colored driver. The woman was admitted to the tent, and the servant stood just inside the tent flap. Only a few words were necessary to explain matters. The woman's home had been ravaged by troops, both blue and gray, and she and her servants needed food. The soft voiced woman spoke of her humiliation at having to beg for food, and added that she made the request more for her servants than for herself. "I am willing to suffer everything for the south," she said, "but I can't see our people starve."

An officer who had charge of such cases told the woman that she should have food if she would sign the oath of allegiance. "I cannot do that," she said. "My husband and three sons are fighting under the Confederate flag. I thank you, sir, for listening to me."

The woman turned to leave. General Grant, who had been writing at a table in one corner of the tent, glanced up from his papers. He called to the negro:

"Sam, did you ever hear of Abraham Lincoln?"

"Yassuh, gen'ral."

"Do you know that he is trying to free you colored people?"

"Yassuh, Ah knows it."

"Are you willing to take sides with Abraham Lincoln—to take the oath of allegiance to the United States?"

"Yassuh, gen'ral, Ah's willin' ter do dat."

General Grant turned to the officer who had talked with the woman. "Administer the oath to Sam," he said, "and give him the provisions. See that he gets plenty."

The rickety old carriage with its escort of soldiers passed through the Union lines a short time afterward, laden to the seats with provisions, and Sam, probably thinking less of his oath than of the supper to come, grinned from ear to ear as he urged the two mules to a faster gait.

The Professor's Prophecy Failed.

While a student at Harvard university Phillips Brooks was walking in the yard one day with a professor, who asked him what he intended making of himself.

"I am thinking of the ministry," answered the youth.

"Then banish such thoughts," said the professor earnestly. "Your manner of speech would forever bar you from being successful in that calling."

Many years later, when Phillips Brooks was one of the world's great pulpit orators, the most expert stenographer in England took down one of his sermons and said:

"Any stenographer who thinks he has conquered fast talkers should try Phillips Brooks."

The Proper Order.

A successful man died not long ago. Somebody says his success was due to brains, a sense of humor and complete self confidence.

Fault has been found with the arrangement of this sequence.

The critic claims that self confidence should come first, with brains trailing.

There are six ways of arranging the trio.

ATLANTIC OCEAN RECORDS.

Vessels That Won Fame by Reducing the Time of the Trips.

In the early days of Atlantic steam navigation anywhere from ten days to a fortnight was used up between New York and England, and on the eastward voyage it was by no means unusual for some of the sailing packets of Grinnell and Minturn, red, white and blue swallowtail burgee, and of Tommy Tapscott, black ball on burgee and foretopsail, to beat the lumbering sidewheelers.

The first steamer to cut under the ten day voyage was the Persia in 1856, with 9 days, 1 hour and 45 minutes. This remained a record for ten years, until the Scotia in 1866, 8 days, 2 hours and 48 minutes, lopped off a whole day. Three years later the City of Brussels in 1869 established the seven day class, with 7 days, 22 hours and 3 minutes.

It was not until 1882 that the six day boat claimed the record, the Alaska, with 6 days, 18 hours and 37 minutes. The five day class was opened in 1889 by the City of Paris, with 5 days 19 hours 18 minutes. The first of the four day class was the Lusitania in 1908, with 4 days 15 hours. The record is now held by the Mauretania, with a passage in 1910 of 4 days, 10 hours and 21 minutes.—New York Sun.

Care of Pearls.

One of the representatives of a famous jewelry firm gives a word of advice upon the preservation and treatment of pearls. Upon no account, he said, should they be locked up in a safe or other dark place for lengthy periods, since such treatment soon causes them to lose their "life" and become dull. If their fair owners find that for some reason or other they cannot wear them outside their garments they should make a point of wearing them underneath the dress next to the skin. Constant contact with the human skin gives to the stones light, luster, gloss and sheen. The best possible way to keep the pearls in a perfect state of preservation, as well as to prolong their life, is to wear them always, both by night and by day.—London Tit-Bits.

The French and American Forces Continue To Advance

Allies Will Assist The Czechs In Siberia

Reasons For Monumental Defeat of the Germans

French Strategy, Aided by the American Forces, Won Out—Preparations for the Battle

THE FRENCH 75'S

(By Lowell Mellett.)
(United Press Service.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, July 26.—An explanation of the monumental defeat given the Crown Prince's army can be made after three weeks' silence.

The French knew the German's peace offensive was launched July 15.

On July 12, General Petain submitted to General Foch a plan to meet the coming attack.

On July 18 Foch approved it.

At 11:40 on the night of July 14, twenty minutes before the attack, a defensive artillery fire began harassing the waiting German masses.

Counter offensive forces were ready to move forward, but were withheld until the Crown Prince's forces reached a previously determined line of resistance and were so deeply involved that they could not alter their plans.

The reason the Crown Prince, Hindenburg, or Ludendorf, had not expected such an attack was that they shared the general opinion that the French were mlocked, while it is now possible to tell the while it is now possible to tell the whole story of that opinion.

Successful Attack.

Following the successful attack in battle beginning May 15 and after the date of July 9, which was without success, the German high command was convinced that the French were worn out and all their fighting energy gone, so took little pains to disguise their plans.

The French were tired, it is true, but so were the Germans. The latter delayed longer than the French, the reason probably being the necessity to allow the recuperation of slightly wounded men and to get the classes of 1919 entered ready for the campaign.

At first the French were counting on the battle coming on July 7, and that it would be in the Champagne, west of Rheims. On July 10 it was thought the 14th surely would be the date, and anticipating that the Germans would expect the French not to be ready, because of their national fete.

Prisoners Taken.

When it did not come on the night of the 14th General Gouraud ordered a coup de main capturing 27 prisoners from whom definite knowledge was obtained that the battle would start at midnight. The artillery opened up on the French lines.

It was realized from the outset that the French first lines could not be held, so a zone of outposts was formed with little groups of officers and men whose duty was to fire and break up the advancing waves as much as possible, maintaining carefully the communication with the main forces by means of underground wires and pigeons.

General Gouraud's army consisted entirely of French except one American reserve division of 27,500 men. General Bertolet's army being the French, had one Italian corps and two American divisions—one in line and one in reserve.

Army Dropped Back.

When attacked the movement began under cover of shell, gas and smoke. The fourth army dropped back, leaving only its outposts, the French 75's and other guns, which had been silent and their presence unknown to the Germans. The guns were cut loose by the outposts instructions. They wrought terrible havoc and seriously interfered with the German advance. In many cases the German's second lines kepeing a time-table, walked directly into their heaviest losses. Nowhere did they reach the line of resistance the first day, and General Gouraud was able to report the Champagne attack stopped.

The German Plans.

German shells and a smoke screen enabled them to pass the Marne the first day and to go well forward reaching the line of resistance at some points. The next day the Champagne effort ended, while the Germans Were Again Deluded

They Failed to Protect Their Right Flank—Left Americans Out.

Canadian Press.

LONDON, July 26.—(via Reuter)—It is now clearly proved that the Germans from the beginning of the offensive were again deluded with idea that the French army was exhausted and left the possibility of counter offensive on their right flank out of calculations. They failed to reckon with the Americans whose presence enabled the French commanders to take measures which they might have hesitated to take with their own resources alone.

PARIS, July 26. — The Germans have reinforced their right flank of the Soissons-Rheims Pocket, says La Liberte, with a new army commanded by General Von Eben, which has been placed between armies of General Von Hutier General Von Boehn.

THE WEATHER

In decided contrast to the torrid conditions prevailing in these parts, in the west the weather is quite chilly. From 4 to 6 degrees below the freezing point has occurred nightly in some sections, and there have also been snow flurries. Highest temperature here yesterday 87; lowest last night 64 degrees. Some people think it is warm here at night. Night temperatures of from 70 to 80 degrees are of common occurrence in the larger American cities. Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Buffalo, New York and Washington all report minimum tematures of 70 to 78 degrees, while New Orleans perspires in 98 in the daytime, and 80 degrees at night.—W.P

DEFENSIVE POSITIONS

(Canadian Press.)

With the French Army, Friday morning, July 26. — The entire German position within the Marne salient is such that it may fall at any instant as a result of some sharp forward movement by the allies affecting a vital part.

It is for this reason that the German commanders have ordered their men to hold on at all costs, while a defensive position is prepared upon which the German armies can fall back. Day after day, the allies, now French, now Americans, now British, are encroaching upon the triangular salient; at some places making deep dents in the enemy positions, and at others progressing more slowly.

Approved of the Czar's Execution

Bolsheviki Say the Execution Was Absolutely Correct—Valuable Documents Secured.

WILL BE PUBLISHED

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

STOCKHOLM, July 25. The Soviet Pan Executive Council has placed its approval on the execution of former Czar Nicholas, it was learned here to-day. Chairman Svordloff announced at a meeting of the council that official notification of the execution had been received from the Ural Soviet, adding: "The Moscow government had planned to give Nicholas a trial for his crimes against the people, but the efforts of the monarchists to kidnap the former Czar made his execution inevitable." The Pan Executives then expressed the following resolution: "We recognize that the execution of Nicholas was absolutely correct." Svordloff also told the council that they had come into possession of valuable documents taken from the former ruler, including his own diary, and that the former Czarina, and also correspondence between the former Czar and Monk Rasputin, and between the Czarina and the monk. This will all be published shortly it was said. The press of Russia, including Socialist newspapers, is condemning the execution, declaring it cruel and unnecessary. Nicholas, it was pointed out, was harmless, and they declare that the Bolscheviki claim Czecho-Slovaks were planning to kidnap him was for the purpose of discrediting the Czechs, and also to excuse the execution.

Reports have reached here that Grand Dukes Ignore Konetantinovitch, Konstantin, Konstantinovitch, and Sergei Michaelovitch, have been kidnapped from Alpayovsk after a severe battle with the Red Guards.

MAKING SPIES IN GERMANY

Among the papers found on a German spy captured recently was an interesting list of the qualifications necessary for a good spy.

"The principal gift of a German spy," we are told, "must be secrecy. He must observe with care and have a good memory to enable him to retain the dates and particulars of events. He must be exact, patient ,and must not betray anxiety or hurry in procuring information. He must destroy all writings and never throw them into the waste-paper basket, not even torn into little pieces. It is advisable that he should use a conventional language, which is certainly preferable to ciphers, which give rise to suspicions and mistakes.

"The German spy must have a good general education; he must know languages, but sometimes pretend not to know them. He should confine himself to ascertaining facts rather than opinions. For secret conversation solitary places are to be preferred, avoiding pavements and restaurants, especially those at the railway stations."

Among the instructions given by the German Government to its spies, it is stated that English officers, both of the Army and Navy, are to be regarded as "incorruptible."

MAIDEN TRIP OF FIRST REALLY CONCRETE BOAT.

Behaviour of the little Craft is Everything that could be Desired.

Cornwall, July 26.—The steamer Concretia, the first genuinely concrete vessel to be built and launched in America, passed through the Cornwall canal yesterday on her maiden voyage, making the trip from Montreal in a few minutes under 24 hours, after lying up all night at Stanley Island. The Concretia attained an average speed of 10 knots an hour on the run to Cornwall, the engines working perfectly, and the trim little boat showing no vibration whatever. The Concretia was launched in the Montreal drydocks on November 14, 1917, the construction being completed inside of eight weeks. She is 126 feet long, 22 feet 6 inches wide, with a depth of 12 feet 6 inches.

The object of the trip is to give the Concretia a trial spin as far as Prescott, Ont., after which she will return to Montreal, when the work of completing the superstructure, which as yet is only temporary, will be finished. So far the officials on board express the utmost satisfaction with the carriage and the behaviour of the new boat, and work on similar craft will now become a permanent industry in Canada.

The Official War Reports

Nearly 300 Prisoners, Twenty Machine Guns and Four Cannon Captured.

LONDON, July 26.—The Germans this morning launched a local attack against positions recently taken by the British in the Meteren sector of the Flanders front. The War Office announces the attack was repulsed. Last night the Germans delivered an attack upon the new British positions in the Hebuterne sector on the front between Albert and Arras. The enemy was driven off with severe losses, leaving prisoners.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS July 26 (Official.)—Yesterday afternoon French troops captured Ville Montoire after violent fighting, and captured 200 prisoners as well as twenty machine guns. Further south of Dulchy-Le-Chateau fell into the hands of the French. The French made progress east of the town and captured four cannon. During combats yesterday in the region south of Ourcq the French took many hundreds of prisoners. Ville Montoire is slightly more than five miles directly south of Soissons on the Soissons-Chateau Thierry high road. It is in this region on the German right flank that the enemy has been making his most determined resistance to any further advance by the Allied forces. Oulchy-Le-Chateau is about seven miles south of Ville Montoire.

Enemy Has Spent Many Anxious Moments Since the Allied Offensive Opened Up.

BRITISH RAIDS

(United Press Service.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 26.—Every British raid seems to start something like a panic in the sector where the kidnapping expedition occurs. As the Tommies are busy men stealing, the Germans are kept on needles and pins, and since the Allied counter offensive turned the Crown Prince's march on Paris into a harassing rear-guard action, it is known that the enemy has spent many anxious moments. Captured documents show the German high command is issuing order after order in an effort to stir its underlings to guard against surprise operations.

Further evidence has been obtained indicating the postponed offensive against the British may come soon, as Ludendorff is known to be under pressure from home to do something before his initiative is lost completely.

CONDITION IS SERIOUS

Twelve Hours Delay May Prove Disastrous to the Enemy.

THE GERMAN MORALE

(United Press.)
(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, July 26.— How long Von Hindenburg can wait before ordering the withdrawal of the German troops from the southern half of the Aisne-Marne salient in time to escape the closing of Gen. Foch's trap, is the dominant problem of the present fighting.

A relinquishment of all this territory would have so depressing an effect on the German morale that the Kaiser has unquestionably ordered Von Hindenburg to hold on to the very last. At no time since the first battle of the Marne has the German General Staff been confronted with as serious a condition as is presented by the situation in the middle of the Aisne-Marne pocket. If Gen. Foch can bring a sudden overwhelming pressure to bear on the sides of this area, twelve hours' delay in getting away from the southern sector will result in disaster to the enemy.

FRUIT DEALERS SAY PRICES ASKED ARE UNREASONABLE

There is Very Little Profit in Handling Small Fruits, According to Local Dealers.

With the high prices asked by market gardeners for small fruit, the local merchants, especially those who not specialize in fruit, claim that it is hardly worth handling. The prices, they say, are uncalled for and the retail price cannot be advanced sufficiently to make the fruit business profitable in any way. Cultivated raspberries have reached their best and are selling at 28 cents a box with a prospect of a slightly lower price next week but poorer quality of fruit. Black currants are a memory only and kept at a high price during their brief appearance. Cherries are on the wane and bringing higher prices from $1.90 to $2.00 a basket. Blueberries have kept high not because of any shortage of crop but a shortage of pickers. Hundreds of quarts are wasting while the few brought in are bringing 20 and 25 cents a quart. Mr. George Stinson, the market gardener, said this morning that wild raspberries are a minuc quantity as the cane has been winter killed.

FARMERS PICKING BERRIES

With all the cry of shortage of laber and need of keeping their sons and hired help upon the farm the farmers are finding plenty of time to go into the profitable business of picking berries and bus loads of them have swarmed around Buckhorn and the north country and are supplying the local market to a great extent with all the small fruit they have on hand

HANDLING BRITISH WOUNDED

One of the methods used by the wounded soldiers from the battlefields in France with little fatigue and annoyance to the men is the hospital train that requires only a few transfers from the time they are placed in the trains in France until they reach the convalescent hospitals in England. The American War Department has ordered the construction of similar trains embodying all the improvements made by the English, and some of the cars are already in service.

"The trains consist of passenger coaches of the finest type, more like the American car than anything else seen on this side of the water," says The Military Surgeon. "The ordinary hospital train consists of one with compartments for the commanding officer, his one or two assistants, and the nursing sisters along with mess and bathing facilities for each group; an operating and dressing room car, a car for baggage and suppdlies, a varying number of coaches for the ambulant patients, and coaches provided with racks on which the stretchers containing the recumbent patients are placed. These racks are so constructed that three tiers of stretchers can be accommodated on either side of the aisle.

"One of these hospital trains will accommodate as many as 500 or 600 patients. A patient is never removed from the stretcher from the time he is placed in the ambulance at the evacuating point until his reception on the hospital ship, and in some cases until in England. The skill, ease, and rapidity with which patients are handled is remarkable and the happy expressions on the faces of even the severely wounded and seriously ill are the best evidence of the satisfactory manner in which the transportation of sick and wounded is being carried out. The hospital ships are equipped in much the same manner as the hospital trains, large wards taking the place of the rack cars.

The Carrel-Dakin treatment is carried on in hospital trains and ships just as carefully as in stationary hospitals. Minor operations and dressings are done with great success in the operating rooms of both classes of invalid transports."

REGISTRATION CARDS.

The experience of the Peterborough citizens who were fined in police court yesterday morning for not carrying their registration cards while not a pleasant one for those chiefly concerned, should be a warning to people generally that the law requires that these cards must be carried and must be produced at the requset of an officer of the law. Many people have grown careless in regard to this requirement, and have neglected to carry their cards on their person, although the law is clear and distinct. Probably the fact that they have not hitherto been asked to show their card has had considerable to do with this carelessness, but now that the point has been emphasized by the fines inflicted in police court, all persons sixteen years of age and over, should be sure that they have their registration cards before they leave their homes. Failure to do so is liable to be costly.

CUT THE RED TAPE.

Is there no way by which the miles of red tape which seems to entangle the whole conduct of military affairs in Canada can be done away with? The system as it stands now is ridiculous, and an incident that has just happened in Toronto illustrates this point, most effectively. The Hydro-Electric Commission with a most commendable desire to benefit the patients in military hospitals ,decided to send all the available electric fans, free of charge, so that the effects of the terrific heat might be mitigated as far as possible. At the base hospital because the commanding officer happened to be not accessible, the messenger was informed that the fans "not having been ordered could not be accepted," while at the College St. Hospital, permission to accept the splendid offer of the Hydro Commission could not be given because the officer commanding was absent. What a remarkable condition of affairs that free-will offerings of electric fans are turned down for the want of an order: meanwhile the soldiers who are ill in the hospitals will have to swelter in the heat until somebody wakes up which, judging by experiences in the past will be about the time the leaves are turning when electric fans are not any more needed than is Premier Borden in England, or Hon. T. W. Crothers, as Minister of Labour at Ottawa.

CANADA NEGLECTED.

The Toronto Star, one of the strongest supporters of Union Government in Ontario, has evidently begun to realize that the present regime at Ottawa is an exception to the rule that in union there is strength. A few weeks ago any paper that voiced complaints similar to those expressed in the extract from a Star editorial which appears below would run the risk of being called the copperhead press. The article, however, is justified by the condition of affairs at Ottawa where although reinforcements in the person of Hon. Arthur Meighen and Hon. J. A. Calder have returned from overseas, there is only a remnant of the Cabinet in action while the country's affairs are becoming hopelessly entangled. The announcement that Sir Robert Borden is not to return to Canada for three or four weeks longer, does not help the situation any.

The Star says:

While our Ministers are playing at being Imperial statesmen and reorganizers of Europe Canadian business is neglected. The people voted for a strong Union Government, and they have at present a weaker Government than that which was in power a year ago. Ministers who were admittedly weak and were to have been replaced by stronger men are still in office and attempting to manage business of the utmost importance. There are labour disputes and threatened conflicts all over Canada. The postal service is in confusion, and the Government is helpless. An important measure of Government operation of railways, announced and approved by Parliament, is held up. The railways are being operated just as they were a year ago. The operation of the Military Service Act was all but thrown into confusion, and saved only by a narrow majority in the Supreme Court; one judge voting the other way would have nullified the order-in-Council. Unwise friends of the Government could think of nothing better than to abuse lawyers and judges, where they should have told the Government to come home and attend to its proper business.

ARE FALLING BEHIND.

There is no greater call to service than that which the Imperial Munitions Board is emphasizing in their series of advertisements in the Canadian Press. Upon the quality and quantity of the output of the munition plants, it is certain, rests the fate of our armies. In view of that fact the official announcement that the output per worker of munitions in Canadian factories is much less today than a year ago, is an alarming piece of news that should not be overlooked. The men who are engaged in the work of making shells are urged to look upon their labour as directly connected with the terrific struggle that is going on on the western front. Their contribution to the success of the Allied cause may mean the difference between a glorious victory or disastrous defeat. Munitions are being used up with a prodigality that was undreamed of at the beginning of the war. The barrage that protects the Canadian soldiers who go over the top in France may have its commencement in a Peterborough factory, so that the responsibility of the workman at home is a serious one. No man engaged in munition work should be satisfied to look upon his position as an everyday job but rather should glorify in the opportunity that has been given him to strike a strong blow for the cause of liberty. There is every need for a speeding up in Canadian munition plants, and every worker must do his share.

There must be no slackening now. Canada showed what she could do last year when she contributed a large share of the munitions used by the British army. That record is being lowered, 1918 is falling behind 1917—and men's lives may have to pay for the loss in production in Canadian factories. Every Canadian workman should allow that fact to sink into his mind, that any easing up on his part may mean the life of a comrade of his who far from home is meeting the battle shock somewhere in the maelstorm of the titanic struggle on the western front. Peterborough workment are urged to read the advertisements of the Munition Board and to realize the necessity of an increased output from the plants in this city which are engaged in this all-important work.

Galt proposes participating in Premier Hearst's housing program, by issuing five per cent. debentures, the proceeds of which will be placed in the hands of a Municipal Housing Association for the local supervision of the actual building.

Local Registrar.

Peter McDonald, City Solicitor of Woodstock, has been appointed local registrar of the Supreme Court of Ontario, registrar of the Surrogate Court, and clerk of the Oxford County Court, to succeed the late James Carfield.

HIS CURIOUS FALL.

It Wedged Him Head Down In a Slit In a Steep Cliff.

A personal experience of a highly sensational character is recorded by A. H. Savage Landor in his book "Across Unknown South America:"

"The forest near the Secundury river was at first overgrown with dense vegetation that gave us a good deal of work and extra exertion, but after that, when we got some distance from the water, the forest was fairly clean, except of course for the fallen trees. We found troublesome ravines of great depth where streamlets had cut their way through.

"In going down one of those difficult ravines I had an accident that might have been fatal. The ravine, the sides of which were almost vertical, was very narrow—only about ten metres across. We let ourselves down, holding on to a liana. When we reached the bottom we found a tiny brook winding its way between great round boulders that left a space about two feet wide for the water. I began to climb the other side, and I had got to a height of about thirty feet. In order to go up this steep incline I had set one foot against a small tree and I pulled myself up by a liana. Unluckily the liana suddenly gave way. The weight of the load that I had on my shoulders made me lose my balance so that my body described a complete semicircle. I dropped down head first from that height on the rocks below.

"Providence once more looked after me on that occasion. On the flight down I already imagined myself dead; but no—my head entered the cavity between two great rocks, against which my shoulders and the load became jammed, while my legs waved wildly in midair. I was forced so hard against the two side rocks that I could not possibly extricate myself. It was only when Benedicto and the new man came to my help and pulled me out that we were able to resume our journey. I was much shaken and a good deal bruised, but otherwise none the worst for that unpleasant fall."

Mamma's Kiss.

This pretty child story is from the French:

A mother tells her little girl that because she has been naughty she will not kiss her for a week. Before two days have gone by the child's lips hunger so for her mother's kiss that she begs her not to punish her any more.

The mother says: "No, my dear. I told you that I should not kiss you, and I must keep my word."

"But, mamma, mamma," says the little girl, "would it be breaking your word if you should kiss me just once tonight when I'm asleep?"

Considerate.

"Mother, why do they play some of the music so low and some so loud?"

"So that the people who are hard of hearing can get their money's worth."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Amplifying It.

"I understand Colonel Flushby gave a good account of himself in the war."

"So he did and has been giving a better one ever since."—Baltimore Sun.

All philosophy lies in two words—sustain and abstain.—Epictetus.

Vast Forests of Alaska.

We hear much concerning the rapid disappearance of our forests. The vast timbered area of the eastern and central portions of the United States is fast being transformed into a woodless country, becoming very thickly populated, and doubtless will never grow much timber again. In Alaska, which is one of our territories, the timber area is estimated to be somewhere near 30 per cent of the entire land, and there is considerably more than 100,000,000 acres of good woodland, with timber that is of such a value its real worth cannot be estimated. It will require years to even make any marked impression on such a vast forest.—Philadelphia North American.

The Allies Continue Advance Despite Temporary Setbacks

Practically All of the Interior of the Enemy Salient is Under Fire From Allied Artillery.

REFUGEES RETURN

(By Fred S. Ferguson—United Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 26.—(Morning) — Under pressure from the Franco - American forces driving upon Fere En Tardenois, the Germans now face a withdrawal across Ourcq in the same costly circumstances that marked their retirement across the aMrne. The Allied advance, despite temporary setbacks at some points is generally steady along three highways leading into Fere En Tardenois from Forest, but the Americans and French are systematically cleaning the enemy machine gun nests out of these woods.

Roads Under Fire.

Practically all the interior of the salient is under fire from allied artillery and airmen especially heavy bombardments are being directed on Fere En Tardenois where the Germans eleborate railway and highway system has been practically wiped out. The Boches losses in this region are staggering.

The tightening of the pocket about the Crown Prince's armies is increasing. While the French, British and Italians are driving at the wings in Soissons and Rheims regions, the French and Americans are jamming the insides, rendering the avenue of withdrawal narrower, transport confusion greater and roads and railways under artillery fire.

The increasing number of fires in Fere En Tardenois and nearby villages apparently are from ammunition dumps and supply depots which the Germans are destroying because of their inability to remove them.

Refugees Return.

Meantime, refugees are beginning to return to wrecked villages along the Marne. Old men and women and children walk in wake of the advancing Americans. High, two wheeled carts and baby carriages filled with bedding and household goods are mingling with war traffic.

Some refugees, find their homes wiped out. Other houses are mere shells with roofs torn off and walls pierced with shell holes. Crops are laid in waste. Wheat fields are dotted with dead men and horses and Marne Valley has been transformed from a beautiful, peaceful spot of wealth and plenty into a scene of desolation, but here and there the old beauty is bravely standing out where harvesting is being resumed.

On the Marne.

Thrilling scenes of open warfare are constantly increasing. All old ideas of trench fighting are demolished. Everything is on the move. Mounted troops, armored cars, automobiles, guns, wagons and marching men fill the roads.

No unit has an established headquarters. Billeting places are camps besides road with men sleeping on their arms.

Ambulances andd supply wagon drivers are working tirelessly day and night, rolling kitchens are rushed up to supply hot food to any men appearing.

BATHERS BELOW THE LOCKS A NUISANCE

Men and boys who swim near the Belmont Club House below the locks have made such a nuisance of themselves that High County Constable Moore has decided to round up some of them as a means to changing the conditions that have prevailed there too long. There is no accommodation for undressing, and some of the youths have forgotten all restraint upon their obsene langue which, it would seem, they save up for swimming time. High County Constable Moore intends to rid the old swimming hole in the south end of this element, and generally to clean it up. He said last night that so many complaints had come to him recently that he would take immediate action.

BAKERS URGED TO USE SUBSTITUTES

Public Must be Educated Not to Expect White Loaf, Says Board.

OTTAWA, July 25. — In a letter which is being sent to all bakers throughout the Dominion the Canada Food Board urges upon them the importance of using those substitutes for wheat flour which are most readily available at moderate prices. Following is an extract from the letter.

"The public demand for white bread which has been developed for years, is a temptation to bakers to use large quantities of high-priced substitutes and to employ labour in mechanical processes for whitening the loaf. The public must be educated not to expect a white loaf, and must be taught that a well baked dark loaf is equally palatable and nutritious. The Food Board is already doing what it can to impress this fact upon the public but the bakers must also help by using those substitutes that are most readily available at moderate prices.

"The Canada Food Board requests all bakers to take notice that cornstarch, rice flour etc., should not be used in large quantities by them; nor should chemicals, the 'break' or any mechanical contrivance that has for its purpose the whitening of the loaf be employed."

Indian reds include light and burnt orange and amber brown.

"I BELIEVE IT SAVED MY LIFE," SHE SAYS

Former Trained Nurse, Graduate of Bellevue Hospital, Gained 25 Pounds Taking Tanlac.

One of the most interesting of the many remarkable statements yet made in connection with Tanlac was given by Mrs. Marie J. Howard, who resides at 402 Westlake Ave., North, Seattle, Wash., recently. Mrs. Howard has been a resident of Seattle for the past eighteen years, and before her marriage, was a trained nurse and a graduate of Bellevue Hospital, New York. When asked if she would be willing for her statement to be published, she said, "Yes indeed, and you may start it by saying I believe Tanlac has saved my life."

"I have suffered from stomach trouble and disordered liver and kidneys for five years and I had gotten in such a bad condition, that I honestly felt like I was going to die. Everything I would eat fermented in my stomach and the gas formed by it would cause my heart to palpitate so my breath would almost stop. There were intense pains all through my back about my liver and kidneys and I can't begin to tell how I did suffer. I had fearful headaches and was so nervous I hardly knew what sleep was. I was often down in bed for a week at a time, hardly able to raise my hand. Then I would manage to stay up for two or three days, but would have to give up and take to my bed again. I would often go for two or three days without eating a mouthful of anything. I lost weight right along and am telling the positive truth when I say I was in such an awful condition that I thought I was going to die.

"After reading and hearing so much about Tanlac I bought a bottle, thinking if it did others so much good, perhaps it might help me too. Well, it has not only helped me, but I have actually gained twenty-five pounds since I began taking it and have never felt better in my life. My appetite is good and my stomach in such a splendid condition that I can hardly eat enough and I don't suffer a particle afterwards. All my pain and misery is gone, my kidneys and liver are acting splendidly and my nerves are perfectly strong and normal. I sleep every night like a child, and don't know what it is to have a headache. My husband has also taken Tanlac with wonderful results. In fact, I think it has done him as much good as it has me, and we both consider it the finest medicine made."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

ACCIDENTALLY WOUNDED.

Lance-Corporal John Common In Stationary Hospital No. 6.

Lance-Corporal John J. Common, son of Mr. Wm. Common, formerly of Peterborough, has been accidentally wounded in the knee and admitted to No. 6 Stationary Hospital, according to a telegram recently received by his father who now lives at 381 Clinton street, Toronto. Lance-Corp. Common enlisted at the age of 18 years, and was a year in England with the rank of Sergeant, reverting to private to get to the trenches more quickly. He enlisted at Quebec, but is well known in Peterborough. His father was employed at the C.G.E.

BUY STRAWBERRIES ON SATURDAY ONLY

Supply Is On Sale to Public On That Day Only in Old Land.

LONDON, July 26.—Saturday has been designated as "strawberry" day in Great Britain. Since the government commandeered the fresh fruit crop for jam purposes for the soldiers Saturday is the only day in the week when the public may buy strawberries.

The berries retail at eighteen cents a pound and are in great demand. Before the strawberries were commandeered by the government the price was about thirty-six cents a pound.

With the "strawberry" Saturday also came the "strawberry queue." Many housekeepers bought five and six pounds, if the storekeepers would allow them that many, and endeavoured to get more for jam making. Nearly all cream from the English dairies goes to the cheese factories, so strawberries and cream, even on "strawberry" Saturday is but a memory in all parts of the country.

THEY SELL IT BY THE SNIFF NOW

LONDON, July 26.—High-grade whiskey is becoming scarce in England. At a county fair the other day a tidy sum was realized by charging one shilling a sniff at a bottle of prewar Scotch.

13 SONS IN THE ARMY.

And Negro has Seventeen Daughters at War Work.

Raleigh, N. C., July 26. — John Ward, a negro of Goldsboro, has 13 of his 18 sons in the Ninth and Tenth United States Cavalry, while his 17 daughters are busy with war work. The facts are vouched for by Sheriff R. H. Edwards, of Wayne Co., of which Goldsboro is the county seat. Ward also probably holds the records for quadruplets, says Sheriff Edwards, who gives the record thus:

Ward was born April 21, 1856, at Goldsboro. He has married three times and his last wife is now living. His first wife bore him 15 children, four at one time twice, three at one time twice, one at a time. His second wife has borne him two at one time twice, three at one time once, and five one at a time. His present wife has borne him eight, one at a time. His first wife lived six years and three weeks after marriage, his second wife eight years and six months. The number of boys is: By first wife, eight; by second wife, five, and by third wife, five. Of those now in the service, seven are by the first wife, five by the second, and one by the present wife. Another son has served in the cavalry, but is now living at Wilson, N. C.

WHY THE CATEPILLAR?

IT SEEMS TO BE ONE OF NATURE'S GREATEST MYSTERIES

Any householder who is a lover of trees or shrubbery, and possesses a lingering notion that the world was created for the special benefit of man, may get a rude shock of doubt by considering the caterpillar as he watches the repulsive creatures swarm over his green world. To explain the caterpillar on any theory which takes man and his works into consideration is impossible, unless we consider the transient beauty of the butterfly and the product of the silk worm as compensations for the damage done.

We may, if you like, question nature for her production of the caterpillar, as we fuss around the trees trying to burn and otherwise get rid of it, but we eventually have to admit that nature is determined to have them, goes to a great deal of ingenious trouble to produce them, on a quantity scale exceeding even the promises of Mr. Creel. Further speculation on the subject again leads us to a doubt as to the fundamental intelligence of nature in the caterpillar business. Having devised it, she sets about devising means of destroying it. Nature makes them with one hand, kills them with the other, and they are worse than useless anyway.

In the endless variety of caterpillars that develop into moths and butterflies there is a waste of life and effort that is as staggering to contemplate as are the stellar distances. Billions upon billions come into existence, of which but an infinitesimal proportion reach the final stage of development and in turn lay the countless eggs from the arctic to the tropics which hatch and produce more billions. The young die in countless numbers for lack of sustenance betties, reptiles, and animals eat them, flies lay eggs in them, parasites and contagious diseases sweep them off, so that the indignant horticulturist, man, hardly makes the slightest impression on them with his torches and poisons.

Science has long had her eye on the caterpillar and has learned much of its ways. Some idea of its menacing possibilities may be gained from the knowledge that a caterpillar weighing at birth one-twentieth of a grain has, by the time it is fifty days old, consumed three-quarters of a pound of leaves. To consume over 80,000 times one's weight in so short a time is gluttony without parallel. The caterpillar, unrestrained, would eat the green world to a dry husk in short order, and along with it would consume all the wool, fur, fats and woody substance. They are veritable Huns, the necesisty for continued existence of both constituting a legitimate cause for wonderment.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

DEMOCRACY AT HOME

Canadian Press:

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 26.— In a personal statement addressed to fellow countrymen, President Wilson today calls upon the nation to show the world that "while it fights for democracy on foreign fields, it is not destroying democracy at home." The President referred not alone to mob action against those suspected of being aliens or sympathizers, he denounced mob action of all sorts, especially lynchings. It is known that the Germans have used lynchings of negroes as well as attacks upon enemy sympathizers, as proof that United States' pretensions as the champion of democracy are a sham.

"Every mob contributes to German lies about the United States whether the most gifted liars cannot improve upon by way of calumny," says the President.

TWO BOYS WERE BITTEN BY A DOG.

Stewart and Dougles Widdess, the two little sons of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Widdess, 400 Downie street, were bitten this week by a dog while playing at a neighbour's house at their summer cottage at Sturgeon Point. The condition of the dog, whether affected by rabies or not, is not as yet known.

UNITED STATES WORK IN FRANCE ALMOST INCREDIBLE

Huge Preparations Told—Large Executive Ability Shown in the Overcoming of Great Obstacles—Rank With Biggest Accomplishment of the War.

A 20,000 BED HOSPITAL

LONDON, July 25.—The Times publishes from a special correspondent an article describing what the American forces have accomplished in France during their first eleven months of participation in the war. The results of the American efforts, he thinks, will rank in history as one of the greatest achievements of the war. In part he writes:

"What the American forces in France have accomplished thus far is almost incredible. For instance, out of the waste lands adjacent to an old French port they have constructed a splendid line of modern docks, where every day now ships are pouring forth their cargoes of men and war materials, cars and machinery. The dock system is finished. It supplements the old French dock system in a town where still more ships are constantly discharging American cargoes. A huge new warehouse system at this point also is nearing completion. Even now it is able to take care of the great flood of supplies which are constantly pouring in.

"In an old part of this same coast town the Americans installed motor operation and cold storage plants, a motor reception park, and quarters for storing supplies for the ordnance and aviation forces. These are more or less temporary quarters and will be merged in the near future in a general scheme which is nowing being completed in the outskirts of the town.

New Docks.

"In addition to new docks, there are warehouses and extensive railway yards. These latter have a trackage of nearly 200 miles. Work is well advanced on a new car assembly shop, where already, when I saw it in its incompleted state, twenty-odd freight cars a day of three different designs were being turned out and put into immediate service. Another assembly plant has been constructed at a different point to handle all-steel cars, which are transported here from American sections in order to economize shipping space. At this plant these steel cars are now being assembled at the rate of a complete train a day, and plans are rapidly culminating for a large extension of the work.

"Here, too, a huge camp has been built for negro stevedores; also a remount camp and two big rest camps, each providing for many thousands of American soldiers, who march thence from boats, to be sifted and re-arranged for dispatch to various training camps further inland.

"Not far from here work on a new 20,000 bed hospital is forging ahead, and thirty days from now it will virtually be completed. This is the largest hospital centre yet constructed. It is composed entirely of small one-story, light, airy, and attractive structures divided into small squares laid out on a great open stretch of sand, surrounded by pine trees; and altogether it promises to be an ideal institution of its kind.

"In this same section is an immense new artillery camp, all ready for the several brigades of artillery which were expected when I was there; and, like the hospital enterprise, it is in strong hands and promises well. It includes a large remount camp in which were several thousand horses at the time of my visit. Work in this section, which is typical of that at all I visited, is being vigorously and intelligently directed. Strong executives are in charge, and the spirit of the workers is excellent throughout.

"Everywhere Americans are realizing that they have 'caught up with themselves,' and now that they can visualize the completion of what a few months ago looked so much like an impossible undertaking, they are buoyed up, happy, and inspired by their success. They have conquered obstacles and overcome conditions which only great ability and indomitable spirit could possibly surmount."

FARMERS WILL MEET IN NORWOOD

Next Tuesday, July 30, the members of the South Dummer United Farmers of Ontario will hold a meeting in the hall at Norwood. Very important subjects will be discussed, and it is expected that there will be a large attendance. Any farmer in the County of Peterborough may become a member of this organization.

RETAIL MERCHANDISING WILL BE DISCUSSED

Meeting Will be Held on Monday Evening Next.

The three reel feature film, "Troubles of a Merchant and How to Stop Them," will be presented for the first time in Peterborough on Monday night, July 29, at 8 o'clock in T. A. S. Hall, Simcoe street. In connection with the film, a lecture on retail merchandising will be given. All merchants and salespeople in the city are invited to attend. No charge will be made for admission.

The Retail Merchants' Association has secured the film and merchandising lecture through the courtesy of The National Cash Register Company, Dayton, Ohio. W. H. Farley, expert lecturer of the Dayton Company, will be the speaker. The lecture has been given before commercial organizations and conventions throughout the country, and has been highly commended. Causes for losses and failures in retail business are shown, and their remedy told in the lecture, which has been prepared from the experiences of The National Cash Register Company in its thirty-three years of dealing with merchants in all parts of the world.

A prominent place in the lecture is given to the value of newspaper advertising. By means of stereopticon ner the story of Mr. White, a grocer, to prepare newspaper copy, how to secure best results, and why a merchant should advertise continually. Window display, efficiency of clerks, selling methods, credit business, delivery problems, and other topics of interest to merchants will also be discussed.

The three reel film, "Troubles of a Merchant, and How to Stop Them," was prepared for The National Cash Register Company by the Essanay Company at a cost of $30,000. Months of study was put on its production, and all the characters are portrayed by expert actors from the Essanay studios. The film tells in a vivid manslides, Mr. Will H. Farley will tell how who is near failure. As the film progresses, the reasons for his lack of success become plain. Poor arrangement of goods, an unattractive front, lax business methods, and most of all, out-of-date business methods, all contributed their quota of loss.

But finally a change comes in the career of Mr. White. He cleans up his store, installs a modern system, and rapidly rises to success. The film is declared to have a business lesson in every scene.

Many merchants and salespeople in this city are expected to welcome the opportunity offered by this lecture, and a large attendance is looked for.

1,500 WOMEN LOADING BAGS.

FILLING THEM WITH POWDER AT U. S. WORKS IN PHILADELPHIA—NUMBER TO BE DOUBLED

More than 1,500 women are now employed at the Government bag loading plant at a Washington Park, Philadelphia, says the Ledger, of that city. The plant is fully completed and two-thirds of the women force are engaged in the work of filling bags with powder while the others are being instructed.

Before the end of the month it is expected that 3,000 women will be engaged in the work. The women range in age from eighteen to forty-five years and most of them wear bloomers while engaged in the work. The women are working eight hours daily but when the full force is secured there will be three shifts working eight hours each.

A special train carries the women from the Camden terminal to Westville station and brings them back at night. The high wages are luring young women from other lines of employment. There are also about 70 men employed at the plant.

Eggs and Poultry

OTTAWA, July 26.—Montreal and Toronto egg markets unchanged, although the general tone is weaker than last week, some dealers evidently are endeavouring to depress the country prices. Ontario circles obtaining forty-five to seven, gatherers forty-five to six, stores forty-three to five. Montreal poultry steady, broilers delivered thirty-vve to seven, fowl twenty-six to eight, roosters tweaty-two to three.

REAL ESTATE MEN OF THE CITY FORM AN ASSOCIATION

The New Organization Has a Number of Worthy Objects in View —Will Meet on Monday.

By a practically unanimous movement, the city real estate dealers have formed an association among themselves with a number of worthy objects in view, chief among which are the protection, in real estate transfers of the parties interested, the agent, and the welfare of the city. No class of the city's business men can expect a greater influence in the better future of the city itself, its layout, and upbuilding, than the real estate men.

And this is one of the ideas that will be furthered by the new association. There are other ways by which the agent can best guide a customer, protect his interests and also those of the locality in which he is being located, that are to be made matters of discussion, and it will easily be seen that if the objects of the new association are carried out, it will be a valuable one to not only the present citizens, but to the future generations to come.

The first meeting was held on July 25th, at 124 Hunter street, and the next date for their meeting is set for Monday, July 29th, at the same place, and every agent should attend in his own and the public's interests.

DEAD TREES COULD BE CUT DOWN.

Work Should be Undertaken by the City.

There is any number of dead trees which might be utilized as fuel, in the city. Every ward has its share of them, and there are likely many in the public parks. If the city undertook to reduce these trees to cordwood, they could no doubt supply the Charity department with enough wood for winter. The city would be establishing no precedent as Toronto commenced to cut the trees down last week. Thirteen trees were cut down in the grounds of St. James Cathedral, and yielded 10 cords of wood.

The trees are being cut down at the expense of the city and given to the church for the poor people of the parish. The wood cutters have now commenced operations in Canon Plumptre's grounds, where seven dead trees are standing.

TWO RACES FRATERNIZE

ENGLISH AND FRENCH SPEAKING SOCIETIES OF THE CANADIAN FRATERNAL ASSOCIATION MEET.

BELLEVILLE, Ont. July 26.—Yesterday afternoon a unique meeting opened in this city when delegates from the English speaking and French Speaking fraternal societies in the Canadian Fraternal Association met to work out plans whereby harmony and concord might reign among the people of the two nationalities of Canada.

Col. Mulloy called the meeting to order and brought greetings from the Bonne entente. President W. C. Mikel K.C., said I hope this may be the first of many meeting of a similar kind that will be held throughout Canada in the future. Mr. Mikel pointed out the loyalty of English and French in the past. The same blood runs through Canadians still.

HIGH PRAISE FOR THE Y.M.C.A. BY PETERBORO SOLDIER IN FRANCE

Private Charles Veenman, Who Has Been Two Years and a Half at the Front, Replies to Criticisms Uttered at a Meeting of the G.W.V.A.—"Y" Huts are Close Behind the Lines

CAPTAIN'S ENDORSATION

The Examiner has received the following letter from Private Chas. Veeman, who enlisted with the C.M.R. in which he pays a high compliment to the work of the Y.M.C.A. at the front:

France, 29/6/18.

To the Editor,—Dear Sir,— Some time ago a friend of mine handed me a cutting from a newspaper in which was an account of a meeting held by the G.W.V.A., the object of the meeting being to denounce the work of the Y.M.C.A. I have been in France with an infantry unit for practically two and one-half years, and have nothing but praise for the work of the Y.M.C.A. in France, and have never heard a word amongst the lads against them.

All branches of the Y.M.C.A. supplied the boys with coffee, tea, cocoa, orangeade, lemonade, free of charge, also writing material and books of all description, especially in the front line sectors, where their work is beyond expectations, for I have seen them within less than five hundred yards of the Hun. More than that we were supplied with coffee and tea in our front line trench and even to our outposts between eleven and twelve o'clock at night on one sector supplied by the Y.M.C.A. free of charge. During intervals of rest from the trenches we are supplied with all kinds of athletic outfits, and games are organized by the officers in charge, and also concerts and picture shows are arranged for us, all free of charge. We ask the Y.M.C.A. to do nothing. It is all done on their own free will. Some people may think that the men in charge of the Y.M.C.A. are perfectly safe. They certainly are not by any means, for as I said they bring their stock within five hundred yards of the Hun and sell as cheap and in most cases cheaper than any organization in France.

I think that after all fair-minded people have read these facts they will agree with me that the Y.MC.A. is not simply a money-making concern, but a splendid institution that is doing its utmost to help us on over here, and that they should receive all the support from friends and relatives o soldiers in France that they are able to give.

Private Veenman is a Peterborough boy whose home is on Patterson street.

Officer's Corroboration.

With Pte. Veenman's letter was enclosed the following note from one of his officers:

To the Editor,— I have read and censored Pte. Veenman's letter. He is quite right in what he says. When brigade or division sports are held, there are always Y.M.C.A. representatives or the sports committee and it is the Y.M.C.A. who supply most of the articles required for the sports.

In reference to a comrade's statement made at the G.W.V.A. meeting that he bought a pair of socks at a Y.M.C.A. with a note contained therein, this is most improbable. The Y.M.C.A. do not sell wearing apparel at all, with the possible exception of handkerchiefs and boot laces, and I have been in dozens of Y.M.C.A.'s here in France and have never seen an article of clothing offered for sale.

As far as the Y.M.C.A. being a commercial concern, this statement is absolutely untrue, except so far as being run on strict business principles. Their books are audited by the field cashier (I speak now for our own division) and the battalions in the divisions receive monthly a cheque for Y.M.C.A. profits in proportion to the strength of the battalion.

If any criticism could be offered to the Y.M.C.A. it would be because they put their canteens and huts too far forward, in one case that I remember less than 500 yards from the Bosche.

WHEAT IN AUSTRALIA.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Nearly 300,000,000 bushels of wheat is stored in Australia, the Food Administration was informed. Details of the guarantees surrounding 1918-1919 wheat harvest in Australia also were transmitted. The Australian Government has guaranteed 83 cents per bushel, and to this the commonwealth has added 12 cents, making the price 95 cents to the producer. In Buenos Aires the cash price for wheat is $1.44 per bushel. Cash corn is selling there for 62 cents per bushel.

OUTING FOR INMATES OF PROTESTANT HOME

The members of Royal Arthur Lodge A. F. and A.M., provided a pleasant outing yesterday for the old people of the Protestant Home. The arrangements were carried out under the direction of Mr. E. B. Fowler, master of the Lodge. All the inmates who were able to go were taken to South Beach in automobiles where dinner was served. The Superintendent and ladies of the Board were also guests of the Lodge.

After dinner Mrs. Rogers, president of the Board moved a vote of thanks which was seconded by an old lady who notwithstanding the fact that she was totally blind, said that she wished Mr. Fowler many happy returns of the day. The return trip was made later and a very successful outing brought to a conclusion.

Watching and Waiting in France

(By Capt. H. B. C. Pollard.)

When there is a lull between the successive phases of a battle, the short official communique issued by either sides suggest that all is quiet and that nothing much is being done.

Military critics are reduced to speculating where the next blow will fall, and retailing the successive troop movements of the last episodes, but little is said of the tireless activity that marks this apparent lull upon the actual front.

A soldier will often explain that the work of preparation for a battle is actually more strenuous than even the fighting itself, for whether it is attack to be delivered or attack to be withstood, the one demands rehearsals, the other the perfecting of all possible means of defence and the concentration of everything that is necessary.

The preparations for battle are indeed stupendous and it is almost impossible to appreciate the amount of actual labour—digging of earth, carrying of material, painstaking concentration of stores—sheer human labour, that is needed. The actual front line itself may lie quiet, except for sporadic outbursts of musketry and occasional perfunctory shelling, but day and night the areas behind the line on both sides are swarming with activity.

Right up in the battle area or in certain sectors where the enemy possess good observation, no movement or work can be carried on in daytime, and the troops with the exception of the ever-vigilant sentries, sleep all day and work all night. Each platoon in the line and in the supports has its job of carrying to do. Wire, pickets, hand grenades, small arm ammunition, food and water have to be carried up, wounded men, empty ammunition cases and various debris carried down. In addition to this carrying party work there is always the work of wiring or digging to be done, and patrols and sentries for No-Man's-Land have to be found.

Behind the front line the reserve troops may be engaged upon a hundred tasks. Digging and wiring light field railways, fortifying isolated farms or digging new gunpits and positions for the ever thickening guns. Then behind the reserve troops comes the area of the labour companies and pioneers where work goes on both day and night. Here new bridges are built, new railways laid, roads made or mended, vast dumps of ammunition accumulated. This area is constantly under artillery fire and done may take it that the normal perilous area behind the front line is some ten miles deep, though places up to twenty two or three miles away can be shelled by special batteries of long range guns.

Besides the work of preparation there is the ceaseless watching of the enemy. High kite balloons watch the immediate front. Thousands of ever vigilant eyes in the trenches note every sign of local movement, and almost hourly aeroplane flights go up on their reconnaissance.

The enemy dig their advanced gun positions, hiding them as carefully as they can, but the new pits show up on the photographs and later when the guns are set in position our own batteries open fire, wiping the enemies guns out of existence.

These long lulls or delays between the phrases of a modern giant battle are all in favour of the defensive. Positions which were open and liable to be easily overrun become entrenched lines protected by thick barbed wire entanglements, rear gun positions can be accurately be sited and successive systems of defence lines built up. The side conducting the offensive can however only build and prepare positions in advance up to the edge of its own front line position, and all this essential work has to be conducted within range of the hostile artillery. Every day claims its sacrifice of lives and materials. Roads and concentration points are consistently barraged, and divisions destined for use in the assault melt away during the mere work of preparation.

Deserters tell ghastly tales of the masses of dead men, the wrecked transport and broken batteries that litter the sides of the roads, and on the other side of the lines the Allies wait and watch—confident and sure that ground will only be won by the enemy at such a cost that no nation could endure the burden of such a "Victory".

BUILDING PERMITS FOR MORE APARTMENTS

McDONNEL STREET RESIDENCE WILL BE REMODELLED.

Outside of the original cost of remodelling the Palace Hotel, Hunter street, recently bought by Mr. Lowe he has taken a further building permit for $600 for a handsome store front which will doubtless serve to brighten up the block. Mr. J. C. Shook has taken out a permit for $600 to turn his former residence, 176 McDonnell street into apartments.

YESTERDAY'S $20 FINES CALL FORTH CRITICISMS FROM MEN ON THE STREET

Lawyer says Acting-Magistrate's Decision Can be Quashed—Several Citizens Said to Have Escaped Thus Far a Trip to Court.

A lawyer volunteered the opinion this morning that Acting Magistrate Rush's $20 fines imposed yesterday on eight men who had neglected to carry their registration cards, could be quashed for the reason that the law requires two justices of the peace to hear any case that is disposed of in the absence of the Magistrate. He thought other reasons might be adduced, but considered this one sufficient grounds for an appeal against Mr. Rush's decision.

As the report of the disciplinary raid by the police, followed by the Acting-Magistrate's impressive fines, filtered through the city, many general criticisms were heard, but the man on the street was at a loss as to whom he should censure, for he was indignant to say the least. He admitted the negligence of the "victims," but offered an excuse that there should have been a recent warning to the people. It was recognized that the police were acting in accordance with the Registration Act, that Mr. Rush had practically no alternative but to impose a fine of $20. Hence the complaints were concentrated on the legislation, with a stray shot hitting the local officials for simply performing their duty.

The drastic fines have had the desired effect. The public has been somewhat roughly shocked into a reminder that after paying a huge bill for national registration it is going to be used, here as elsewhere. Unthinking citizens had permitted the regulation to drift into a convenient oblivion which is probably crowded with commandments, including the original ten. To-day they are fully awakened to the fact that it costs money to forget their registration cards on the chiffonier or in one of the numerous suits with which some men are encumbered in these war days.

Yesterday's police court group, however, were mostly working men, and there is some criticism on the street that a few well known citizens who it is said, failed to produce their cards on Wednesday night, are apparently being deprived of the pleasure of contributing their $20 to yesterday's generous collection. Several men who have spoken of this rumour said they were waiting to see what would turn up. Of course there is plenty of time before the police to prosecute these men, but the "gallery" is showing impatience at the delay.

REASONS FOR ETC.

other pushed slightly toward Epernay. It was now seen that the German plan was to take Epernay and Chalons, join their two armies, throw in all their reserves, and smash one or the other of the divided French armies.

This was obviously impossible of realization, and the French counter attack was then decided on. The minimum number of men needed to hold the lines were set aside for that purpose. All other availables were planted in the region between Compiegne and Montdidier. When it was certain the Germans were thoroughly engaged, these were concentrated in Villers Coterets Forest. Previously French local operations had obtained the needed base for these attacks on the Plateau of Chaudun. On the night of the 17th, which was dark and stormy, the concentration in the forest was completed as well as all necessary artillery emplacements.

The Result.

The result is known that more than 25,000 prisoners and over 400 guns, a thousand machine guns were taken, and the destruction of the German morale. Enemy officers charging various elements with treason. The French command freely admit the success of the American Government in landing vast forces in France so far ahead of the schedule is the only thing that made the daring operation possible, since it enabled the Allied command to take a risk that otherwise would have been forbidden. The critical moment of the war is now safely passed.

Cabinet Council To Meet To-day

Postmen Are Still Out in the Western Cities.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., July 26.—A Cabinet Council called for noon to-day to specially consider the situation arising out of the refusal of the postmen of western cities to return to work and accept the proposals emanating from the recent conferences held in Ottawa. The news received at the Capital today indicated that men of Calgary, Regina and Moose Jaw had also gone out again with those of Winnipeg and Vancouver. These in spite of the fact that the government's ultimatum last night to the effect that if they did not return to-day, drastic action would be taken to have the work done willy nilly. The government will not appoint a conciliation board, claiming there is nothing to conciliate or arbitrate about.

"We are not in a position of a company dealing with its employees and desiring to keep wages down to the absolute minimum," said the Hon. C. J. Doherty, Acting Prime Minister. "We are sure to see to it that all members of public service are treated fairly and justly. We ourselves are a conciliatory board in this matter. It is for us to hear the men's demands and to arbitrate as to their merits.

THREE MORE VICTORIA CROSSES ARE AWARDED

AMONG RECIPIENTS IS BRIG.-GENERAL ST. GEORGE GROGAN

LONDON, July 26.—Three more Victoria Crosses are announced in the official gazette, awarded to gallant officers for individual acts of heroism and daring in action.

The most conspicuous of these is the story of Brigadier-General St. George Grogan of a Worchester Regiment. Throughout three days of intensely heavy fighting he commanded the remnants of an infantry division and various attached troops, displaying magnificient leadership. His initiative materially stayed the thrust of the enemy masses. Throughout the third day, the most critical day, the officer spent his time, under artillery, trench mortar and machine-gune fire, riding up and down the front line, encouraging and reorganizing his men and leading back those who were beginning to retire under the withering fire. When his horse was shot under him he continued on foot to encourage his troops, until another hose was bought to him. It was a wondeful example, an example that inspired not only the men under his command, but adjacent allied forces.

EARLY CROPS IN PETERBORO COUNTY CONSIDERED SAFE

Farmers are Very Optimistic Over the Outlook.

From the entire country about Peterboro the most optimistic reports of crop conditions are constantly brought in. The early crops are a sure thing now. The later, provided the weather keeps favorable will mean a record harvest. Wheat, oats, barley and corn are listed as beyond the most sanguine expectations, oats especially being quoted as the best in the remembrance of the farmers.

The root crops are splendid but rain is badly needed to make a record in keeping with the grain.

Hay is the one discordant note this year, being thirty per cent. smaller in crop than last year an account of the cold spring. Local fruit crops of apples, plums and pears are not heavy.

ALIENS' THREATENED GRUB STRIKE FAILS

OTTAWA, July 26.—A group of Austrians employed in a lumber camp in Northern Ontario threatened to "grub strike" because the company attempted to put in force the regulations of the Canada Food Board applicable to public eating places.

At the request of the Food Board, the case was investigated by the Dominion Police, who cautioned them that they must continue to work or be interned.

MOTHER AND SON MEET.

Dramatic Incident at American Red Cross Hospital.

PARIS, July 26.—A New York woman attached to the American Red Cross happened to be in Paris and volunteered to help in taki care of the wounded coming in from the battle field. She was working busily when startled by a lour cry of "Mother." Turning she saw her own son, a young lieutenant in the American army. He had been wounded in the leg by shrapnel in the fighting on Monday. The first news she had had that her son was engaged in the battle was when she heard his cry. She obtained permission to accompany him to a hospital, and after seeing that he was attended to, went back to the station to cheer, as she said, the boys who had no hope of finding a mother to welcome them.

THE REFUGEES IN FRANCE

By CANADIAN OVERSEAS.

Sometimes I think the most pitiful thing in France is the processions of refugees leaving their homes for any place that will shelter them.

It may be an old old woman or an old old man with nothing left but their old age, huddled in a cart, sometimes with a little child at their side; it may be a family with such goods as can be carried, usually their bed and such pots as they may possess. A couple of cows trail behind the cart and the remainder of the family follow, carrying an odd assortment of things. And one wonders from whence comes the calmness and fortitude which supports them in their misery. The nights of their pilgrimage are spent wherever darkness finds them, perhaps in draughty, ramshackle barns, perhaps in the cart, covered with a tarpaulin.

The cart becomes their home—living room and bed room, with the kitchen beside it. One's sympathy increases when one realizes that many of these wretched people returned to their wrecked homes after the onslaught of 1914 and managed to make these shattered places habitable and cultivate their fields. Four years of unsettled destinies seem to have inured them to their plight.

Their powers of endurance and their perseverance are almost past belief. Over the once busy towns and villages lies an odd silence except for the bursting of shells. They are the dead skeletons of a once living thing, and yet these people cling to what was once their homes, until the last moment. Old women bent and feeble still proceed with their affairs though Boche shells are smashing the homes of their neighbours.

Many carry on wearing gas respirators. They proceed with their farming and their planting. While both they and their homes are in constant danger of being blown to atoms. And yet the Boche thinks the French are a decadent people.

GERMAN HOBOES IN RUSSIA.

MANY WAR PRISONERS IDLE WANDERERS — THOUSANDS DEAD OF SCURVY.

LONDON, —The German war prisoner has become the "hobo" of Russia—an idle, shiftless wandered, who wants neither to work nor to fight. Many such prisoners, both Germans and Austrians, were encountered at different points in Russia by the members of the American Red Cross Mission returning from Rumania. They were never under guard, were usually in small groups and apparently had no employment or wish for employment. They were without arms and shabbily clad, and always declared emphatically that they had no desire to get back into the German army, nor even any wish to return to Germany until after a general peace was declared.

If the prisoners showed any disposition to organize or even to travel about in marauding bands they would furnish a serious problem, but under present conditions they are merely a nuisance.

At a small station north of Vologda there was a group of about fifty prisoners idling on the station platform some asleep in the Winter sun, some playing cards, others whittling little toys and knick-knacks out of soft wood. The Associated Press correspondent talked with several of them. They were greatly surprised to hear that the United States had entered the war a year before, and several of them expressed still more surprise at being infromed that America was not the ally of Germany.

They had been sent to this part of Russia nearly two years before in a railway construction gang, but had done no work for several weeks. They lived in freight cars and got their food by hook or crook from the villagers. Some of them declared that they had not had a square meal for many days and they accepted with genuine gratitude three old loaves of black bread and a few pieces of chocolate which the Americans were able to spare them. As an afterthought one of the Americans brought out to them the remains of a large round American cheese. It ha dbeen purchased in New York City and had accompanied the mission from Vancouver to Yokohama, Moscow, and Jassy, serving throughout the Rumanian campaign.

There were several large camps of German prisoners in the far north of Russia, but these had mostly broken up completely since the revolution, owing to difficulties with the food supply. It was said that thousands of German prisoners in these northern camps died of scurvy, which was also prevalent in many of the far northern villages and among the refugees.

Expert Lecture and Moving Pictures

Practical Ideas along Lines of Efficiency to be Shown to Merchants, Clerks and Professional Men—Expert Lecturer with Pictures.

Every successful merchant in business at the present time is utilizing every means possible to help him advance and build up a better trade. Realizing this the Retail Merchants' Association has secured one of the most instructive, educational moving pictures ever put on the screen, entitled, "The Troubles of a Merchant and How to Stop Them." The pictures will be shown at the T.A.S. Rooms, Simcoe street, on Monday evening, at 8 p.m.

The film is a three-reel Essanay feature and is brimful of ideas relating to retail business. It shows an old-style store building, high windows preventing a good display of goods, bad arrangement of stock, lack of proper management, and no system, which makes the clerks indifferent—resulting in the proprietor almost becoming a failure. The scene changes, however, when the merchant concludes to adopt system—the store takes on an attractive appearance, goods are displayed so they will attract the attention of the customer, the clerks become more valuable through courteous and prompt attention to the trade—in fact, there is such a transformation that new customers are attracted to the store, and the merchant again becomes prosperous.

Mr. W. H. Farley will lecture with the pictures. By aid of stereopticon slides, he will deal with the following subjects:

1—Retail failures and their causes.
2—Store organization.
3—Newspaper advertising.
4—Window display.
5—Clerks' efficiency.
6—Selling methods.
7—Credit business.
8—The delivery problem.
9—System in retail business.

This lecture was secured through the courtesy of the National Cash Register Company of Dayton, Ohio. It has received the highest commendation from business organizations wherever it has been shown.

There will be no charge for admission and every business man and clerk in the city should take advantage of this unusual offer.

MILLIONAIRE'S BODY CREMATED, AS HE WISHED

BROCKVILLE, July 26.—The last wish of Willis Homer Park, multi-millionaire, of Youngstown, Ohio, who died in St. Vincent de Paul Hospital July 18, that his remains should be cremated and his ashes scattered to the four winds of heaven, was carried out at Pittsburg, Penn., this week, according to word which has been received by friends at Lake Opinicon. It was while enjoying his annual summer vacation at this point, near Newboro, that Mr. Park was taken ill with blood poisoning, from which he afterwards died. The funeral took place from his former residence in Youngstown, the remains afterwards being taken to Pittsburg, Penn., for cremation. Mr. Park was said to have amassed a fortune of seven million dollars in real estate and other operations, and was a well-known member of the summer colony at Lake Opinicon. It is understood that the greater part of his fortune was left to charitable institutions.

RIVERSIDES ARE AGAIN TIED FOR LEADERSHIP

Beat Orientals 7 Runs to 5 Last Night in Twilight League Game—Losers Errors Cost Them the Chance for a Win.

	Won.	Lost.
Thistles	5	1
Riversides	5	1
Orientals	2	4
De Laval	1	4
Matthews	1	4

Riversides pulled up alongside of the Thistles in the Twilight League race last night at Riverside Park, when they beat Art Johnston's Orientals by 7 runs to 5. It was an interesting game, despite the fact that the Riversides led all the way from the third innings. The Orientals outhit their opponents, but threw away their chances by shaky fielding, while the Riversides ran wild on the bases and took advantage of every slip up. McNeely pitched fine ball for the losers and did his bit with the bat as well, getting three hits in four times up. A feature play was a peg to first base from centre field by Thorndyke, which cut off Billy Field after the Riversides' fielder had apparently smashed a sure single to centre. The runner was beaten a step by the perfect throw.

A funny incident cropped up in the seventh when, for some unaccountable reason or other the umpire and both teams decided that the side was out, and the Orientals started to come in from the field. As a matter of fact there were only two men down, but the matter was rectified when the scorers called attention to the mistake.

Orientals started the scoring in the first. Johnston popped to Murty, but Bergoine walked and stole second. Collins hit to Kirn, who threw to third to cut off Bergoine, but the base runner got the decision. McNeely rapped a single through McCarney, scoring Bergoine, but Thorndyke and Long were easy on flies, which Kirn handled. One run, one hit, no errors.

The Riversides evened up in their half. Sheehy drew a pass and stole second. Thorndyke made a nice catch of McCarney's fly. Guerin's hot single through third scored Sheehy, while th batter took second on the throw to the plate. Phelan sacrificed him to third, but Foley cut off a run by a pretty stop of Murray's hard smash and a quick throw to Tudhope. One run, one hit, no errors.

In the second for Orientals, Tudhope fanned; Hagerman walked and stole second and third while Foley and Johnston were striking out. No runs, hits or errors.

For Riversides, Cook flied to Johnston, Field fanned, Lebarr singled through short and stole second, but Kirn grounded to Hagerman. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Bergoine, first up for Orientals in the third, died on a foul fly to Murray. Collins struck out. McNeely singled, but was out stealing, Phelan to Sheehy. No runs, one hit, no errors.

For Riversides, Sheehy walked and stole second, scoring on McCarney's safety. McCarney went to second on the attempt to get Sheehy. Guerin hit to McNeely, and McCarney was caught between second and third, being run down after a most exciting chase, in which nearly the whole Oriental team participated, Foley getting the put out. Guerin went to second during the excitement and moved on to third on Phelan's out to McNeely. Murray ended the innings by fanning.

In the fourth, Thorndyke fanned. Tudhope struck out, and Long was doubled in an attempt to steal, Phelan to McCarney. No runs, one hit, no errors.

For Riversides, Cook grounded to Hagerman. Field fouled out to Bergoine. Lebarr struck out, but Bergoine dropped the third one, and when Tudhope let the throw to first get away the runner went to second. Lebarr was hurt at second on the play and Murty ran for him. Kirn's two-bagger to left scored Murty. Kirn moved up on a wild pitch, and scored when Hagerman missed Sheehy's grounder. Sheehy stole second and third, scoring on Bergoine's bad throw to third. McCarney singled and stole second, and Guerin was safe on Collins' fumble, but Phelan grounded to McNeely, who made the out at first base. Three runs, two hits, four errors.

In the fifth for Orientals, Hagerman fanned and Foley grounded to Murray. Johnston walked and stole second. Bergoine singled to right, but Johnston was out at the plate when he tried to score on a relay, Lebarr to Guerin to Phelan. No runs, one hit, no errors.

In the Riversides' half, Murray fanned, Cook died on a roller in front of the plate, which Bergoine fielded, and Field was out at first on his smash to centre, Thorndyke making a fine throw to Tudhope. No hits, runs or errors.

In the sixth, Collins opened with a double to left and McNeely singled. Thorndyke fanned. Long hit to Guerin, who threw to the plate, but Collins was called safe on the play. Long stole second, but the runners were stranded when Tudhope and Hagerman fanned. One run, two hits, no errors.

For Riversides, Lebarr and Kirn struck out. Sheehy singled to centre and stole second, but McCarney flied out to Foley. No runs, one hit, no errors.

In Orientals' seventh, Foley grounded to Murray, Johnston flied to McCarney and Kirn threw out Bergoine. No runs, hits or errors.

The Riversides also drew a blank. Guerin popped to McNeely. Phelan singled to left and went to second on McNeelys low throw to first. Murray fanned, Bergoine having to throw to first. The teams thought the side was out and Orientals started in from the field until the scorers explained that only two were out. When play was resumed, Cook rolled one to McNeely and was out at first. No runs, one hit, one error.

In the eighth Collins led off for Orientals with a clean single to left and went to second on a wild pitch. McNeely grounded to Guerin, Thorndyke singled, to score Collins, but was out stealing, Phelan to McCarney and Long hoisted to Cook. One run, two hits, no errors.

In the Riversides half, Field opened with a single and stole second. Lebarr grounded to Foley, Field being held. Kirn singled to centre, scoring Field while the batter went to third when Bergoine let Thorndyke's throw to the plate get away. Sheehy was called out on strikes. Kirn scored when Hagerman fumbled McCarney's grounder. The latter was called out on an attempt to steal. Two runs, two hits, two errors.

Orientals staged a rally in the ninth but fell short two runs. Webb, batting for Tudhope, fanned, but Hagerman singled past Murray and stole second. Foley hit to Sheehy, whose throw to Murray nailed Hagerman at third. Foley stole second and scored on Johnston's single to right, Johnston advanced on a wild pitch. Bergoine singled to right, and when Lebarr threw high to first, for Riversides' first error of the game, Johnston scored. Foley fanned and the game was over.

SPORTING COMMENT

Credit for one of the latest improvements of inside baseball is given to George Stallings, manager of the Boston Brave.

Stallings noticed that when he sent a player to bat with instructions to sacrifice when the situation was obvious that a sacrifice was to be delivered, the opposition, unless it was careless, sought to checkmate the plan.

The opposing infield would draw in. The opposing pitcher would pitch high and inside. If the batsman tried to bunt, a pop fly often would result.

"Why play right into the hands of the other fellows?" said Stallings. "Let's try some way to get the better of them."

As a result, Stallings evolved a new plan of action.

If the opposing pitcher throws in a high one that obviously is a ball, the batsman is to let it go by. If the pitch is a strike the batter is to swing, thus standing a chance of driving the ball through the drawn-in infield. Should he miss, the opposition is puzzled. It may think the hit and run is to be attempted, and consequently relax vigilance for a bunt, which gives the batter a good chance to lay the ball down and beat it out.

President Farrell of New league is "messing things up a bit," as the cricketers say, by permitting rowdyism to become rampant in his circuit. Repeated assaults on umpires which have to date not resulted in the punishment of any of the offenders have encouraged the pugnaciously inclined members of the teams. At Baltimore yesterday the police were again called to the park, where Clark, Kolseth and Brady engaged in a battle.

Newark Leader Tried to Get Tris Speaker and Wood

Also Sought Rube Marquard When He Heard That Big Leagues Would Quit.

When Tommy McCarthy, who is managing the Newark International league club, heard that the majors were planning to close their gates he sent wires to Tris Speaker, Joe Wood and Rube Marquard, offering them liberal salaries to finish the season with the Indians.

"The International will stick," wired McCarthy, "and will be a real big league. Better get in out of the wet while the getting is good."

Joseph J. Lannin, who is the most influential backer of the International, declares that his circuit will finish the original schedule, regardless of the present crisis in baseball.

If the major league clubs are looking for some veterans to take the places of men who are ordered to work or fight, they may do well to consider John Hummel. The famous veteran of the big show for ten seasons was the idol of the Brooklyn fans. He was released from that club in 1915, and this season he was a member of the San Francisco club of the Pacific Coast league. When they decided to close up Johnny had taken parts in more than 100 contests and compiled a batting average of .296, while the Robins were in Chicago Johnny visited the hotel at which the club stopped and renewed old acquaintances. The famous player was asked if he would consider an offer to return to the big leagues. "Sure," he replied quickly, "and if I had my choice I would prefer to play on my old club, the Robins, again."

Down at Wilmington, Del., baseball is all the rage. Several thousands of fans were unable to get inside the Steel league's $93,000 park last Saturday. The Wilmingtons played the Bethlehems, and among the former major league players who "worked" on the field were Jeff Tesreau, Dumont, Joe Jackson, Dressen, Gharrity and others who left the professional arena presumably to avoid military service. It is said that offers amounting to $700 a month have been made to star players who still are with major league clubs, but who must "work or fight" when their cases come before the draft boards. Needless to say where these men will "labor" if thy are forced to leave their present employers.

CAMOUFLAGE ON BIG SCALE.

Germans said to have Disguised Vast Areas with Painted Canvas.

London, — A British air official writing from the western front says that the Germans have brought camouflage to a high state of artistic perfection that is almost incredible.

"The most expert and highly experienced airmen are often deceived even when flying low," he writes. "As a first step the German military authorities sought suggestions from the most distinguished German artists in colour. As a next step every available man was turned into the business of carrying out the artists' ideas.

"Miles or canvas painted to look like roads were constructed, under which regiments would march without being seen. Paper encampments were improvised and aerodromes, woods, villages, and factories of a purely fictitious character were set up merely to distract observers and to coevr the movements of troops and guns. Nothing on so vast a scale has ever been attempted before."

GERMANIZING RUSSIANS

Teaching of German Substituted for Russian in Lettland.

Details of the way in which the agents of Prussians are carrying on the work of Germanizing the population in the interest of Germans, who make up about 4 per cent. of the inhabitants, are given as follows in Moscow newspapers recently received in Stockholm:

"The Germanization of the people in Lettland is being effected through every possible means. In hot haste the Lettish higher institutions of learning are being closed and the Prussian educational program brought in. In Walnar the Boys' High School and the girls' High School were closed at the same time. In Riga the German language is being made the language of instruction, with the exception of two girls' high schools.

"Private instruction, as well as instruction in the Russian language, is forbidden. In the middle of March, with the beginning of the German semester, many of those connected with the education of the Lettish youth were obliged to give up teaching. In the public schools in the country teachers not infected with socialism are employed under the condition that every second one has an absolute command of German. All excerpts from Russian history, as well as the word 'Latvija,' (Lettland,) have been eliminated from the reading book used in the public schools.

"In Courland the work of Germanization has struck still deeper roots. German noncommissioned officers who do not understand a word of Lettish are appointed as teachers, and in all schools and churches an order to pray for the German Kaiser has been issued. Russia lose their land unless they pay the Basons the rest due for the entire period of the war."

SALVATION ARMY UNDER KAISER'S BAN

Organization Wiped Out in Germany by Imperial Decree—Thousands Fight With Allies

NEW YORK, July 26.—The Salvation Army in Germany and Austria has been wiped out of existence by order of the Kaiser, not only because the organization was founded in England and was developed from that country, but because Salvationists from all over the earth are in the trenches, fighting under the valous flags of the Allies. This news was received by the Salvation Army here yesterday.

All of the orphanage, rescue homes, lodging houses, hospitals, and corps headquarters belonging to the organization have long since been confiscated, and the Salvation Army as such has been put out of existence, so far the Central Powers are concerned. Its members are scattered in many directions, and all co-operation among them stopped. They have not been permitted to communicate with heir London headquarters since the war started. A work of mercy which was begun about fifty years ago is thereby wiped out by the Kaiser.

There are over 100,000 Silvationists now in the trenches and bearing arms for the Allies, pursuant to their determination to assist in puting down the greatest organized evil the world has ever known.

The same letter brings the news that American military commanders are encouraging Salvation Army war work women back of the lines, of which there are several hundred, to use infantry field kitchens whenever their regular hutment duties will allow, and here cook pastries for the rroops with Government materials on Government ranges.

KNOCKED DOWN BY A WAGGON

Ted Gunn, a delivery boy working for James R. Bell, sustained painful injuries this morning at 11.30 o'clock while crossing the street at the corner of George and Charlotte streets with a small delivery waggon. W. J. Oke's waggon ran over him. The boy was picked up unconscious and taken by Sergt Blade to Nicholls Hospital, where Dr. C. H. Amys found that while no bones had been broken, he was badly bruised. He was later taken to his home, corner of Lewis and King streets.

According to the story of some who saw the accident, Oke's waggon was on the wrong side.

Enemy Attacks Repulsed by British Forces

Entire Line Has Been Recovered By The French

CROPS IN THE EAST ARE MUCH ABOVE THE WESTERN YIELD

Outlook Poorest in Some Years According to Reports Gathered by the Molsons Bank—Quebec About Average—West is Hard Hit.

Quebec—About average crop.
Ontario — Grains above average; fruits much below average.
Manitoba—An average crop.
Alberta—Much below last year.
Saskatchewan—Below last year.

These are the crop indications for the main provinces of Canada as gathered by the Molsons Bank from its hundreds of branch managers throughout the east and west.

Reports on western conditions make gloomy reading. Complete failures are indicated in certain districts in Alberta south of the C.P.R. main line, especially around Lethbridge and Medicine Hat, while a less than average crop is indicated in the rest of the province and in Saskatchewan. Manitoba shows rather brighter prospects, but here again the conditions are only average, with five weeks to go before harvesting, during which hail or blight are possible.

Drought and high winds are the principal causes of the unsatisfactory crop conditions, but there is still a chance for improvement if heavy rains come quickly.

F. O. Fowler, secretary of the Northwest Grain Dealers, figured out the situation a month ago and estimated that the damage done to wheat throughout the west runs from 10 to 50 per cent. There is increased acreage over last year in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, as follows:—Wheat, 14 per cent; oats 6.7 per cent; barley, 5.7 per cent; flax, 10 per cent. He estimated the possible wheat crop at 190,824,000 bushels; oats at 59,000,000 barley, 10,000,000, and flax 5,000,000.

Quebec.

The heavy rains during the month of June have done much to improve the hay crop in the Province of Quebec, which was in very poor condition earlier in the season. At Cowansville and Bedford where the drainage is poor the excessive rains have retarded the growth. In other sections the hay was witer killed to a great extent. The crop is expected to be below the average in volume. The most optimistic reports come from Sorel, Lachine and Quebec city, where heavy yields are looked for an from St. Ours. Lachute and Pierreville, where the quality is above last years.

The grain crops, such as oats, barley, wheat and buckwheat, are in favorable condition throughout the province, although cold weather in June has retarded them in certain districts. Larger acreages of wheat have been sown as a rule and farmers are endeavouring to supply themselves, where they formerly bought western wheat for home consumption. Hot sun is needed during the month of August to ripen the grains. Lachute reports excellent prospects, while oats never looked in better condition. Optimistic accounts also come from Chicoutimi St. Ours and Drummondville.

Reports indicate that the corn crop will be below the average and in one or two cases practically a failure as a result of the June frosts.

June frosts also had a very detrimental effect on potatoes, beans and garden produce of all kinds. In most cases the frost bitten crops were re-seeded and prospects at the present time are consequently very fair. Potatoes promise well in Sorel, Roberval and Pierreville and a wonderful crop is looked for at Ste. Therese.

Tobacco will equal past records at St. Cesaire and Three Rivers.

The sweet grass industry at Pierreville has fallen off owing to lack of demand.

In the fruit growing districts of Quebec, unhealthy apple trees were killed by the severe winter, and in many cases this year's crop of late apples was considerably curtailed. At Lachute the apple crops will be practically nil. Early apples small fruits such as cherries and strawberries are plentiful.

Ontario.

Ontario's fall wheat crop was practically a total failure with the exception of Lambton and Essex counties. The conditions for fall wheat were unfavorable from the beginning. In most districts the entire crop was winter killed and the farmers ploughed it in the spring and sowed spring wheat, oats or other grain. Ontario's spring wheat crop has never been a large one, but this year the acreage is larger than usual and the yield per bushel promises to be normal. A good crop of fall wheat is promised from Lambton countp where the acreage is 30 per cent. greater than last year.

A heavy crop of oats is reported from all over the province and it is expected that a bumper crop will be harvested. A probable yield of from 30 to 50 bushels an acre is reported from various points. The acreage is considerably larger than heretofore. Some sections including Western Ontario, report that while the oat crop is heading well the straw will be shorter than usual

The barley crop is also good. The corn is backward but the indications are that if the weather continues warm the crop will be on the whole well up to the average. Western Ontario corn will be a very slim crop unless unusually favorable weather conditions prevail. The rye crop will be good.

The peas and beans have suffered from the cold weather, but a large acreage has been planted, and with favorable weather conditions, including a late autumn, a large yield will be the result.

The flax crop of the western part of the province promises to be a record. The acreage is larger than last year and the crop is in excellent condition. The root crop is backward owing to the cold weather of the spring, but indications are that the yield will be up to par if warm weather prevails.

The potato crop in the Lake Ontario region will be excellent. Further west the large acreage under potatoes is in good condition though early blight has done some damage. The hay crop is lighter than last year on the whole, though a few districts report a heavy crop. Haying is now well advanced and the crop is being harvested under ideal weather conditions.

The apple crop in eastern Ontario will be fairly good; in the West it will be lighter. In any case, the crop will greatly exceed last year's. Small fruits will yield but a light crop. Quantities of the western peaches were winter-killed. The region about Hamilton expects to harvest only about 50 per cent of the usual quantity of apples and peaches. Berries are poor throughout.

Alberta.

The question of feed for the stock through the coming winter is one of serious concern in southern Alberta, and efforts are being made by the railroads, in conjunction with the Federal and Provincial Governments to ship enough feed from the north where rain was more plentiful to supply farmers in the south.

The acreage sown to what in Alberta this year was considerably greater than last year, and the high prices of seed grain, taken in conjunction with the heavy cost of labor, will mean a big loss to the farmers; although fortuately in most districts they are financially strong enough to stand a bad year.

Despite the exceedingly poor crop prospects in the Lethbridge district the farmers there are in a better position to stand a setback than they were in 1914, as during the past two or three years they have acquired a certain amount of live stock, and should rain fall early next month, many of the fields will produce good feed than can be profitably used by those who have cattle and sheep.

According to present indications the Lethbridge district will not produce more han five or six millions bushels of grain this year as against twenty to thirty million bushels last year.

Saskatchewan.

While the crop situation in Saskatchewan is much better than it is in Alberta, at the same time reports indicate a crop much below the average. This is particularly true of the wheat crop, because much greater damage has been done to the wheat than to the oats and barley. There is very little rye sown, and very little flax in comparison with the oats and wheat. Nearly all the damage in this province has been caused by drought, hail and cutworms having done little harm so far. There does not appear to be any lack of feed for stock the quality of which is improving daily. The grain crops is much above last year.

Manitoba.

Manitoba suffered little from the high winds which played such havoc in the western provinces, except in the southwestern part, where crop prospects are very poor indeed Sections east of Winnipeg and pretty generally the whole northern part of the province did not suffer to any extent from wind and while the rainfall has not been great, there has been enough to produce an average crop. In the immediate vicinity of Winnipeg the crops are excellent.

Root crops around Winnipeg show large increases in acreage planted, and a big crop is indicated thanks to recent rains and warm weather. Hay crops in the province are reported light, although in the neighborhood of Winnipeg they will have a good yield.

CATTLE MARKET

There has been but little change in prices for choice quality weighty cattle during this week, the tendency for this class of cattle being, if anything, towards a firmer feeling. Really first-class quality heavy steers sold, in fact, at higher prices than for anything in the past few weeks, but the buyers in this case were an outside firm, the Armour Co., who came in and clearly outbid the buyers for the big local packing houses. The price was $15.75 for two straight loads of steers, and sold by Dunn and Levack. A few outside loads and part loads of heavy steers, good quality, sold at good prices from $14 to $15. Outside of these extra choice heavy cattle the market has been generally dull and weak. The hot, dry weather evidently had the effect of lessening the demand for butcher cattle for the local trade, and incidentally softening prices to the tune of a general decline of from 25c. to 40c. for the whole week, on all grades of medium to common butcher cattle.

Fat cows and bulls declined about 50c. for the week.

Stocker trade was very quiet, prospects of a scarcity of fodder feed having a discouraging effect on this trade.

Drying up pastures and scarcity of feed is likely to have an effect on the course of the market for the next week or two, in the still further lowering of prices for the commoner grades of cattle, which are likely to be marketed earlier than they would be if feed were more plentiful. On the other hand, for anything offering in the way of real choice quality with weight, the tone of the market is likely to hold good and firm.

The market for choice veal calves is holding steady to firm. But just at this season there is a rush of poor quality grass calves in the market, and these are bound to suffer sharp declines in prices, the market for this class of calves going off this week 75c. to $1.

Light sheep have been in good demand, prices holding steady to firm. The offerings of lambs have been of poor quality, the market for these declining early in the week, and barely holding their own at the decline.

The run of hogs has been lighter than was expected, prices tending to harden during the week, but steadying at the latter end at a 50c. advance over the previous week, and closing steady at $19, fed and watered.

AEROPLANES TO FLY THE ATLANTIC

Experts Believe Feat Can Be Accomplished in 30 Hours.

LONDON, July 27.—Handler Page, an acknowledged British aircraft authority, declares Great Britain already possesses aeroplanes capable of flight for more than thirty hours, that is an air distance of 2,700 miles. From Britain to Newfoundland, via the Azores as a possible stopping place is only 2,845 miles from Britain to Newfoundland direct via Ireland is 1,880 miles.

Many British authorities believe stimulus of the Daily Mail $50,000 prize will result in crossing the Atlantic this year by direct aeroplane flight, which many young Canadians hope will be accomplished by a Canadian flyer.

Obviously, if within a few months letters are crossing the Atlantic in equally speedy stages to Australia, New Zealand, India and other outlying parts, the whole question of quicker and cheaper Empire news service assumes an entirely fresh aspect, while hardly less important would be messages of business men.

HELEN TELLS HER HUSBAND SHE SAW THE SUPPER PARTY

CHAPTER CXXIX

When I told Mrs. Collins that George knew I had seen the supper party, she sneeringly returned:

"You are very clever."

I made no reply—simply nodded and left the table. But up in my room, I walked the floor wringing my hands and excitedly talking loudly to myself. I knew I had worsted her—that I had had the best of the conversation from every point; but instead of being elated, I was horribly depressed. Must I always be subjected to such things? Should I always have to be fighting to prove my right to my husband's love? It wasn't a pleasant thought, nor one I could think of with equanimity.

"I guess I gave her something to think of, the cat!" I said to myself, thinking of the first time I had heard her called "cat" and that it was Merton Gray who had applied the name to her. "I'll show her she can't get the best of me, even if I have to lie," but as I recalled my untruth, I flushed. I never had known George to tell even the tiniest white lie. He would be disgusted, when he knew (as he would have to) that I had stooped to tell an untruth.

"Mrs. Collins took your place when you left me, this noon," I told George when he came in early, as he said he would. "She saw me, last night, as your party in the grill broke up."

GEORGE IS AMAZED AT HELEN'S CONFESSION.

"She saw you—when?"

"When your party, of which she was one, started to leave the grill."

"But—where were you?"

"I was in the corridor. I couldn't sleep and had gone down to get a book."

"Why didn't you speak to me, if you were there when we came out? Were you spying on me"

CANADIAN NORTHERN

"I was getting a book,'" I parried. Then I told him: "Mrs. Collins was very insulting. She said I owed her a vote of thanks because she had not told you. I said that I had told you, myself, so I owed her nothing."

"You—"

"I told a lie, George, and I shall tell as many more as are necessary to let people know I am not the abused, neglected wife they think I am—and that at times I am."

"What else did you say to her?"

"I can't recall all that passed, but I remember she said you told her you had not invited me to join the party. Of course that gave her all the liberty she needed."

"Yes, I said I would not disturb you, as you had not been well."

"She also asked me why I was not jealous, implying of course that I had reason to be."

"What reply did you make to that? This is most interesting." The sneer on my husband's lips made me feel like crying, but I stubbornly resisted I had started, at last, to show my independence. I would not weaken.

"Why, when she said I was very sure of you, calling you 'George' as usual, altho I never speak of you to her save as 'Mr Howard,' I said: I was sure of you—that, had you cared for any of the Moreland women or girls, you would have asked them to marry you instead of me, as you had known them all for years before you met me."

"Was that quite all you said?"

"No, when she sneered at me, I told her that you were, most likely the same as other men in your taste for a wife younger than yourself. That is all, I think. But I wanted you to know exactly what was said, as I feel sure she will tell you her version of the conversation. She was very angry, altho she tried to hide it."

AN UNEXPECTED REJOINDER

I turned quietly away and commenced to lay out my clothes for dinner. After my excitement had abated, I had spent theafternoon trying to plan my future conduct toward George, and toward his world. I would be dignified and calm; I would not be sat upon; and I would, in all things, try to become a woman of poise and character—a woman of the world.

"By Jove! that must have taken Julia's breath away."

I could scarcely believe my ears. I had expected fault-finding—perhaps unpleasantness—to result from my confession, particularly as he had received it so sneeringly. And this was his only comment! Was thisherelOe his only comment? Was there ever so strange a man?

"I think it did," I replied, going on with what I was doing.

"What queer creatures women are," ed, I had spent the afternoon trying "I don't see why women cannot be friends the same as men, but evidently they cannot."

I made no reply, and the matter was not referred to gain by either of us, altho I could not put it from my mind for days.

Cost of Having

Figure the hours which a corn may spoil—the best hours that you have.

Figure the hours spent in paring it—just to lessen the pain for a time.

Then remember that all is needless. It is folly, it is out of date. The day of corns ended years ago, when Blue-jay was invented.

Millions of people never know a corn ache. Nobody ever should. Those who do either coddle corns, or use some old-time treatment.

Cost of Ending

In time it takes a jiffy—just the moment needed to apply a little Blue-jay plaster. The money cost is about four cents.

The corn pain then stops instantly, never to come back. The corn itself disappears completely, and usually with one application.

There is no effort, no discomfort. You apply the Blue-jay and forget the corn. Try it tonight. What it does to one corn it will do to every corn that comes. As one goes, all will go, and as soon as they appear.

You may save a thousand hours, perhaps, by proving this fact now.

TRICK OF THE FUNNEL.

Blowing Out a Light Through It Is Easy if You Know How.

To blow out a candle, using a funnel to blow through, seems a ridiculously easy thing to do. But ask any friend of yours to try it and see what happens. Ten to one he will try to blow through the cup so as to force his breath through the narrow neck of the funnel. As this is not an easy thing to do he will flatten mouth and nose in his endeavors, while trying to force his face into the small cup. Then he will reverse the funnel and blow into the neck, and when he does not succeed in extinguishing the light he will blow harder and harder and finally he will admit that he is beaten.

In blowing through the neck of the funnel he has directed the funnel directly at the light, so that the flame is exactly opposite to the place where the neck of funnel joins the cup. You, on taking the funnel from him, incline the funnel so that its upper edge is on a level with the light. You blow gently. The light is extinguished at the first puff without any of the desperate effort which your friend put forth.

If you ponder a moment you will realize why you succeeded and why your friend failed. His breath on entering the cup or funnel spread in all directions, and the tiny current of air was dispersed upward and downward, so that, as he neatly leveled the center of the funnel at the flame, no current of air ever reached it.

You, on the contrary, held the upper wall of the funnel on a level with the flame. The current of air started by your breath, on reaching the edge of the wall, streamed onward in the direction given it by the restraining wall and on reaching the flame snuffed it out.—Boston American.

BRINGING DOWN A PICTURE.

Henner Had a Way of Making the Louvre Officials See the Light.

It is a pity that Henner is dead. He had found an excellent means to force the conservators at the Louvre to bring down the pictures that he judged had been placed too high. He made use of this method in the case of "Susanne au Bain" ("Susanna at the Bath") of Tintoretto.

Twenty years ago this masterpiece was hung in the gallery four meters from the door.

Henner was furious at this injustice. But he did not permit his anger to appear. He contented himself with coming from time to time in the morning before the visitors were numerous in the halls and in the most courteous tone requesting the keepers to furnish him a large double ladder.

The keepers referred the matter to the conservators, saying that this ladder was asked by M. Henner, and they were impressed with the necessity of responding to the wish of the old master.

Then he placed the ladder before Susanna, mounted the steps slowly and, when at the top, remained a quarter of an hour absorbed in the contemplation of the marvelous painting.

He then descended as phlegmatically and, with a fine smile, said in his Alsatian jargon: "Merci pour l'ejelle. Je suis dres gontent!" ("Thanks for the ladder. I am much pleased!")

He went through this maneuver half a dozen times at intervals.

At last the conservators understood. They had "Susanne au Bain" unhooked and gave it a place of honor in the square salon, where it is now.—Cri de Paris.

Tax on Hats.

Not only have hats at various times been subject to taxation, but have even been made the subject of special laws. Thus in Henry VII.'s reign none was allowed to sell hats at a larger price than 20 pence or caps for more than 2s. 8d.

Some compensation, however, for this interference with free trade could be found in the fact that in 1571 on Sundays and holidays every one above seven years of age was required to wear a cap of wool of English make under penalty of 3 farthings' fine for every day's neglect.—London Chronicle.

PERCY HAWN, Sale Manager

We said recently that this Maxwell Motor Car is a "featureless car."

By that we meant that no one feature was better than any other—and none less efficient or effective.

Uniformity is the outstanding quality of Maxwell design and construction.

Apropos that, we are frequently asked what particular detail of the motor is responsible for the tremendous mileage per gallon of gasoline obtained by Maxwell owners.

If you ask an owner he will almost invariably give the carburetor most of the credit.

Now, obviously the carburetor must be a good one. If it were not, it would prevent, even if it did not accomplish the result.

But a good carburetor does not make a good motor car—nor an efficient mixing valve alone an efficient motor.

The factors that made that famous "Non-Stop" record possible, and the test in which 3,000 owner-driven Maxwell Motor Cars averaged 35.2 miles per gallon of gasoline—were many.

Every detail of motor design had to be right—every proportion just right in relation to every other one.

Piston displacement, valve dimensions and valve lift, compression, balance—everything in precise ratio and correct relation to every other detail.

'Twould require a volume to tell how Maxwell engineers achieved that splendid result. Just as it required long years of practical manufacturing experience to know how.

Of course the carburetor helps—but equally so does the electrical system.

By the way, if this were the kind of motor car in which any one feature stood out above others, we would emphasize that electrical system.

But it isn't. Maxwell results are uniform. Those results are the product of a combination of many features—not of one or two only.

Similarly, if one owner achieved a sensational mileage or a high degree of reliability, that would prove nothing.

That happens with all makes of cars—the poorest included.

But for 3,000 owners to average 35.2 miles per gallon of gasoline;

For the same model to run 22,022 miles—44 consecutive days and nights without stopping—that car must be a Maxwell.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Glory Top

By AGNES G. BROGAN

Bruce Addington looked again at the beautiful photographic views of the illustrated paper, then turned to the advertisement.

"Prize competition local winter scenes," he read, "winner to be announced at close of contest."

Thoughtfully he leaned back in his chair. "Why not?" Photography was his pet enthusiasm, tomorrow, there would be nothing in particular to do. The trip to the adjacent hill country would be an exhilarating change. He had in mind one glorious vista which with proper lights and shadows, must undoubtedly win any contest, no scene could be fairer. He would start in the morning and take his picture when the light was best, just at this time the country from the height he meant to attain—would be one gleaming sea of silver. What was it the villagers dubbed the high, hilly peak? Oh! yes, "Glory Top," and a fitting name it was.

Bruce was eager to try the effect of those shadowy pines close against a blue sky—the far-reaching lands below. And when the train left him at the village station on the following morning, the outlook was all that his glowing fancy had painted. The tedious climb also, was rewarded by just the desired setting for his picture.

With inward satisfaction he could already see it at the head of that same illustrated city paper, his victorious name at the top. And that would mean not a little, especially, with such competition as Barnes and Henderson. Between the three men existed a pleasant "photographic" rivalry. Bruce drew a long breath of the invigorating air and reluctantly began the descent. Before him on the upward pathway trudged a girlish figure.

Across her shoulder was swung a small camera, and as her clear eyes rested for a moment upon his own, her features showed quick disappointment. Bruce was wishing with a most uncanny eagerness, that he might find some plausible excuse to address the charming little creature, when, with a moan, very suddenly, but very completely, she collapsed directly in his pathway. There, a muddled scarlet heap, she looked up at him.

"My foot," she gasped. "My foot!"

"Hurt?" he questioned.

White and suffering, the girl nodded. "I think I sprained it farther down the hill. It pained frightfully, but I kept on." Tears filled her eyes. "I was so determined to win that News photographic contest," she confessed, "the view from Glory Top would do it, but I can't get there now."

"Another time, perhaps," Bruce consoled.

"I shan't be able to get up again in time," the girl lamented. A brave smile banished the tears in her eyes. "How foolish to be grieved over that now," she said, "when the real problem is how to get back to my boarding place. I wonder—would you be kind enough to stop at Fielding's on the way down; anyone will tell you where they live, and ask Mrs. Fielding to send someone after me with a sleigh. If you would just tell her that Miss Chester has hurt her ankle. I'm Miss Chester," the girl confided. She smiled again: "village school ma'am."

"You look very much more like a pupil," Bruce remarked, "and I have no intention of leaving you to rest in a zero snow mound until help comes. I am going to take you up bodily, and as far as possibly painlessly, and carry you down the hill."

Tenderly, and with a strange pang at parting, he placed his burden upon Mrs. Fielding's sitting room couch.

"Land!" ejaculated that lady, "so you didn't get the view after all, and you countin' on the prize for your cloak money."

Miss Chester blushed. "Oh! it really doesn't matter," she interposed. Bruce bent over her. "May I introduce myself?" he asked earnestly. "May I come out and learn how you are progressing?"

"There is no reason why you should," the girl gently announced. "You have been most kind. I am exceedingly grateful," she put out her hand. "Good-by."

Then Bruce surprised even himself. "More than I have ever wanted anything," he told her, "I want to see you again."

As the weeks passed she wished with an uncontrollable wistfulness that she had not been so resolute. How strong were his arms and withal, how gentle. It would have been no harm to learn her rescuer's name, but to what purpose? Mollie Chester was only Mollie Chester, village schoolteacher. Though she might gaze from Old Glory, for her there could be no far-reaching glorious vista.

And then one day came a marked illustrated paper. The picture at the head of the page seemed to dance unsteadily for a moment, beneath it were the unbelievable words "'Glory Top,' prize picture submitted by Miss Mollie Chester." So this was what he had done—her rescuer, his own picture had been sacrificed for her sake. She must send for him at once, tell him that it was unfair.

Inclosed she found a sheet of paper, whose well-known business heading bore the same signature as that below.

"I am still under the spell of Old Glory," she read, "and I am coming to see you today."

Clews to His Writing.

Sometimes the worst of handwriting becomes intelligible when one grasps the rules, for a man's script—particularly an author's—is frequently made difficult, chiefly by his deliberate or unconscious inversion of the accepted rules of calligraphy. Henry Ward Beecher had a daughter who acted as copyist, and she read him with ease simply by remembering three principles—that in her father's manuscript no dotted letter was meant for an "i," no crossed letter stood for "t" and that no capital letter ever began a sentence.

Germans Wanted Iron and Coal

HE who would gain a deeper insight into the causes of the present war might trace its origins back to the curious distribution which nature has made of the materials of present day civilization, and if you like, more directly, to the invention of Sidney Gilchrist Thomas, a young English chemist, who spent his nights studying at the Birkbeck School, in London.

It was the new process for dephosphorizing iron, in smelting, that gave sudden and unexpected value to the vast iron ore beds of Lorraine and the adjacent territory. The larger part of these lay in France, or outside of Germany. If Bismarck had only known their importance in 1870! There might never have been then a European war.

For it was directly due to the fact that the great ore deposits of Europe lay in this territory, while the larger coal deposits were in the Ruhr district and roundabout, in Germany, that the present conflict was precipitated. Germany's industrial greatness, her vast manufactures, the astonishing rise of her export trade within forty years, were all pivoted upon her huge possessions of coal, just as this is the key to the industrial greatness of the United States. It was almost wholly her possessions of coal and iron that made England the mistress of a far-reaching empire.

Had Germany not grown rich out of her coal and iron industries she would have never had the wealth nor the factories with which to wage the mightiest war in history. Already her more foresighted economists are pointing out that unless one of the fruits of this war is the ore fields of France, it will be for Germany barren of its greatest possibilities.

In the Nineteenth Century Mr. J. Ellis Barker, author of "Modern Germany," has an important article summing up the coal and iron resources of the nations and their probable influence upon future development. Pointing out first of all that not only is the world's population densest on and around the actively exploited coal fields, and that in the last forty years the consumption of coal in the world has increased more than sevenfold, he takes note that while at the outbreak of the war England and Germany were producing about equal amounts of coal, their potential resources are quite unequal.

So far as present knowledge extends, the coal reserves of Germany are not less than twice those of Great Britain, and more than half those of all Europe. But he neglects to point out that this balance may soon be disturbed by the development of the coal resources of Russia. If the Russian fields should become Germany's possession or available to Germany her predominance would be still more increased.

When we turn to the comparative resources in iron, very much the same condition holds. The actual or known reserves of Germany are nearly three times those of Great Britain and surpass those of any other European country. France is her only notable rival. While the coal output and resources of France are almost negligible, her iron ore holdings are enormous, practically equal to those of Germany. But they all lie close to the German border, and the first thing that Germany did was to seize this region and hold it. The districts occupied by the German troops yielded France two-thirds of her coal and 90 per cent. of her iron.

Germany likewise seized the iron beds of Luxembourg and Belgium, of Poland and Western Russia. She has also practically monopolized the iron exports of Sweden. She thus possesses to-day, to all intents, a full two-thirds of Europe's iron, and potentially at least nearly as much of its coal. In natural resources Germany is to-day by far the most favored industrial nation of Europe. These are facts which must be squarely faced.

The Patient Parisian.

The real key to the French character is not merriment; it is patience. This has probably always been so, and if the French have at times shown themselves rebellious, it is probably because they have been subjected to great wrongs from their rulers.

During the war the Parisians have shown more than their customary willingness to wait and suffer. Having always heard the French described as a restive people, I was much impressed by their patience during the mobilization and by the calm of the Parisians when the first bombs were dropped. It was believed the city would be shelled within a few days. I then saw literally tens of thousands of them stand in line morning, noon and night outside the railroad stations waiting to buy tickets. It was not the fact that some of them wanted to get away that surprised anybody, but the fact that such a mass of humanity could stand in line so long when there were thousands ahead and when for hours there would be no sign of advance. It must be that the French have had a special training from their bureaucratic form of government; they seem to be willing to wait forever for a man in uniform. When I saw those interminable lines filling the whole of Quai d'Orsay outside the Orleans station, I thought of the impatient crowds at Coney Island or at the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn Bridge getting home from an ordinary day's work or amusement.—John N. Anderson, in Century.

Germans Improve Tanks.

The Germans are said to have introduced certain improvements in tank construction, designed to give heavier protection against artillery. The crews are also able to close the machines hermetically when passing through gas clouds.

New System.

Adequate protection by fire rangers with the assistance of nature is said to have made a nearly perfect system of five protection in Northern Ontario this year.

WEIRD DREAM STORY.

The Startling Vision That Saved the Life of Lady Vernon.

The following dream story is told in "The Story of My Life," by Augustus J. C. Hare. The story was told to Mr. Hare in Rome in 1870:

"Lady Vernon dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, crossing the entrance hall, and she awoke with a great start. After awhile she composed herself to sleep again, and she dreamed—she dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, on the middle of the staircase, and she awoke with a great shock. She got up. She thought she could not be quite well, and she took a little sal volatile. At last she fell asleep again, and she dreamed—she dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, standing at her bedroom door, and she awoke in a great terror, and she jumped out of bed, and she said, 'I'll have an end of this; I'll have an end of these foolish imaginations.'

"And she rushed to the door and threw it wide open. And there just outside stood the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other. And when he suddenly saw Lady Vernon in her white nightdress, with her hair streaming down her back, he was so dreadfully frightened that he dropped the candle on the floor and rushed off down the staircase and off to the stables, where there was a horse ready saddled and bridled, on which he meant to have ridden away when he had murdered Lady Vernon. And he rode away without having murdered her at all, and he was never heard of again."

Might Have Helped.

"We were traveling all day in the teeth of the gale."

"Pity you didn't have a dentist."

"What for?"

"To draw the teeth."

Honesty.

He who praises freely what he means to purchase and he who enumerates the faults of what he means to sell may set up a partnership with honesty.

Just Like the Salad.

A young man named Smith boarded with an emaciated aunty of ample years, who seemed to take the view that most any old thing was good enough to hash up for fodder. One day chicken salad was served, but it was merely another demonstration that there is nothing in a name.

"By the way, Mr. Smith," severely remarked the landlady, as the meal progressed, "how do you like the chicken salad?"

"That reminds me," irrelevantly answered Smith, "I bought a book today and told them to send it around here. Did it come?"

"Yes," replied the landlady, with a puzzled expression, "but why should the chicken salad remind you of it?"

"Coincidence, Mrs. Slymm," was the mean rejoinder of Smith. "The book is half calf, you know."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

MAJORITY TYRANNY.

Its Despotic Sway, For Instance, In the Matter of Dress.

The tyranny of majorities is not confined to politics. It invades all fields, demands obedience from all classes and brooks defiance of none.

Women tolerate a certain style of garment because they imagine a majority of womankind at the moment is demanding it. They obediently follow suit for fear of exciting attention or unfavorable comment.

Men and women are bound too much by others' opinions. Society, of course, is built on conventions. But conventions sometimes become tyrannical. One should know when to follow their dictates and when to ignore them. In the matter of dress, for instance, why should any one endure a style he detests merely because the majority at the moment is wearing it? Why should not a long necked man wear a tall collar, if he prefers, it, even though it does cause pain to the chins of all sympathetic observers?

Frankly the question is without an answer. Perhaps people tolerate majority tyranny in such matters merely because they are accustomed to it. A caged animal presumably knows nothing of freedom until he has tasted it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Fighting Is Slowing Up On The Western Front

Serious Disorders Have Broken Out In Prague

ONE OF THE MOST BITTERLY CONTESTED BATTLES OF WAR

Present Purpose of Crown Prince Has for Reaching Possibilities —Hindenburg Sidesteps

EMPEROR BILL'S OPINION

(United Press Service.)
(By Webb Miller.)

PARIS, July 27.—The Crown Prince's order, commanding his armies to stand and fight, which was reported yesterday by the United Press, has changed the Soissons-Rheims battle from a German retreat into one of the most bitterly contested engagements of the war—and one with more far-reaching possibilities than could have existed under an enemy retirement.

The voluntary retirement of the German armies to the Ourcq line, or even to the Velse, would have had a most depressing effect on German morale, but would have been practically devoid of strategic results, other than shoving the enemy farther from Paris. The determination of the Boches to fight it out, however, subjects the flower of their southern army to the danger of a great disaster which becomes more and more menacing as the Allies carve away at the east and west sides of the salient, while the Franco-Americans drive northward on the southern end.

Interviewed the Kaiser.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, July 27.—Hindenburg is making Ludendorff accept the blame for the failure of the last German offensive, according to a Rome Despatch to-day quoting Zurich advices. It was reported that Hindenburg strongly disapproved of the offensive plan, and when it collapsed, he insisted that Ludendorff sign the official communiques on the German defeat.

Despatches from The Hague declared that Karl Rosner, the Kaiser's favourite war correspondent, interviewed Hindenburg at headquarters and obtained from him a message to the German people, which was printed in the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger. This message was: "I hope that those at home will maintain their confidence. In war nothing avenges itself like overhaste. Breathing spaces between battles are necessary." Rosner also quoted the Kaiser as saying to him: "The hardest work now lies before the Germans. Our adversary knows that the decisive point has been reached and consequently he is straining every effort of defense and counter-stroke."

MARKET PRICES WERE HIGH TO-DAY

In Many Cases Supplies Were Higher Than Store Prices.

Prices at the market this morning exceeded the store prices for the same products by from 2 to 3 cents. Butter and eggs brought to the local stores by the farmers this morning, sold at 47 and 48 cents, while the prices on the market were from 48 to 50 cents. Why the public insists to a great extent upon buying at the market when prices are regulated, not according to values but in many cases according to the price a neighbor is able to extract, is a mystery to the grocer.

The early shopper found this morning that the standard of price is set by example, on enquiring the price, being invariably told: "I haven't heard what they are getting yet." When the prices were finally set by the leader, they ran as follows:

Butter, 45 and 50c; eggs, 50c doz.; chickens, 30c lb; raspberries 28c and 30c qt.; black currants, 30c quart; beans, 7 12-c qt; beets, carrots and onions, 4c bunch, and new potatoes 60c pk. These prices dropped at 11 o'clock.

Wild Berries $3.00.

Wild raspberries sold at $3 a pail of 19 quarts, $2 for a 10 quart pail. Huckleberries brought $2.50 a pail.

ALLIED PRESSURE BEING CONSTANTLY MAINTAINED

Fighting Was Resumed To-day With Added Vigor—Allies Are Approaching Junction.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Canadian Press:

WITH AMERICAN ARMIES ON AISNE-MARNE FRONT, July 27. — Franco-American forces on the front north-east of Chateau-Thierry have driven the Germans almost entirely out of the wooded area which they have been so stubbornly defending. The Allied pressure is being constantly maintained and early to-day the punishment of the enemy by artillery fire was resumed with added vigour. Under cover of the guns, the Franco-American troops again began crawling forward. The advance is bringing the Allies still nearer to the important road junction of Fere en Tardenois. It is being carried out through the remainder of the dense woods in this region and over rain-soaked fields and hills on their outskirts. Slowly retreating the Germans are fighting stubbornly as they retire.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, July 27.—(British official.)—During the night our raiding parties entered the enemy's lines in the neighbourhood of Sailly Laurette, Neuville Vitasses, Arlexuen Gohelle and Lens and brought back several prisoners. Hostile artillery was active last night between the Somme and the Ancre rivers and there was some activity on the part of both sides in the La Basse Canal sector.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, July 27.—(Official.)—Further advances were scored by the French last night in the region immediately north of the Marne in the district where the Germans have been clinging to the river. War Office announced to-day that the French lines were advanced to the north of Fonta Binson. On the Champagne front the French carried out a local operation in the region south of the mountain without a name, as a result of which their lines were advanced nearly two-thirds of a mile on a front of approximately two miles. The French took 200 prisoners in this operation.

Chautauqua is a Big Success

NIAGARA FALLS, July 27.— The third day of the Chautauqua is over, and its popularity is growing. Yesterday and last night the big tent was crowded in spite of the intense heat, and all who went to hear such masters of their art as Martha Alexander, Madge Williamson and Hartnell DeMille felt that the heat mattered little compared with the enjoyment of such music. And everyone fell promptly in love with Father McCorry, as he won all hearts with his beautifully delivered addresses. The keynote of Father McCorry seems to be just "humanity." Every message he gave was vibrant with his love and trust in men and women—his love for their faults and virtues, their sublime depths and heights, and his trust in their boundless possibilties. His keen touch of humour, brought into the most unexpected places, makes his talks more fascinating than ever. And sometimes his simply expressed enthusiasm is rarely inspiring, so quickly is it reflected by the audience, old and young. The all-human note appeals to everyone.

DEMAND IMMEDIATE PLANS FOR PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

An Early Peace is Absolutely Essential to Life of Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey.

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, July 27.— That an early peace is "absolutely essential to the life of Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey" was declared in a communication addressed to the Austrian ministry by Socialist members of parliament, according to a Vienna despatch received to-day. Herr Seiz and Herr Seliger, Socialists, asked the ministry whether it was prepared to negotiate with Germany regarding war aims, and demanded immediate preparation for peace negotiations. They also demanded that the ministry renounce all imperialistic and annexationist aims.

Seventeen Year Old Youth Must Get Busy, Magistrate Told Him.

Stern, but fatherly, advice was given Joseph Gagnon, by Magistrate Dumble, this morning. The young man is seventeen years old, and according to Chief Thompson has not been working. "There is plenty of work and no excuse for idleness," said the Magistrate. Gagnon was given a month's probation, and promised Chief Thompson to get a job at once and keep it.

STRIKERS ARE RETURNING

Government's Order to Conscript Idle Men Has Its Effect.— Many Return to Work.

LEADERS CONFIDENT

(Special to The Examiner)

LONDON, July 27.—Munition strikere began returning to work to-day. The backbone of strike seems broken as result of the Government's threat to enforce conscription and put the idle men into the army unless all were back at their jobs by Monday. In Birmingham, especially, many returned to the munitions plants.

PRIME MINISTER'S MESSAGE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, July 27.—The Prime Minister's announcement last night that all workmen absent from factories on o rafter Monday will be deemed to have voluntarily placed themselves outside munitions industry and they will become liable to military service was issued too late to reach the bulk of the strikers last night. Consequently it was not generally known in the strike areas. Strike leaders at some centres to whom it was communicated declared they were confident strikers would not be intimidated or driven to resume work by the Government's threat. Leaders added that such possibility had been considered fully beforehand. No reports reached London last night of the extension of the strike and the great bulk of the workers still remain unaffected. Such important centres as London, Manchester, Leeds, Nottingham and Huddersfield for instance remain cool. Morning newspapers here comment on Government's announcement mostly with approval although they recognize the fact that the situation is grave one and contend it will be generally endorsed by the country. The country's uneasiness is manifested by some papers which while admitting that the strike at present time is indefensible, think that settlement might have been reached by a discuesion and compromise.

Soldier Drops Dead When Arrested in Sweetheart's Home

NEW YORK, July 27.— A soldier who had overstayed his leave, and who was traced to the home of his sweetheart, dropped dead when a detective appeared at the house to arrest him. A physician who examined him said that death was caused by a "collapsible heart."

The soldier, Edward T. Moore, was twenty-five years of age and lived at No. 1,934 Woodbine street, Ridgewood, Queens. He had been stationed at the Washington (D.C.) barracks. Given leave he failed to return to the barracks and the police were asked to aid the government authorities in finding him.

Detective Grabau, of the Newton station, learned that More and Miss Louisa Young, of No. 1,814 George street, Evergreen, were friendly, and suspecting that the soldier would probably appear at the home of the young woman, stationed himself in the neighbourhood. He saw More enter the house and he went there ten minutes later and was admitted. More was seated talking with Miss Young, when the detective revealed his identity. More turned pale and then collapsed.

ENEMY IN NO HURRY

Germans Still Hold the North Bank of the Marne for a Distance of Eight Miles.

FRENCH GUNS ACTIVE

Canadian Press:

LONDON, July 27.—Discussing the latest operations and German position within the Marne salient, Reuters correspondent with the American troops in France, under date of Friday, says it is well to remember that the Germans still hold the north bank of the Marne for some eight miles, from Vincolles to Reuil. This has not yet been disputed with them. This alone is proof the enemy is not in a very desperate hurry to withdraw from the salient, if it is not also a hint that he has a large accumulation of stores near the river which it is difficult to remove. French guns in this sector, the correspondent continues, continually are exploding great dumps of ammunition, which reveals how thick they are.

Early Success.

The early success of the French counter attack has bred a disposition to expect further rapid advances and perhaps huge capture, but fighting in the salient offers to the aggressor only the advantage obtainable from the enemy's congested condition and even that cuts both ways as it leaves masses of men to oppose us. Our progress the past week gave the enemy ample time to begin reorganization outside the salient. We are not likely to go much further without discovering his disposition to withstand us. We may regard with some suspicion the enemy's intentions along the river front. His position may not be an enviable one, but there are points in it not unfavourable to attack.

American troops have discovered at Brecy, north of Chateau Thierry, emplacements of German super-cannon which bombarded towns behind the front and perhaps Paris.

Postmen Are Still on Strike

Government's Action May Uncover a Mine of Revolt—Many War Veterans.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 27.—From the outlook this morning gleaned at the Labour Temple, if the Government persists in the attitude towards the striking post office employees, it is going to uncover a mine of revolt it little dreams of. From the Great Lakes to the Pacific Ocean all mail carriers and inside clerks were out again last night, in every centre. Eighty per cent. of the Winnipeg strikers are ex-soldiers. Any drastic action of the Government will be followed by a strike of railway mail clerks and customs employees.

McMordie's Statement.

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, July 27.—Alexander McMordie, general secretary of the Federation of Canadian Letter Carriers, asked this morning if the decision of the Government to dismiss from the service all western postmen who failed to return to work to-day, might result in the eastern postmen again going on strike as a protest against such action by the government, refused to make any statement. Opinion prevails in well-informed circles that eastern postmen will not make that a pretext for another strike. Mr. McMordie announced that a men's committee is being formed, comprising representatives from all leading centres, both in Easter and Western Canada, to wait upon the sub-committee of the Cabinet at Ottawa on Tuesday, August 6th, with regard to the question of maximum and minimum wages and all matters of difference.

A meeting of the Toronto postmen will be held to-night to hear the report of the recent delegation to Ottawa.

Heat Claimed Another Victim

MRS. IRA REYNOLDS EXPIRED ON THURSDAY MORNING.

She Fell Into the Arms of Mrs. Charles Forte in Flat on the Corner of Wellington and Princess Streets.

KINGSTON, July 27.—The excessive heat claimed its first victim, when Mrs. Ira Reynolds expired in the third floor of the building at the corner of Wellington and Princess streets, where the C. P. R. ticket office is situated, and above Dr. S. A. Ackroyd's office.

Several days ago she came to live with the two other residents of the flat, Mrs. Charles Forte and Miss Marie Prive, who stated that she had subject to recurring attacks from her heart. They stated that abou eleven o'clock she had begun to dress, when the oppressiveness of the atmosphere proved too much and she called for help.

Just as Mrs. Forte reached her she cried out, "Oh, I'm dying! I'm gone!" She fell into Mrs. Forte's arms unconscious, and had to be removed to a sofa. Corbett's ambulance was summoned and the remains were taken to the morgue for preparation for burial. Dr. Mundell, coroner, viewed the body and pronounced death due to hart failure.

The late Mrs. Reynolds was about thirty-seven years of age and was a native of Odessa. She had been residing in Kingston for the past three years. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Henry Hopkins, Oshawa and Miss Jennie, Kingston and one son, Giddie, Kingston.

A Deluge of Fire is Being Directed At Enemy Concentration Centre, Which is Almost Within Grasp

BRIDGE USELESS

(United Press Service.)
(By Webb Miller.)

PARIS, July 7.—French and American artillery is subjecting the entire Soissons-Rheims salient, with which 400,000 Germans are concentrated, to the most terrific bombardment of the war.

Hundreds of thousands of shells of all calibres are being hurled upon troop concentrations, ammunition and supply depots, and lines of communication, from the battle front to the rearmost areas.

This deluge of fire and steel is being directed particularly at Fere En Tardenois, the important German concentration centre, which is now almost within grasp of the Franco-American troops.

Missy-Sur-Aisne five miles east of Soissons, also is under heavy bombardment rendering practically useless the big Aisne River bridge there, which the Germans have been using for north and south traffic.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, JULY 27TH, 1918.

THE FOURTH ANNIVERSARY.

In view of the near approach of the fourth anniversary of the declaration of war by Great Britain upon Germany, it might be well for the local civic authorities to take action as soon as possible to see that this important event is fittingly celebrated in Peterborough. It is important that the arrangements should not be left until the last moment and that the occasion be made as impressive as possible. An official impetus will be given the event through a Royal proclamation which is shortly to be issued by the Ontario Government, calling upon the people of the province to observe the anniversary. The holding of public meetings and the passing of resolutions showing the determination of the people of Ontario to whole-heartedly support the war will be advised. In the local celebration the Great War Ceterans' Association might be asked to assist.

KEEP UP THE SUPPLY.

The strike among British munition workers has increased the responsibility that rests upon the shoulders of Canadians who are engaged in the manufacture of shells for the allies. Although the warm weather is an incentive to lay off work and take a few days' holidays, the men who are doing their bit in the factory should remember that the inconveniences they are suffering are but a tithe of the hardships daily undergone by the Canadians who are holding the front in France. With a large number of English munition workers idle, Canada must supply the deficiency and all workmen engaged in munitions should remember the message of the Woolwich Arsenal workers and carry on so that they will be able to shake the hand of the soldiers when they come back. The temptation to slacken must not be yielded to— the army must have munitions, and Canada, which supplied a large percentage last year must provide an even bigger contribution this year. The war is being won in the munition factories, as well as on the firing line. The soldier in France is on duty twenty-fours a day and seven days a week. The munition worker is not asked to serve that long but he is urged to see that no moment of his working day is wasted.

SHOULD BE INTERNED.

The freedom that enemy aliens enjoy in Canada is effectively illustrated by the story from Northern Ontario of a group of Austrians employed in a lumber camp who threatened a "grub strike" because the firm proposed to put in force the regulations of the Canada Food Board in regard to public eating places. The food supplied them was ample and wholesome, but because they had to be governed by the same rule observed by every Canadian citizen who has to eat at a restaurant, hotel or boarding house, these enemies calmly proposed to strike. The Dominion Police who investigated the matter settled the difficulty by warning the Austrians that they had better continue at work or they would be interned. A prison camp is too good a place for gentry such as these, who instead of being locked up as they should be, are allowed to work for big wages and then attempt to interfere with the food regulations. These Austrians probably had the idea of helping their comrades who are fighting against the Allies overseas by attempting to defeat the rule laid down by the Food Board to conserve necessary supplies.

THE HOUSING PROBLEM.

The committee selected as a result of Monday night's meeting to investigate the housing problem in Peterborough, has already commenced work and has adopted the business-like course of collecting as much information as possible in regard to conditions. A logical step of writing to manufacturers with a view to their obtaining from their employees information as to the number who might be interested in a scheme to secure houses by paying ten per cent. of the cost down and the balance in monthly instalments over a period of fifteen years, has been adopted. It is hoped that the employees of the different firms will co-operate in this movement so that the committee will have figures as to what may be looked for in Peterborough.

In connection with the collection of information the committee might well consult Mr. T. B. McGrath, whose connection with the Peterborough Workingmen's Building and Loan Association should enable him to be of invaluable assistance in dealing with this important question.

NO HOLIDAY FOR THEM

At a time when the thought of more holidays, shorter hours, and less production for more pay, occupies the minds of so many Canadian workers in war industries, the example of American shipyard workers of the Pacific Coast ought not to be lost upon them. At Vancouver, Washington, in the Standi fer shipyard plant, the men are refusing to take Saturday half-holidays, notwithstanding the official order that during June, July and August the halfholiday be granted. At Portland, Oregon, in the Grant-Smith-Porter shipyard, the men are calling for no half-holiday. In the plant trade organ two of the men write:

"There should be no thought of holidays or half-holidays, no protest against working overtime in the army behind the lines, when army that holds the line fights as long as there is fighting to do."

Another man writes:

"Laying off Saturday afternoon during the present crisis * * * * seems worse than folly — an act that will please the Kaiser immensely. For my part and many others, I would gladly work Saturday evenings for straight pay, or even nothing, to keep the work going."

At the Fulton shipbuilding plant, San Pedro, Cal., the following telegram was sent to Schwab:

"The men in htis yard have voted straight time during June, July, August."

This is the spirit that carries everything before it. After four years of war, weariness by Canadian workers in war industries may not be altogether unnatural, but too many of them are in danger of forgetting that the battle is not yet won, that there is still great need for concentrated effort. The enthusiasm of the American Pacific coast ship-workers should have a lesson for everyone tempted to slacken.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

One of those foundationless rumours telling of the capture of the Crown Prince and of several thousand Germans, was in circulation yesterday. The Crown Prince has been "captured" as many times as Hindenburg has "died."

The people of the United States will have to get along with two pounds of sugar each per month from August 1st to January 1st. Canadian restrictions on sugar are mild alongside of this drastic regulation.

Montreal street car men are talking about going on strike. Life in Canada is just one strike after another.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

For at Least a Decade.

(Kansas City Star)

The enormous drop in the German birth rate is not without its compensation, as the luckiest thing that can happen to a Boche baby is not to be born.

The Real Effect.

(New York World)

The anti-conscription conference in Dublin, which appeals to President Wilson to make the world safe for Ireland, seems to be confused as to the meaning of its language. What it is trying to do is to make Ireland safe for the Germans.

"Servants" in England.

(New York Herald)

In England there has been in the past much laughter over the dislike of the word "servant" in America and over the euphemism "help." But now they are to have in England no more domestic servants, but "household orderlies." In point of brevity and descriptiveness the term "help" is infinitely superior to the newly invented British phrase. But they may be neither orderly nor helpful.

A Cure for All Ills.

(Ottawa Journal)

Hamilton doctor in court declares whisky in quart doses is good for kidney trouble, stomach trouble, indigestion, colds, rheumatism, nerves, neuralgia, summer grippe, debility, and footache. Instead of being a doctor this man should have been press agent for a distillery.

On Second Thought.

(New York Sun.)

When the word was spoken "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her," no one present had the nerve to heave a pebble.

But later several threw a little mud, no doubt.

The End in View.

(Philadelphia Record)

There are times when a nation, like a man, needs a reputation for truthfulness and honor. The allies cannot deal with the statesmen of Berlin and Vienna. They have got to fight until the German and Austrian people throw their lying statesmen overboard, and throw down their arms and ask for peace. The war is a sensible thing for the allies to carry on until that purpose is attained.

HOME OF THE BIG TREES.

Forest Giants In the Sequoia and General Grant National Parks.

The Sequoia and General Grant National parks, the home of the big trees, are situated in Tulare and Fresno counties, Cal., and are celebrated mainly for the great groves of the big trees which are scattered through them. Sequoia National park may be reached from Visalia, thence by way of electric railway to Lemon cove, thence forty miles by stage or private conveyance to Camp Sierra, in the park. General Grant National park can be best reached from Sanger, thence by automobile, stage or private conveyance, a distance of forty-six miles to the park.

The streams and lakes in these parks afford splendid trout fishing, boating and bathing. The waters are all pure and fit to drink. The forests contain the largest, oldest, tallest and most valuable trees in the world. Aside from the giant Sequoia, there are other forests of pine, fir, cedar and many deciduous trees that are truly royal. There are many shrubs, wild flowers, ferns and mosses of superb beauty, while frolicking wild animals and beautiful song birds are another enjoyable feature of the parks.

In four of the groves certain trees within them have been named, while in all other groves they have not. The General Sherman tree was discovered by James Wolverton, a hunter and trapper, on Aug. 7, 1870, at which time he named the tree in honor of General Sherman, under whom he had served during the war. The General Grant tree was named by Mrs. Lucretia P. Baker, who was a member of the party which camped near the tree in August, 1897. This tree has a height of 264 feet and a base diameter of thirty-five feet.

EXPECTATION OF LIFE.

Years One May Count Upon Living at Any Given Age.

No statistics have been calculated with greater care than the tables which give the exact expectation of life for men and women at various ages. These mortality tables are officially accepted by the various states in the United States, and from them the life insurance companies compute their rates of insurance. They are as accurate as the most carefully gathered figures can make them.

At ten years of age the expectation of life is 48.72 years. When one has reached the age of twenty the chances are much improved, and there is still an expectation of 42.20 years before one. At the age of twenty-five the average has improved, and there are still some thirty-nine years ahead.

For the normal man or woman thirty years of age the average length of life is sixty-five years. A person thirty-five years old may count, according to these tables, on thirty-two years more.

As each milestone is passed the prospect brightens. Thus at the age of forty the prospect is for nearly twenty-nine years more, and at forty-five there is an expectation of twenty-five more years.

By the fiftieth year the expectation is about twenty-one years, and in the fifty-fifth year it is nearly eighteen more. A man of sixty may look forward with some confidence to fifteen more years of life, and this increases so that at seventy years the prospect is eight years. On having successfully passed the eightieth year there is an expectation of about five years.—Exchange.

Of Great Price.

The lion had been teased and prodded by an ill conditioned keeper until his patience was quite spent. The enraged beast leaped upon the fellow, knocked him down and fetched him such a blow on the head that his skull was crushed like an eggshell.

"That means the end of you, your majesty," sniggered the jackal in the next cage.

"It would, old night prowler, if I were a mere man," replied the lion, licking a bloody paw, "but you forget that I cost $5,000."

The surviving keepers came, soothed the costly creature with a quarter of fresh beef and hastily removed the body of their comrade from the cage.—New York Post.

Nuts as Food.

A judicious use of nuts has cured cases of indigestion by relieving the constipation which was the cause. Brazils and pine kernels particularly are rich in natural oil which gives warmth, keeps the digestive system clear and does much toward making the skin clear and healthy. Weight for weight nuts contain actually far more proteid than bread. They are a safe food for all who have a tendency toward any form of rheumatism, and they are also beneficial in cases of mental strain and general "nerves."

EASING UP ON NEWSPAPERS

Unsold Papers May Be Returned in the United States.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Interpretation of the War Industries Board's order regulating the sale of newspapers published gives greater latitude to publishers than was at first believed.

Copies of newspapers, for instance, may be returned to publishers by agents provided they have not been disposed of to retailers. Newsboys and other retailers may return copies provided transportation has been too slow for use of the papers. Copies may be sent free to libraries, press associations and correspondents.

The sports costume is made of black and white checked tricot.

The trimmingless frock is the fashionable one of the moment.

Camisole straps are merely strands of pin-and-blue flowers.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 25.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 25.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 25.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 25 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

Describes the Fanatical Government in Moscow

Allied Expedition Has Little to Fear From the Red Guards, Ignatieff Declares—Puts Red Guard at 50,000 and the Bolsheviki at Only 300,000, Obedient to Germany.

BRINGS FIRST-HAND NEWS

NEW YORK, July 27.—Gregory M. Ignatieff, member of the Russian Supply Committee in this country, having just returned from Moscow, declared that he was in a position to testify that the Soviet Government was still pursuing an utterly destructive program which kept the Russian masses at the mercy of Bolshevik fanatics and Red Guards on the one hand, and German junkerdom on the other. Between these two hostile forces, Mr. Ignatieff said, the people would remain prostrate unless immed iate economic and military help is dispatched to Russia by the Allies.

"Before going to Russia on this last trip," Mr. Ignatieff said, "I was disposed to believe that the Bolshevik had really established themselves in power with the consent of the people and that they really did represent the aspirations of the Russian masses. After being there several months and after seeing the Soviet Government in action, however, I concluded that there was no actual government functioning in Russia, and that the Soviet authorities maintained their power, not by popular consent, but through the support of highly paid Red Guards on the one hand, and the German Government on the other.

"While I do not believe that Trotzky and Lenine are paid agents of the German Government, I am convinced that indirectly they are selling Russia out. In other words, they are maintaining themselves in power by doing the bidding of the German Government. They do not have to be paid, because they are fanatics, more or less. But though they are fanatics, they are practical enough to realize that the moment they refuse to comply with any demands Germany may make upon Russia, that moment will see the end of their regime. Hence they dare do nothing but obey and make the Russian masses the victim of German exploitation.

"It is ridiculous to say they have established any Government in Russia. Outside of Petrograd and Moscow, where the Central Soviets are strongly entrenched, the Bolshevist Government does not exist. Every community, of course, has its own Soviet, but these Soviets pay little or no attention to the decrees that emanate from Moscow, unless those decrees meet with their favor. If the Central Soviet has enough Red Guards on the scene it will enforce obedience to its decrees, but in as much as most of the Red Guards are congregated in Petrograd and Moscow the rest of Russia goes along pretty much as it pleases—without organization, without co-ordination, and without system.

CHAOS IS THE RESULT.

"The result, of course, is chaos. While some centres have too much bread, other centres are absolutely starving. The establishment of a bread monopoly by the Soviet authorities confines the distribution of bread to the Government supply institutions, which often as not are absolutely inaccessible to the population and compel many persons to go into the richer provinces for flour. Often a family will send some one of its members on a journey of days to obtain flour from some section of Russia where flour is plentiful.

"Privations in foodstuffs are increased by the utter demoralization of the railroads. Most of the roads are now in charge of groups of conductors, machinists, and laborers, who operate them pretty much as they please. They publish a schedule but make no pretense of conforming with it. A train scheduled to leave at 8 p.m. will leave at 2 a.m., depending entirely upon the mood of the engineer."

Asked whether the Soviet Government had as yet launched any movement toward political and economic reconstruction of the country, Mr. Ignatieff replied:

"Their whole policy now is to break up all institutions inherited from the old regime. They have created absolutely nothing in the place of the institutions and systems which they have destroyed. Further than this persistent method of disintegration and destruction there is no work being done in Russia. One reason for this lack of constructive effort is that the brains of the country, being confined largely to the intelligentzia and the bourgeoise, are not permitted to participate in the Soviet Government. What is left to rule Russia is an element that is largely foreign to the Russian people, fanatics, German propagandists and the Red Guards.

"Among the Red Guards are thousands of secret service agents of the Czaristic regime—men who have been used by the old regime as one of the most destructive weapons against revolutionary or democratic movements. Now they are in full power as the champions of Bolshevism as illustrated by the fact that Muravief one of the most notorious and criminal leaders of the Secret Puuuuuu under the old regime is now command er-in-chief of one of the Bolshevist armies in the south of Russia."

SUMMER COMPLAINT

CAUSES MANY DEATHS AMONG INFANTS

If every mother would keep on hand, during the hot season, a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, she would be saved a great deal of anxiety and her baby a great deal of pain.

Hundreds of infants are carried off annually through neglect of this simple precaution. There is no remedy so safe and effectual for the cramps and pains in the stomach, cholera infantum, the diarrhoea of teething children, and none which has saved so many babies' lives during the past seventy-two years it has been on the market.

Mrs. C. W. Cooper, Collingwood, Ont., writes: "When my little boy was four months old he had a very bad attack of summer complaint. Nothing seemed to do him any good that was prescribed by the doctor. He got steadily worse until we thought we would lose him. One day a friend, with children of his own, asked me if I had ever used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I at once got a bottle, but with no hopes of it doing any good, as so much else had failed, but to my surprise and wonder, I soon saw a change in baby, much to my great relief, and we soon had him well again.

I now keep it in the house all the time, and when the children show any signs of diarrhoea it never fails to check the attack."

There are many substitutes for "Dr. Fowler's" on the market. Don't accept any of them. Get the genuine put up by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price, 35c.

The HOME CIRCLE

SOMETHING TO LIVE FOR.

Chauncey M. Depew observed his eighty-fourth birth anniversary recently. One of our exchanges says that the Montauk Club of Brooklyn, as has been its custom for 27 years, tendered Mr. Depew a banquet.

In his address at the banquet Mr. Depew said among other things:

"There is nothing that prolongs life more than having an object to live for. This affects the will and it is the common experience of doctors that the will is the greatest enemy of death. The mother is pronounced hopeless but she says, "I will live until my son returns." Against all the predictions of her medical advisers, that son circles the globe and arrives in time to receive the blessing. The proof of it was the will power that sustained this mother, is that she rarely lives an hour after the purpose for which she made this tremendous exertion has been accomplished."

The sentiment of the New York statesman and orator is as true as gospel. The man or woman who has a well defined object in life passes over little obstacles without even seeing them. The man who keeps his eyes set on one big aim cannot see little bumps and ruts. He who has ambitions that are great, and has them constantly in mind, makes his appetites and pleasures and exercises and eating and drinking subservient to these ambitions—and the busy man with an ambition will outlive by many months or years the lazy being who has no object in life except to exist by following the course of least resistance.

Have an object in life. You will not only enjoy life more as you are living it, but you will have more years added in which to enjoy the good things.

Scolding and nagging never mended anything. They have ruined the peace of unnumbered families.

There are a thousand ways of making other people happy and you have only to look about to find them.

If a man dares to live within his means and is resolute in his purpose not to appear more than he really is, let him be applauded. There is something fresh and rare in such an example.

If you would gather up all tender memories, all the lights and shades of the heart, all banquetings and reunions, all filial fraternal and paternal and conjugal affections, and you had only just four letters with which to spell out the height and depth and length and breadth and magnitude and eternity of meaning, you would with streaming eyes, and trembling voice and agitated hand, write it out in these four living capitals, H-O-M-E.

Girls, listen to your mothers; you will never regret it. No matter what your advantages are above what hers were, you are no better. You can rest assured that it is no book learning or knowledge of fashion that will keep your feet away from the many pitfalls that she can warn you from, in a tender, loving fashion, that you would do well to heed. No matter how mothers may speak you may rest assured that their hearts are in the right place and that they want their daughters to be innocent and good, rather than fashionable.

Be neighbourly, be obliging, be kind and courteous, and then when sorrow and sickness come you will have sympathy and help.

Let a child feel you are displeased not at him, but at the sin he commits. Can an angry parent do this?

People who make mistakes are those who quarrel with one another before their children; or who allow the later to grow up in idleness; those who talk about their troubles before strangers; the father who tells his children to go the way he does not go himself, and the young woman who does not make a confidant of her mother.

Let us take the time to be pleasant. The small courtesies which we often omit because they are small, will some day look larger to us than the wealth that we covet or the fame for which we struggled.

Don't forget mother when the picnics and good times are in order. Do not let her do all the hard work. And boys, treat her to some fresh air every day behind that newly broken colt.

The best way to keep the boys at home is to make it an object for them not to go out to seek amusements, for these they will have. Every farm home ought to be made a very heaven on earth to its inmates.

If all the members of a family were as courteous and kind to each other as they are to strangers, what a difference it would make in the home atmosphere.

A cheerful countenance is a duty we owe to our neighbours and how much more is it necessary in the home! Our friends can get out of the way if we are not good companions but our family cannot. They are helpless victims, shut up in the same house with us. For the sake of the children, for the sake of the elders, for the sake of all humanity, let us cultivate a pleasant smile, a hearty laugh and a habit of cheerfulness.

Details of the guarantees surrounding 1918-1919 wheat harvest in Australia also were transmitted. The Australian Government has guaranteed 83 cents per bushel, and to this the commission has added 12 cents, making the price 95 cents to the producer.

MANUFACTURE OF WINE IN ONTARIO MAY BE RESTRICTED

Grape Growers Anxious—Ontario License Board Have Heard Nothing of Restriction, But Word May Come From Ottawa.

THE OLD-FASHIONED BEVERAGES

Grape growers and manufacturers of native wine are beginning to worry over whether the Government is going to stop the manufacture of native wines before December 31st, 1918, and when they are going to prohibit the sale of native wines in the province.

This is causing them grave concern, as the grape harvest will soon be on, and they want to know "just where they're at" before purchasing the grapes and continuing the manufacture of wine to the end of the year.

Rumours have reached the city that the Government at Ottawa may decide to pass an order-in-Council prohibiting the manufacture before the grape harvest is garnered and the manufacturers as well as the growers are on the anxious seat.

Order Permits Manufacture.

In the last order-in-Council, passed on March 11th, 1918, when the largest portion of the Dominion went practically dry, appears the following clause:

"Providing that the sale of intoxicating liquor or any class for beverage purposes is permitted in any province this regulation shall not apply to the manufacture of such intoxicating liquor in such province until 31st of December, 1918."

The Ontario Temperance Act of 1916 allowed the sale of native wines in the province, but regulated and restricted the sale to nothing fewer than a dozen bottles of not less than three pints, or a five-gallon cask.

Heard Nothing of Rumour.

Chairman J. D. Flavelle, of the Ontario License Board, stated that he didn't think there was any chance whatever of the time limit for manufacturing the wines being reduced.

"Nothing whatever will be done as far as this board is concerned," said he. "They can manufacture till December 31. Of course, I can't say that Ottawa will not interfere, but I have not heard a word of it."

"When will the sale of the wines be stopped?"

"Probably at the end of the year, but I can't say for certain."

No Time Limit For Sale.

The trouble is, however, that no time limit was set in the Ontario Temperance Act when it was first passed, or even with the later amendments, for the sale of the wine. The Ontario Government cannot very well do anything till the next session of the Legislature, and, apparently, if the sale is to be stopped at the end of this year, an order-in-Council will be necessary from Ottawa.

September 16th, 1916, was the day when the province of Ontario went partially dry. That is to say, the hotels could not there after sell any intoxicating liquors over the bars, nor could the liquor shops do business.

The next act on the programme was the order-in-Council of March 11th, 1918, which prohibited the importing from one province to another of intoxicating drinks, and stopped the importing of liquors into Canada.

One thing that can still be done is for the resident in Ontario to ship from his city house to his country house any liquor he may have, provided both places are within the province, and the place to which it is being shipped is a legal place to have it.

Still, native wines could be manufactured and sold in Ontario, although the strength of these wines might be anywhere from 12 to 15 per cent. These also can be shipped out of the province, although the Ontario License Board have the powers for regulating the sale.

These Must Be Under 2 1-2.

It is not generally known, but many citizens of Ontario are unintentionally breaking the Ontario Temperance Act. Many who had their liquor cut off suddenly turned to some other beverage, and the old-fashioned dandelion wine, home-made grape wine, elderberry wine, and the famous rhubarb wine became very popular. This was made with the honest intention of keeping within the law, but unless the wine made was of less than 2 1-2 per cent. alcohol the law was broken.

"Now very little of that wine is less than 2 1-2 per cent," said Commissioner Smith. "It is fermented when the sugar is put in, and becomes stronger."

Whether there will be any prosecutions in these cases is a matter that has not been decided on at present, but it is not likely that such drastic action will be taken unless the wines are made for sale.

The manufacture of wines of over 2 1-2 per cent. is allowed only by those who receive permits from the Ontario License Board, and these permits are not given except to bona fide manufacturers.

The embryo Town soon gave indication of progress. In a letter written by Lieut. Rubidge, R.N., then a resident in the Township of Otonabee, in North America, published in 1829, occur these passages: "A Town is growing up near me, roads are improving, bridges are built; one of the best mills in the Province is just finished at Peterborough, and another within three miles of me. Boards, and all description of lumber, are cheap, about five dollars for 1,000 feet, four saw mills being in operation. Stores, a tannery, distillery, and many useful businesses, are established or on the eve of being so at Peterborough." * * * "I was the first settler in the Township of Otonabee, and almost before a tree was cut down; now there are nearly two thousand acres cleared, and 125 families, consisting of 500 souls, On parrallel lines, at the distance of three quarters of a mile apart, roads, of from 33 to 66 feet wide, are cut and cleared out by the parties owning the land all through the Township." * * * "This last winter nearly 5,000 bushels of wheat have been taken in by store keepers at Peterborough alone. Only three or four years ago flour was transported back there, so that no doubt can exist of the increased quantity a few years will produce. Through the goodness and paternal consideration of His Excellency, Sir Peregrine Maitland, an excellent mill has been erected at Peterborough, which is the greatest blessing to the settlers and the country, and will be the means of the adjacent townships filling up rapidly. In the Town itself, which, less than three years ago, had but one solitary house in it, now may be seen frame Houses in every direction and this summer twenty additional ones will be erected."

Such was Peterborough and its vicinity in 1828 ,ten years after the first settlement by the Cumberland Emigrants, and within three years of the Irish Immigration under Mr. Robinson. Pass we now over another period of ten years, during which the rising Town and the now become flourishing Townships had progressed most favourably. Referring to a pamphlet published by Lieut. Rubidge, R. N., and intended for the information of intending Emigrants, we have an account of the Town and country around it 1838. Speakng of the rapid progress of Towns in Canada, our pamphleteer says: "Peterborough especially is an instance of this. In 1826, it contained but one solitary dwelling; now, in 1838, may be seen and handsome, inhabited by about fifteen hundred persons, a very neat stone church capable of accommodating 800 or 900 persons; a Presbyterian Church of stone, two dissenting places of worship, and a Roman Catholic Church in progress. The Town has in or near it, two grist and seven saw mills, five distilleries, two breweries, two tanneries, eighteen or twenty shops called stores, carriage, sleigh, waggon, chair, harness, and cabinet makers, and most of the useful trades. Stages run all the year, bringing mails five times a week; and steamboats, while the navigation is open; there is one good tavern (White's), and two inferior ones. Families now find houses of any size to suit them at moderate rents. The roads in this neighborhood are being greatly improved." * * * "On the Rice Lake two steamboats, the Sir Francis Head and the Northumberland, ply during the season. The sum of £94,000 was granted in the winter of 1836, and 1837, by the Provincial Legislature, for theimprovement of the navigation of the River Trent, and the works at the Upper and Lower Sections have been put in progress." * * * "The country along the entire route is settling fast, particularly the fine Townships of Seymour, Otonabee, Monaghan, Cavan, Douro, Smith, Percy, Asphodel, Ops, Emily, Ennismore, Verulam, Fenelon, Bexley, Sommerville, and Harvey. At Fenelon Falls, which are sixteen feet high, on a smaller scale like the Horse-shoe fall of Niagara, there is a large establishment of mills; and here, and in the townships bordering on the superb chain of Lakes, forming the inland communication, and connected with the Trent and Otonabee Rivers, are settled a great number of young men, sons of good families in the United Kingdom." The export of wheat alone from the Townships north of Rice Lake, about 5,000 bushels in 1827, had reached 150,000 bushels in 1838; furnishing a most incontestible proof of the rapid progress of the country.

Peterboro Girls Learn to Swim

Operation of Y.W.C.A. Swimming Pool is a Success.

Swimming is the one live topic at the Y.W.C.A. to-day, it is the all-important theme. "That kick," "the arm stroke," "the long drift" are up for discussion every time two girls meet. How Marie swam across the pool at the end of her first lesson without any wings, how Isabel tried to swallow half the tank in one gulp, how Ida was scared to take one foot off the bottom, and how Maggie could not make hers stay there, and a thousand and one other details are topics of great interest.

Many of the girls who had never attempted to swim before have acquired the art in the New Swimming Pool. The more timid girls and those who have difficulty in "getting" the proper movements are kept on the water-wings. The Life-saving class for swimmers is popular both to the members and the onlookers.

The water in the pool is always fresh. The temperature of the water is controlled by constant circulation from the pool into the boiler and into the pool again. Daily more than a foot of water is drawn from the pool and fresh water put in. Once a week the pool is emptied and thoroughly cleaned, the beautifully tiled lining of the pool making this operation very simple.

The public are invited to come and watch the swimmers at any time, in the gallery which is intended for spectators, and which is usually occupied.

DENIES CHARGE OF SPY.

Former Mayor of Sheffield However, Tried to Get Information for Berlin Associates.

LONDON, July 27.—Giving testimony in his own behalf in the Old Bailey Court, Sir Joseph Jonas, former Lord Mayor of Sheffield, who is charged together with Charles Alfred Vernon, a former employe in the Ministry of Munitions, of conspiring to contravene the Official Secret Act by obtaining and communicating information that might be useful to the enemy, said he had been told by business associates in Berlin in 1913 of the intention of a British firm to manufacture rifles. He was asked what number of rifles the British firm intended to turn out, and said in these circumstances he wrote a letter to Vernon asking for the information on which the charge against him is based.

Sir Joseph emphatically denied that he was a party to a conspiracy to commit acts prejudicial to his country.

On the advice of the judge sitting at the trial the jury returned a verdic of not guilty against Carl Hahn, another of the defendants in the case.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

THIRTY-THREE GIRLS HOLD POSITIONS IN LOCAL BANKS

The Bank Managers Express Satisfaction With the Service Rendered by the Girls—Peterboro Girls Have Steered Clear of Farm Work.

TELEGRAPHY CLAIMS A COUPLE

In the various fields that women have entered in the city since the war, banking has claimed perhaps more girls than any other line of activity. Up to date thirty-three have positions in the seven local banks and of seven managers asked what they think of banking as a future, all practically agreed there is most certainly a brght outlook, not for all, but for some who have entered.

BANK OF MONTREAL.

The Bank of Montreal has eight girls at present on the staff with seven men and Mr. C. C. Abbott expressed himself as eminently satisfied with the work done by the girls and is a firm believer in their ability to reach the higher positions. Mr. W. H. Dunford has in the Bank of Commerce five girls, Mr. Eastwood in the Royal Bank five, Mr. E. J. H. Vanstone in the Toronto Bank five, Mr. A. F. Knight in the Bank of Ottawa three, Mr. E. H. Pennyfather in the Union three, Mr. J. W. Fraser in the Nova Scotia, one, Mr. J. Crane in the Dominion three.

SPLENDID AT CLERICAL WORK.

While all the managers agreed that the girls are good at clerical work, conscientious and that there is no counter work they are not capable of doing, some doubt as to their physical ability to hold the higher position is expressed and it is felt that many years will elapse before their executive ability is developed sufficiently to hold them. Mr. Vanstone said that while some may be able, mentally to take the positions beyond tellership the physical strain is tremendous and the men in the bank find it necessary to turn in to take some of the heavier night work off the girl's shoulders. Mr. Eastwood said that he is satisfied that the girls are fairly efficient in the work as far as they are capable, but they are more inclined to lose time and take days off duty. They, in his opinion will never reach managership and only the exceptional ones will become a teller and that in a small town. The physical effort is too much to expect from women.

PRINCIPAL BAR

The principal bar to the rise of the woman banker is the fact that the line of continuity is broken. After years of faithful service in the bank a girl who has reached a fairly good position may come to the momentous decision of a home of her own or her business. The natural choice will inevitably be taken and the trusted clerk is lost. Again Mr. Fraser said a man hesitates more or less in business dealings with women: Natural chivalry of the British race will restrain him from dealing with a woman, the same way as with a man and there is always the possibility of a woman taking advantage of her sex and getting ahead of him.

BAD PAPER.

Mr. Eastwood in speaking of the possibility of men trying to "put it over" a woman clerk in passing a bad cheque said that this is not a difficulty which the bank has as yet had to contend with and that the girls make few mistakes. The managers are satisfied with the quiet and suitable clothes the girls have chosen to come to business.

GIRL TELEGRAPH OPERATOR.

Girls in the city have not as yet entered enthusiastically into the position of telegraph operators and as yet only one girl holds that position in the uptown C.P.R. office, and she is giving satisfaction. In the freight sheds girls have taken several positions as shipping clerks and are holding their own in this branch.

Mr. Bert Boomer in the G. N. W. is rather surprised that girls have not taken to telegraphy to any great extent and feels confident they would make good. In his own office he has as yet only male clerks. At the Matthews-Blackwell the position of operator is held by a girl who is giving complete satisfaction.

ON THE FARM.

MAY CURTAIL SUGAR RATION FOR DOMINION

Food Board Expected to Follow Lead of United States.

Ottawa, July 27. — It is expected that the Canada Food Board will put into effect regulations governing the use of sugar in the Dominion similar to those adopted in the United States. In the States the sugar rations in households have been cut from August 1 to January 1 to two pounds per person per month. The two pound limit includes all sugar used on the table and in cooking.

The question of sugar has given the Food Administrations of the two countries a great deal of worry during the past few months. A number of causes have contributed to make the sugar position more difficult than was anticipated earlier in the year. The increased shipping required to transport soldiers and to provide for their needs has necessitated the curtailment of sugar transportation, particularly from long voyages, and has thus reduced supplies both to the Allies in Europe and to the people of North America from remote markets. Some of the accessible sugar-producing areas have produced a lesser yield than was anticipated, such as certain of the West Indian islands. The sugar beet crop in the United States has fallen below anticipation. In addition in the spring advances of the Germans, a number of beet sugar factories in France were captured and destroyed. Early in June, German submarine activities off the Atlantic coast resulted in the loss of over thirteen thousand tons of sugar from Cuba and Porto Rico.

Despite all these considerations, ther is expected to be sufficient sugar for all preserving needs, owing to the curtailment by the people of Canada of the extravagant use of sugar. The regulations of the Canada Food Board have already resulted in a big saving. During May, June and August, candy manufacturers have had their monthly allowances cut to 50 per cent. of the average monthly quantity of sugar cane used in 1917. If at the end of August the situation demands it, these regulations will be continued, or made even more strict. The use of cane sugar for private consumption has been prohibited and the use of sugar in public eating places regulated. Manufacturers of biscuits and cakes have been limited in the amount of sugar they may use to a barrel of flour. Sugar icing on bakery products has also been prohibited. The amount of sugar used in the manufacture of ice cream is also restricted. These regulations have bene fully as effective as was expected, but further restrictions are under consideration by the Food Board.

13 TRIPS TO GERMANY LADY CREATES SENSATION

PARIS ,July 27.—The trial of Louis J. Malvy, former Minister of the Interior, which had become an interminable squabble among the officials of the prefecture, the police and the detective service relative to responsibility for certain acts done or left undone, woke into a new life when an elegantly but simply dressed lady took the stand. A large hat concealed her face and her name was given as Madame le Brun. She testified she had made thirteen trips to Germany, where she had been entrusted with missions in France, although she was really in the service of the French general headquarters.

A German lieutenant, the witness said, told me 'We have in the French Government a person who has belonged to us for many years.' When I reported this in France I was told that it was useless to search for further information in this matter, but on my next trip to Germany I asked the name of this person and the German officer replied: 'He is too highly placed, I fear too much for you and him.' "CRIMINAL LUNACY" OF SINN FEINERS

Older Irish Priests Score Unruly Faction as Ireland's Worst Foe.

Dublin, July 27. — Some of the older Irish priests, particularly in the County of Wexford, have been speaking out strongly against the Sinn Feiners. Very Rev. Canon Walsh, presiding at a meeting of the Crossabeg and Bally Murn branch, of the United Irish League, said that the prospect before Ireland was a gloomy one, as the "criminal lunacy of Sinn Fein was turning all Ireland's friends against her. By insulting and trampling on the American flag, and cheering for Emperor William, he said the "unruly Sinn Fein faction was turning the French republic, the American nation and the English democracy into bitter enemies of Ireland."

Rather than gain independence for Ireland, they were more likely to gain twenty years of coercion and martial law, if any general support were accorded by Irishmen to the antics of the miserable faction, whose record, said Canon Welsh so far was one of dissension, disruption and disaster.

The democracy of Ireland, he continued, was favorably disposed toward Irishmen, and was willing to do them justice, but they would never consent to the sheer lunacy of total separation. Until the evil spirit of Sinn Fein was banished from the land, Ireland would labour under the yoke of oppression.

The Story of the Stairs

Every time you go up stairs you can test your state of health — the condition of your blood.

Do you arrive at the top of the stairs breathless and distressed? Does your heart palpitate violently? Do you have a pain in your side? Perhaps you even have to stop half way up, with limbs trembling and head dizzy, too exhausted to go further without resting. These are unfailing signs of anaemia. As soon as your blood becomes impoverished or impure the stair-case gecomes an instrument of torture. When this is so you are unfit for work; your blood is watry and your nerves exhausted, you are losing the joy of an active life and paving the way for a further break down and decline. In this condition only one thing can save you. You must put new, rich, red blood into your veins without further delay and so build up your health anew. To get this new, rich, blood give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, and they will give you new vitality, sound health, and the power to resist and throw off disease. For more than a generation this favourite medicine has been in use throughout the world and has made many thousands of weak, despondent men and women bright, active and strong.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Court Holds Up Divorce Evidence George W. Young Got for Daughter

Mrs. Roy Atwell's Case Against Canadian Is Sent Back to Referee

NEW YORK, July 27.—All of the romantic glitter woven about the marriage five years ago of the Miss Dorothy Young, daughter of George W. Young, banker, to Roy Atwell, comic opera comedian and playwright, has tarnished for the couple. Their disrupted relations were revealed when Justice Ottinger, of the Supreme Court, refused to confirm a referee's report recommending a decree of divorce for Mrs. Atwell. He remitted the report to C. Sommerich, referee, directing further proof be established showing the divorce was not being procured through arrangement.

Since their estrangement last September, Mrs. Atwell has made her home with Mr. Young, at No. 534 Fifth Avenue. She is well known in musical and society circles in this country and Europe, having been the constant companion of her stepmother, the late Mme. Lillian Nordica. Mr. Atwell is now touring the canonments with "Here Comes the Bride," a product of his own pen.

Sensational was the denouement which led Mrs. Atwell to sue for her freedom. On the night of November 2, last while Mr. Young was entertaining friends at dinner in the Holland House detectives informed him that his son-inllaw had been seen entering his home, at No. 10 East Thirty-third street, with a woman other than Mrs. Atwell. The banker invited his friends to join a raiding party, and they joyfully entered upon the enterprise.

Previously the banker had obtained a key to the apartments, and there the raiding party saw Mr. Atwell and the correspondent, according to Mr. Young's testimony, clad en deshabille.

"Roy, I have got you at last," explained the banker.

"I'm sorry for it," the comedian is said to have replied.

With Mr. Young were John R. Tennant, an official of the Commercial Trust Company in Jersey City; whose names were not learned. Mr. Tennant and Mr. Miggins substantiated the story told by Mr. Young.

William Ferns and James T. Hagen, detective, told of trailing Mr. Atwell on the evening of the raid and notified Mr. Young of the woman's presence in the defendant's home. Mrs. Cora A. Tucker and G. Blair Frazer, friends of the couple testified Mr. Atwell told them his love for his wife had cooled and mentioned the transfer of his affections to another.

In demanding alimony of $50 a week Mrs. Atwell said her husband's income was $15,000 a year, and further testimony by theatrical men along similar lines impelled the referee to approve of the allowance. E. Romaine of the Shuberts, said the actor's earnings varied fro 250 to $300 Hollis Cooley, member of the Commission on Training Camp Activities testified that Mr. Atwell contracted on March 16 last to our he military camps with his production for $200 a week.

Two charges of miconduct were made by the plaintiff, but of the first, said to have occurred in a house in Madison avenue. Referee Sommerich reported there was no evidence to substantiate the allegations.

The couple were married February 21, 1913, after an elopement to Greenwich, Conn. When Mr. Young learned of the marriage he chided bith for not having a more elaborate affair in his home.

Mr. Atwell was twice married, his first wife, Blanche West, having divorced him in 1911.

THE PUBLIC MUST PAY THE INCREASED FREIGHT RATES

Widespread Indignation in Commercial Circles Over Twenty Per Cent Increase—"Crying Shame," Declares Traffic Manager T. Marshall of the Board of Trade.

OTTAWA, July 27.—Acting on a report prepared by the Board of Railway Commissioners, an order-in-Council has been passed increasing freight rates to an amount sufficient to meet the increased operating cost imposed on the railways by the new wage schedule. The increase will average about 20 per cent.

The freight rate increases are the direct outcome of the acceptance in Canada of the McAdoo award, which applies to both Government railways and railways owned by private companies.

The increase granted cannot add anything to the net revenues of the companies. It may fall short of meeting the increase expenses. The increased operating cost entailed by applying the McAdoo ward is some $53,000,000, and in 1917, when the Canadian railways probably earned the highest rates in their history, the gross freight eanings amounted to but some $215,000,000. The Govenment has ordered the Board of Railway Commissioners to check each month the operations of Canada's three main roads, the Canadian Pacific, the Grand Trunk, and the Canadian Northern, so that if it is found that any increase is unnecessary it may be promptly reduced to the proper figure. The board is also ordered to make a monthly report to the Cabinet covering the operation of the new tariff.

New Rates at a Glance.

100 pounds.	Present rate	New rate.
Sugar, Montreal	18½c	25c
Butter, average haul	22c	27c
Flour, Winnipeg	35c	42c
Tea, Vancouver	110c	132c

Increase For Railways.

In 1916	5 per cent.
In 1918	15 per cent.
New increase	20 per cent.
Total since 1916	40 per cent.

There is widespread indignation in the commercial circles over the announcement from Ottawa of an increase in freight rates which amounts to approximately twenty per cent. over all.

"Putting the matter humanly and in a few words I think that it is a crying shame the way this has been done," declared Mr. T. Marshall, the traffic expert of the Toronto Board of Trade. "I think that Sir Henry Drayton might have had the decency at least to hold a session over the matter.

Consumers Must Pay.

"Ultimately, of course, the consumers must pay. The surprising part of it all is that apparently its report on the situation has evidently not taken the shipping public or the general public into consideration at all" he said.

In regard to the need for increased earnings by the railway companies Mr. Marshall said the conditions in Canada and the United States are not the same on account of the higher freight rating in Canada, so that proportionately the 20 per cent. increase granted in Canada may be found to be greater than the 25 per cent. increase which was granted in the United States.

"It is reported in Washington that they have found there that the 25 per cent. increase was too great. The conditions in Canada and in the United States are different also in another particular. If the railways of the United States are charging too much they are making revenues for the Government which is the people themselves, but the Canadian railways are private corporations and are being helped to make money."

Traders Take Advantage.

The point of view of the freight officials of the railways is that the increase is not large to the general public when spread over a large number of sales and that it means a lot to the railway companies, in fact all the difference between paying and not paying.

A freight official, discussing the situation yesterday, said that if the trades do not place an exorbitant sum on the goods which they have to sell, caling it freight rates increase, the general public will not notice the increase.

"Can you figure seven cents on a hundred pounds of sugar, when it is sold by the pound?" he asked. "The trouble is that the grocer will charge one cent on every pound and increase, the added cost from seven cents to one hundred cents."

WEALTHY RUG MAN SLAIN; YOUTH SHOT IN FIFTH AVENUE

Armenian Porter, Just Discharged, Kills Gullabi Gulbenkian and Escapes.

NEW YORK, 27.—Gullabi Gulbenkian, a wealthy rug merchant, was shot dead and his nephew, Serope, was wounded seriously in their store at No. 225 Fifth avenue by a discharged porter in his frenzy over losing his place. The murderer escaped after a thrilling chase.

Members of the firm, among the largest in the city, had been troubled for a long time by their American porter. He had been long in the company's service and could not understand why his employers wished to be rid of him. Rather than discharge him, Mr. Gulbenkian gave the porter of his salary on condition that he would remain away from the store.

But his work had become second nature to the porter and he was terrified trying to find work elsewhere. Time after time he returned and demanded his "rights." There were many quarrels. He was ordered away and told he would be paid, but that he did not satisfy him. When he had work he would not attend to his duties and because arrogant.

Renews Old Quarrel.

Returning, the man renewed his quarrel.

"If you do not want me here I will go, but you will have to give me a letter or reference!" he shouted.

Mr. Gulbenkian consented and the letter of reference!" he shouted. quiet for a little. The letter and $20 were given him. He looked at both in amazement and became excited. Then he went about the store shaking hands with employes whom he had known for years.

At last he came to Mr. Gulbenkian head of the firm. As he reached out as if to shake the proffered hand of his old employe the porter pulled a revolver from his pocket and fired.

One bullet went into Mr. Gulbenkian's head and he fell. Another shot entered his heart. He died almost instantly.

The nephew, Serope, also a member of the firm, leaped upon the porter. They fought desperately. In the struggle and before others could reach them a bullet was sent into Serope's abdomen. He was taken to the New York Hospital, where it was found his condition was critical.

Fit to Rage Passes.

Overcome by other employes, the porter instantly became calm. He appeared to be satisfied with his work. He said he would remain quietly in the store until the police arrived. But while the call for the police was being sent, the porter made a dash for a rear door. He knew the premises thoroughly. In a few seconds he had disappeared. Detectives and police searched the vicinity and could find no trace of the murderer, after looking through packing rooms and big cases, storerooms, roofs and fire escapes.

The members of the rug firm, know as Gillabi Gulbenkian & Co., are the three brothers and the nephew. Their knowledge of fine Oriental rugs and their enterprise has placed them among the largest dealers in their line in this country. Their stock at present is valued at more than $1,000,000. It is reported that since the war began the firm has contributed several millions for the erection of hospitals in Constantinople for the care of Armenian sufferers.

Mr. Gulbenkian is fifty-four years of age and the wounded nephew is thirty-one. The dead man resided with his brothers and nephew at No. 203 Corlear, avenue, Pelham.

TOURIST TRAFFIC

The volume of tourist traffic from the United States this year has been considerably lessened by misleading press dispatches appearing in American and Canadian papers regarding the Canadian Registration Act. It was unwarranably stated that visitors to Canada from the United States would be compelled to register at a post office before they could secure accommodation at a hotel, that passports were absolutely necessary, and more recently the absurd rumor was widely circulated that women from the United States would not be allowed to return home. This latter ridiculous report is specifically denied by Mr. W. D. Scott, Superintendent of Immigration, who officially designated it as "absolutely without any foundation in fact." Senator Gideon Robertson, a member of the Dominion Cabinet, and Chairman of the Registration Board, is equally positive in his denials of the other mischievous reports. The actual facts are, according to the official statement of the Registration Board, that the Registration Act applies only to people permanently resident in Canada and does not affect even remotely anyone living in the United States; that no registration at a post office is necessary, and that no passports are required. The possession of papers showing the holders to be American citizens is all that is necessary to cross into Canada. At the international boundary line the holders of these papers are given an identification card by the Canadian Immigration Officials, which enables the visitors to travel freely where they wish without any interference on the part of Canadian officials.

Senator Robertson, Chairman of the Registration Board, has announced that "neither in the instructions issued, nor the regulations for Canadian registration is there anything that would indicate desire or intention to impose restrictions upon Americans or aliens, entering, travelling in, or leaving Canada."

The experience of those American visitors who have already come to Canada verifies Senator Robertson's statement, but unfortunately there are many across the border who have not read this announcement, and may still be influenced by the false reports to stay at home, spoil their vacation, and cause a mutual loss to themselves and to Canada.

Don't expect a soft answer when you call a man hard names.

A Phase of the Housing Problem

If the discussion arising out of the reported scarcity of houses should have the effect of dragging the few miserable old shacks into the limelight and of resolving the public's pride into a determination that the worst of them must go, it will effect an improvement that is perhaps not contemplated in the present movement.

A few years ago when Mr. C. A. G. Spence was sanitary inspector, he urged that some of the most dilapidated of these old houses be condemned, doubtless in the hope that if they were once declared unfit for habitation they would be demolished and replaced by dwellings worthy of a city of Peterborough's size and youth. But this proposal found the public indifferent and the authorities indulgent. Then, as now, any old tumbledown affair with a roof, no matter how open to the sky, passed as a house, and was rarely unoccupied. When some of their weaker and time-worn props began to give way they were jacked up and another lease of life and rent secured. This summer the C.G.E. Company did the south end a favour when it bought up five or six houses on Albert street, for the future extension of their shops. Two of them were torn down, the best one of them was dragged away to another site, and at least two others that were full of years, etcetera were bolstered up again for the public's benefit.

There are other shacks throughout the city that should be oslerized at once. It must be a problem for the assessor to estimate their value for taxation, but if the city had an effective plan of getting rid of them their owners could make the figures tell a different story. The improvement other cities have accomplished in wiping out their ugly old wrecks, Peterborough should be able to do, but it is almost too much to expect that the city beautiful, to use a pet phrase of idealists, will be achieved by any radical scheme to uproot the old eyesores.

Property is sacred, and, in the realm of real estate, sentiment and reverence for age are deep rooted.

It is obvious that time-worn shacks are a detriment to any community. They are perhaps included in the poetic allusion of the humble dwellings of the poor. These, nowever, are not dwellings. They may have been so regarded a generation ago. To-day, self-respecting poor scorn to use them, but somehow they find tenants whom inevitably they thrust further down the social scale.

It is said, in discussions on the effects of the war, that it has brought to light public responsibilities that have been too long obscured. Decent housing is surely one of them, and the least that can be attempted in this direction is to rid the community of old unsanitary shacks in which decent living conditions are impossible.

If the socialized state, the German idea, is to be rejected, then triumphant democracy must find some substitute to safeguard the rights and the well-being of all the people, especially those who would be most dependent upon any modified "paternalism." Such citizens have born their share of the sacrifice of war; they should benefit in the new fruits of peace, of which an awakening to the needs of the individual promises a new order of things. Lest the lesson of the war be quickly forgotten at its termination a beginning of the demolition of rotting old shacks should be made now. The state has discovered anew the value of its citizens, and it must realize that ideas of good citizenship are not reared in some of the dilapidated houses, hovels almost, that could be pointed out right here in Peterborough. Fortunately they are few, but they should be wiped out to the very last one.

A woman can't see how it is possible to lose in a game of chance.

Any man who is dead in love with himself should be buried in oblivion.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SPEAKING OF LONG GAMES

Longest League Game Ever Played Went Twenty-six Innings.

The other day Chicago won the longest game of the season from Philadelphia by the score of 2 to 1 in the twenty-first inning. It was a thrilling pitcher's battle between Tyler of the Cubs and "Mule" Watson of the Phillies, and came within one inning of the record performance in the National League. Last year Brooklyn beat Pittsburg 6 to 5 in a game that lasted twenty-two innings.

The next day Chicago lost to Brooklyn after sixteen innings. Two games, thirty-seven innings.

All extra innings struggles are thrilling—and never fail to hold the fans in breathless suspense until the end—no matter the hour.

Strangely a member of the Brooklyn team in this game was Jack Coombs, who, as a member of the Athletics in 1916, pitched and won the longest game ever played in the big league, when the Athletics beat the Red Sox 4 to 1 after twenty-four innings. This game lasted four hours and forty-seven minutes.

Passed Up a Chance for $1,000

Story Redounds to Credit of New York Lightweight.

A story that redounds to the chedit of Willie Jackson, the New York lightweight, is now going the rounds in New York and Philadelphia. It is to the effect that Willie passed up a chance for $1000 to keep a date with Benny Leonard for the war camp activities fund show at Madison Square garden last week. Jack Hanlon of Philadelphia booked George Chaney to meet Frankie Callahan, but Chaney had an abscess develop in his ear and was compelled to cancel at the last minute.

Hanlon tried to get Johnny Dundee, but received word Dundee had an injured arm. Somebody suggested that he get in touch with Willie manager and yelled over the long-distance:

"Hop on the next train for Philadelphia with William Jackson, fight Frankie Calahan, and there is $1000 in it for you."

The manager hesitated a minute and then said it was impossible because Jackson had agreed to fight Benny Leonard in a great boxing benefit for soldiers.

"Jackson is fighting Leonard for nothing," said the manager, "and I would like to accept this match in money, but it wouldn't do to hurt the benefit, and I will have to refuse."

This stand of Jackson's manager goes to show that all is not commercialism among those who make their living in a ring.

TOM SHARKEY WOULD BE A TOUGH CUSTOMER

Tom Sharkey is more than 40 years old, yet he still would be a tough customer for a German in a rough-and-tumble scrap. The former sailor isn't much heavier than when he fought Jeffries twenty-five rounds at Coney Island eighteen years ago.

"Boxing gave me health," said Sharkey the other day. "I enjoyed it, and I hated to give it up. But the scrap with Jeffries put an end to my active career. I received such a beating that I never was right until long after I had retired. Old Fitz was the hardest hitter of them all. In fact, he was the greatest figher of his weight that ever lived. Yes, I've seen some of our modern heavyweights, but I can't warm up to them. They'd have been easy marks for Fitz, Jeff and yours truly in the old days."

Sharkey hasn't forgotten two battles he had with Fitzsimmons. The first occurred in San Francisco, and the sailor was declared the winner on a foul. Wyatt Earp, a notorious gun fighter, was the referee, and the wise gamblers took the Sharkey end. Fitz seemed to be winning when the sailor fell to the floor, apparently in great pain. Earp, displaying his shooting iron, declared Sharkey the winner and then jumped out of the ring amid a wild scene. An hour later a physician who had examined Sharkey declared that he had been struck below the belt, a statement that was taken with many grains of salt. Fitz never ceased telling how he had been "robbed" by Earp and the Frisco gamblers. Several years later he arranged another battle with Sharkey, who was punched into dreamland in the first round.

SPORTING COMMENT

A despatch from New York carries the very interesting information that Manager McGraw of the Giants, praises Christy Mathewson and says that no person can blame the ex-pitcher for the Reds' failure to win many games recently. That's a boost that McGraw ought to give Matty, for wasn't it only the other day that Christy peddled Fred Toney, his big pitcher, to the Giants? One good turn deserves another. If Matty found it a hard job winning games even when he had Toney in the field, he'll find it much harder winning now that he has gone over to help the Giant's cause.

Toney says that he will not report to New York, but it's safe wagering that he'll change his mind. He'll either play with McGraw or get out of baseball.

Love's pitching this season has been a big improvement on anything shown by the big New York left hander in other seasons. He is taking the game more seriously and has enough natural ability to get by as a steady winner.

Lew McCarty, of the Giants, is suffering with a sore right shoulder and arm, an aftermath of the injury he received in the world's series last fall.

Joe Rodriguez, of the Giants, anticipates being called into the Cuban army by winter, as the island republic expects to send 25,000 men to France.

Mike Regan, the Reds' pitcher, has been reported as having been drafted, but Mike says he has not been officially notified of the fact.

Larry Doyle is making a game effort to play in his accustomed style, but he is still a bit weak and unable to do himself justice.

Managers of Western clubs have decided that the days of an easy time at Ehibe Park are at an end. Eastern managers realized this fact some time ago.

Girl ushers recently installed at the Cubs' park have made a hit with Chicago fans.

This Speaker has not been hitting up to his normal form, but the big star of the Cleveland club is beginning to show signs of resuming his place with the top set.

Since passing the century mark in base hits Frank Baker has gone into a batting slump. He is hitting the ball, but finds it next to impossible to hit safely.

Sam Jones was with the Boston club for two seasons before he pitched an entire game, but now he is one of the most consistent winners in the major leagues.

Several Pacific Coast Leaguers probably will be seen in major league uniforms within the next week, now that the big minor league of the West has closed its season.

Beating the Dental hockey team this winter is going to be as hard a job as growing spuds in a bowling alley. Not only have the tooth-pullers got all of last year's stars in line but they have also added Glen Smith, Louie Hudson and Rutherford to their number. Glen Smith is the former Riverside and Crescent defence player, and Hudson and Rutherford were formerly with Aura Lee.

Kitchener's champions will certainly have their hands full retaining the Allan cup. Doc. Merrick, who played on the defence with Glen Smith last year is in the Dutch town, but even his presence should not warrant a wager that Kitchener will defeat the lads under Col. Thompson's wing.

TITLE REFUSED BY LITERARY MAN

John Galsworthy Did Not Want a Knighthood,

IS PATRICIAN BY BIRTH

The Action of the Brilliant British Novelist Indicates the Growth In the Old Land of the Democratic Idea Which Is Also Making Headway In Canada at the Present Time.

It is not only among the young and progressive Canadians that the opposition to titles is growing. Even in the Old Land, where there are so many traditions connected with the custom, a strong democratic tendency has been coming into evidence since the outbreak of the present war. It was considered very significant in the Dominion when the late John Ross Robertson one of Toronto's really great citizens refused a title. It was even more significant in Great Britain when

JOHN GALSWORTHY

John Galsworthy, perhaps the most brilliantly intellectual of the British novelists, refused a knighthood. Birth and training had fitted Galsworthy to wear a title gracefully, but his convictions were against that sort of distinction in a democratic country. Galsworthy comes of a patrician family. He is a clever and thoughtful man, and he has concerned himself with social problems for many years. Several of his finest novels set forth the need of social justice in his own land. He wants a more equal distribution of happiness and opportunity, and in his stories like "The Freelands," he treats the claims of the upper classes with bitter satire. It was Galsworthy's drama, "Justice," that secured some much-needed reforms in the British prison system. If titles were a mark of distinction, Galsworthy would indeed have a right to wear one, but he refused the knighthood because they have ceased to mean anything. Many of the leading intellectuals and progressives of Great Britain praised his decision as another milepost in the march of the democratic idea. Galsworthy's action has been noted in Canada during the past few months in which the opposition to titles has been growing by leaps and bounds. The selfish personal interests and private ambitions of men who have power to defeat progressive ideas may keep back the movement to abolish such arbitrary class distinctions in this young democracy, but liberal thought must triumph in the end.

Conclusive.

Two Pullman porters representing different railroads put off duty and progressed from friendly gossip to heated argument. Their quarrel centered about which one worked for the better road. Their claims, figures and arguments came fast and furious. At last the tall, thin porter settled the dispute with these classic words: "Go on, niggah; we kills mo' people den you feliahs tote."—Argonaut.

Making and Earning Money.

"What is the difference between making money and earning money?" asked the youth.

"Sometimes the difference is a trip to the penitentiary for counterfeiting," answered the home grown philosopher.

All His Fault.

Mr. Flubdub—I lost my umbrella today. Mrs. Flubdub—That's just like you, John Henry. I told you when you left the house this morning to take one of the borrowed ones.—Puck.

No Rival That Way.

He—Have I a rival? She (coldly)—No; I cannot think of another person I regard with such indifference.—Boston Transcript.

Misunderstanding goes on like a fallen stitch in a stocking, which in the beginning might have been taken up by a needle.

THEY WERE WELL MATCHED

Why the Ramseys Were Like Old Joe Murchison's Team.

"It seems strange that the Ramseys should have married each other," said Mrs. Pilman.

"Strange? Not at all, my dear!" replied her husband. "They are well mated—as well mated as old Joe Murchison's horses were."

"I don't know anything about Murchison's horses," said Mrs. Pilman, "but I know that Mr. Ramsey is big and handsome and indolent, and Mrs. Ramsey is always at work and is thrifty into the bargain."

"That bears out what I say, my dear," said her husband. "Let me explain. In that remote and dark ages period of my life before I knew you they offered a prize at the annual fair for the best matched pair of agricultural horses. There were some beauties brought in, so that everybody laughed when old Joe Murchison came driving along a great, handsome, slow moving horse harnessed with a wiry, scrawny little beast that took two steps to the big fellow's one.

"That's a finely matched pair!' somebody shouted.

"'So they be!' agreed Joe complacently. 'So they be! The best matched pair in the county! One's willin' to do all the work an' t'other's willin' he should!'"—Exchange.

His Clutch.

"How did he accumulate his fortune?"

"Every dollar that came his way had a handle on it."—Judge.

There is nothing so easy but that it becomes difficult when you do it with reluctance.—Terence.

CHEESE PRICE 22 1-4 CENTS.

Dissatisfaction Among Members of Frontenac Cheese Board.

KINGSTON, July 27. — Twenty-two and one-quarter cents was the only price offered at the meeting of the Frontenac Cheese Board, and at that price several of the salesmen sold their offerings. There is considerable dissatisfaction among the salesmen about the low price given for the cheese. They point out that when the cost of manufacture is taken out the price to the farmer per hundred pounds of milk is around $1.80 and that at that price there is no profit to be made.

KINGSTON'S CONDUCTORETTES.

The Kingston, Portsmouth & Cataraqui Electric Railway Company, Kingston, Ont., have been employing six women conductors for the last six months and three more have been trained to act as "spares." Mr. Hugh C. Nickle, general superintendent, says that the "conductorettes" are giving good satisfaction, both to the company and the public. It is the intention of the company to provide a regular uniform which will likely be of tan colour in order that dust will not show unduly. The male employees of the company have made no protest against the employment of women.

BIG ORGANS IN UNISON.

San Francisco. — Musical history has been made in San Francisco. For the first time, it is claimed, two mammoth organs perfectly synchronized, were played in duet. The two organists were at the consoles of the two organs at a local theatre when the music lovers were surprised by this unequalled occurrence.

It has been always claimed by musicians and organists that it is impossible to bring two organs of such massive size into perfect harmony and pitch.

The combined organs represent an ensemble of more than 100 musicians, and it is stated more than a mile of pipe is used in the construction.

MUNICIPAL STATISTICS CONCERNING PETERBORO

The report just issued by the Bureau of Municipal Affairs of the Provincial Secretary's Department shows Peterborough city with an assessed population of 19,816 persons, with an assessed area of 2,822 acres. The total assessment of the city is $13,161,405, including $1,367,r20 for school purposes. The sinking fund on December 31, 1916, was $520,940.

These figures are for 1917.

CRADLE EMPTY, BABY GONE.

Science Decides Against the Hand Rocking the Cradle.

The cradle and the crooning song have gone, says the Chicago Post. Today science says that no mother must rock her baby, either in cradle or rocking chair. True, the mother may cuddle her cherub while sitting, and the occupation, therefore, while still sedentary, is also stationary.

One ventures much when he takes issue with science. Nevertheless, there were cradles in those days when the earth grew giants. The men of Bunker Hill and of Brandywine all were rocked to sleep in infancy; so were the men of Lundy's Lane and of New Orleans, and, likewise, the men of Chapultepec, Gettysburg, Buena Vista and Peachtree Creek. Sturdy soldiers they made, and although in this day it perhaps ought not to be said, there are none sturdier fighting anywhere, even though these latter-day warriors were uncradled and uncrooned.

The cradling custom was borrowed from nature. Civilized and savage rocked their babies. The American Indian woman swung her papoose to the bending boughs of the trees and lazily let the wind do the rocking. The Indian mother had seen the cradle nest of the oriole or perhaps the prehensile nest of the red-eyed vireo. It was an easy suggestion, and the mothers living next to nature took quick advantage. The doctors say we must not, but what harm does it do to rock the baby? It brings sleep, and it brings music, for no mother ever rocked her child without a lullaby accompaniment.

It's all gone, however, because steely science has said that it must go. The only baby that has a chance to-day is the one who is born at sea on the first day of a long voyage.

ADVERTISING

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING offers the manufacturer the best possible way to eliminate waste circulation, for it enables him to advertise where he has and can get distribution. To sell goods profitably depends largely on ability to reach the maximum number of people at the minimum cost.

Newspaper advertising is the quickest and surest means of getting retail distribution. It shows the retailer that a wide spread demand is being created.

The dealer is always ready to sell products that sell easy. He is a reader and an advertiser of the daily newspaper, and is sold on newspaper advertising, for he knows what it will do.

You prove to the retailer you are doing the utmost to help create a demand for him; this is real distribution. You can expand at will, adding steadily to your markets making each a permanent stronghold.

BULLETS FOR HUNS PASS TWO BILLION PRODUCTION MARK

Ordnance Department Says 1,886,769 Rifles Already Have Been Accepted.

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 27.—The production of ammunition for small arms used by the American army has passed the two billion mark, the War Department announced to-day. Gradually the industrial mechanism set up at the beginning of the war is beginning to approach the point of maximum production.

More than 16,000 Browning machine guns, for example, have been manufactured and the weekly production has reached more than 3,000. The total number of rifles is approaching the two million mark.

The Ordnance Department to-day issued the following summary of small arms production:

"Since the country entered the war, and up to and including July 19, the total output of cartridges for rifles, pistols, revolvers and machine guns, inspected and accepted, was 2,014,815,584. The daily average output is approximately 15,000,000. The maximum number inspected and accepted in a single day was 29,466,000 on July 15th.

"The latest figures available on the production of small arms, including rifles, pistols, revolvers and machine guns, inspected and accepted, are up to and including July 13, 1918. They show:

"Total number of rifles of all types—1,886,769.

"Total number of pistols, model 1917—217,000.

"Total number of revolvers, model 1917—169,367.

"The total number of rifles given does not include the 600,000 Springfield rifles which the government had at the outset of the war, nor does it include the thousands of complete rifles represented by the spare parts manufactured. It does include 1,417,284 rifles of the U. S. model, 1917 type, and 280,049 Russian rifles taken over by this government.

"The production of rifles for the week ending July 13, was 54,211, inspected and accepted; pistols, 8,700; revolvers, 6,104.

"Figures for machine guns show a total number manufactured inspected and accepted, up to and including the week of July 13, 1918, of 82,540. The total production of all types during that week was 6,681 or 1,564 in excess of the previous week's production.

"Production of Browning machine guns, since we entered the war has amounted to 10,204 light Brownings and 5,959 heavy. During the week ending July 13, the production was 2,018 light Brownings and 1,075 heavy. In both instances the numbers represent the machine guns actually inspected and accepted.

SIXTY DOLLARS FOR 1-4 CORD OF WOOD

That Is What One Peterboro Citizen Held Last Winter.

At a meeting of the Board of Works Committee of the City Council held last evening, it was decided on motion of Alderman Edgar and Alderman Dobbin, to take no action in regard to the request of R. L. Sargison, 206 Sherbrooke street for compensation. Last winter Sargison cut down two trees on a neighbour's property and secured a quarter of a cord of wood. For this method of keeping the home fires burning he was assessed sixty dollars damages in the Division Court on the complaint of the neighbour in question. Sargison claimed that the trees were dead, that he had the City Engineer's permission to remove the trees, but if he were secured to prove that the trees were alive. City Engineer Parsons said he may have given Sargison permission to rmove the trees, but if he did it was on the assumption that they were on his own property and not that of a neighbour.

CAN WE CHAIN THE FIRE FIEND?

There are some very interesting and instructive diagrams in a bulletin on forest fires just issued by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior. These diagrams show that throughout Canada, whenever the rainfall becomes unusually light, the number of fires increases. Generally speaking, too, the higher the temperature the greater the danger of fire. The bulletin is entitled "Forest Fires in Canada 1914-16," and the extent of the losses to the nation from this cause makes the publication of particular value. The statement of these losses will aid in arousing Canadians to the need of stopping forest fires and details of statistics will show that forest fires can be stopped, just as surely as losse are kept down by a good fire brigade in a city. With the exception of lightning, all forest fires are started by men, and if men were careful there would be no fires. The success of systematic fire protection measures is shown and the whole bulletin gives much valuable information on this important subject. Copies may be had free on application to the Director of Forestry, Ottawa.

Police Search for Thieves Who Took Silk Worth $30,000

Detectives Declare Band Used Several Waggons to Remove Loot From the Loft.

NEW YORK, July 27.— Following the establishment of a special police bureau to halt silk thefts from New York lifts, which have brought about amazing results in six weeks of effort, Detectives of the East Twenty-second street station were at work yesterday upon one of the largest single silk thefts reported in many years. The officials of the A. J. Tabor Silk Company, at No. 334 Fourth avenue, reported the loss of 200 bolts of silk valued at from $25,000 to $30,000.

Although it is apparent that the thieves entered the loft building at some time between Saturday and Monday the loss of the valuable goods was not discovered until yesterday morning. It was found that an entire corner of the storeroom was depleted and subsequent investigation by the police showed that the transom over a door facing in Twenty-sixth street had been removed.

In the opinion of the police more than one wagonload of merchandise was taken away but the watchman of the building, who has been employed by the firm for many years, saw nothing suspicious at any time during the nights in question. After questioning him for more than two hours yesterday the detectives were satisfied that he was in no way involved in the robbery."

NET SHIPPING LOSS TOTALS 549,069 TONS

Figures of Sub Sinkings for Six Months Show Need of More Ships.

LONDON, July 27. — Official submarine sinking figures for June emphasize the necessity of the utmost speeding up of Canadian and American ship construction.

The tonnage of ships sunk during the first six months of this year was 1,312,315, ships built totalled 763,246 tons, showing a net loss of 549,069 tons. The estimated net reduction in tonnage since the beginning of the war, after allowing for new ships and enemy vessels seized now approaches four million tons.

SILK PRICES TO JUMP IF TREATY CANCELLED

Manufacturer Says Increase Is Likely to Follow in the Near Future.

Silks are among some of the principal lines of goods imported from France to this country which may go up in price if the policy of France in cancelling and modifying many of her trade treaties is followed in the case of Canada. Since the outbreak of the war the trade balance against France has grown enormously. In the case of Canada the imports from France in 1914 totalled 14,404,276, against an export to France of $3,810,562. This adverse balance to Canada has been converted to a favourable balance in 1916 of $5,714,053 imports, against $36,085,813 exports.

"This will affect the United States, Switzerland, Italy, England, and Japan, and in view of the probable jump in prices as a result we have been advising our customers to buy their goods as quickly as they can."

"The effect of increased prices," a silk manufacturer said, "might offset the general disposition of the public, which had been veering round to the adoption of silk in place of woolen and other fabrics, which have increased in price enormously during the war."

In the ads. the names of the managers of departments were given in a special panel on the left side.

MAD BULL RUSH OF THE HUN

(By Capt. R. P. P. Rowe.)

There is undoubtedly a disposition in some quarters to over-rate both the strategy and the material resources of the German High Command. An attitude which suggests that military ability of an exceptional kind was proved by the recent modified German successes in the west is without justification. "Where do these enemy masses come from? Can Germany by some legerdemain create men for her needs?" Such questions are the product of a thoughtlessness, that is almost criminal. From the moment of the Russian debacle it was always obvious that Germany would be placed in a position of temporary advantage in the West. That was as certain as the simplest sum in arithmetic. It is equally sure arithmetic that the advantage can only be temporary and that the balance must soon in larger measure be reversed.

But Germany had her chance. Russia virtually made her a present of additional forces of such considerable magnitude that, if she chose to spend them, some measure of success was assured. She has largely spent them, and to what profit?

Here strategy comes in, and I may, perhaps, best answer the question by quoting some critical remarks of an expert whose identity I am not free to reveal. He writes as follows:

"In a former letter on the respective gains and losses of the British and Germans I drew attention to the often over-looked fact that the higher strategy of the latter was so faulty in 1914, as to be one of the main causes of their being checked in their advance to the Marne and all chance of a victory for them in that year being destroyed. It is necessary to point out that the German High Command continues to show itself devoid of intelligent strategy on the Western front, and for that reason the present German offensive in France is foredoomed to failure.

"To anyone who has taken a large view (the only view worth taking) of the strategical position a fair verdict on the present offensive would be something of this nature:

"The German High Command by methodical work and good organization has obtained tactical successes in carrying out a strategical scheme which is unsound.

"The third attack on the Oise and towards the Marne revealed the unsoundness of the enemy's strategy. If his third attack had been on the right, in continuation of the attack on the Lys—Mont Kemmel—Ypres line, the case would have been diffen. With the number of troops available, he ought to have been able to drive in our lines for the few miles necessary to leave us insufficient elbow-room between our first lines and the sea.

"Fortunately the enemy's High Command does not possess the double gift of intelligent strategy and knowledge of the psychology of its adversaries. If the troops opposed to the enemy had been of a calibre clearly inferior to that of his own, possibly, such a sudden enlargement of his salient in the direction of Paris might have caused a collapse which would have opened an approach to that city. As it was he was opposed by an adversary at least as intelligent and of at lest as good military quality as himself. The result is that it is now too late for him to carry out an offensive elsewhere with an equal, or even a reasonable, hope of success. His mad-bull rush has merely landed him in a worse strategical situation than he occupied three months previously."

This is a clear and concise statement of what in a purely military sense Germany has recently achieved. It amounts to little more than the showy occupation of territory which is at best of small military value. At worse— and the near future is likely to demonstrate which alternative is true, the line she holds so far from being an improvement may have been advanced to her own disadvantage, since by its greater length, its dangerous salients, and its lack of prepared fortification it is far more vulnerable than the positions from which she started. In the meanwhile the change, such as it is, in the strategical situation has only been brought about by a heavy expenditure of German reserves. The fresh troops from America stream on to the war-worn battlefields, and before long the weary soldiers of Germany, seriously diminished in numbers by a huge and wasteful offensive, will have no prospect before them but a desperate defence. Then will be the time to audit accurately the profit-and-loss account of this "mad-bull rush."

PERSONALITY PREVAILED OVER PRICE.

As showing the worth of personality in advertising as well as in store service the following further remarks were especially noted:

"The one-hour sales were, we considered, very successful. They were put on at 8:15 and 9:15 with the purpose of starting business early, and they accomplished this to a marked degree. The first at 8:15 gave us over five hundred sales in this department in the hour. Apart from these two hour-sales and the blouse special, the other departments all report a very large proportion of regular-lines sold. Price was not, evidently the strongest feature of the day's business: We may say in this connection that not one of the twenty nine departments was slack at any hour of the day."

SEVERAL U-BOATS WERE DESTROYED DURING THE ATTACK

FIGURES WILL BE REVEALED

Statistics Showing Number of Effectives Secured Under M.S.A. Will be Made Public.

THE DEFAULTERS

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., July 29.—Statistics shewing the total numbers of effectives secured under the military service act will shortly be made public by the council, Lieut. Col. Machin, chairman of the board, J. H. Jenkins, secretary and A. M. Gammell of the Militia Headquarters staff have returned from a tour of inspection of the Maritime Provinces and Quebec and the work of compiling the statistics is now proceeding apace.

The biggest task before the authorities says Col. Machin is the task of weeding out the draftees secured. Men at first placed in "A" afterwards prove unfit to endure the severe training and have to be dismissed.

ACTUAL NUMBER.

The statistics under preparation will show the actual number of men added to the Canadian Expeditionary force through the Military Service Act. Col. Machin declares that everywhere there is a spirit of co-operation between the registrars and commanding officers and that men are being secured as rapidly as possible. He declares that a large proportion of men classed in one district as defaulters have acutally joined up in another district.

Decoration for American Officer

Baker Will Outline Government's Position in the Matter.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, July 29.—King George has conferred upon General Biddle, commanding the American forces of Great Britain, the order of Knight Commander of the Bath, it was announced to-day.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The decoration of Generals Pershing, March, Biddle and others by King George will be the subject of a letter from Secretary of War Baker to the British Embassy soon. Baker will outline this Government's position on acceptance of the foreign decorations then. While these decorations are not to be accepted by American officers without the Congressional sanction, it is assumed some arrangements will be made so that the Generals may accept.

OVER 1,000 BATHERS DAILY AT INVERLEA

The daily average of bathers at Inverlea Park last week exceeded one thousand according to the estimate of Sergt. John Cooper, the caretaker of the dressing quarters and general supervisor of the beach. On one evening there were 605 bathers in the water at once, an emphatic proof that the people welcome the first opportunity to enjoy the water under proped dressing facilities. It is not pretended that the dressing quarters are adequate or entirely satisfactory, but as a makeshift the building is a big improvement over the bushes. Probably it is an earnest of better accommodation next year, and more of it. Certainly, the public is indebted to the Nicholls Park Trust for the first attempt to meet the needs of the bathers who flock to the north end park. The evidence of their appetency for the water should encourage the city to establish swimming places elsewhere, especially in the south end.

STANDARD TRUCKS FOR U.S WAR DEPARTMENT

Four Models to Determine Upon for Army Use.

WASHINGTON, July 29. — Major trucks and passenger cars for use in the army have been standardized, the War Department announced and orders have been placed for 70,000 of all types. Four models of trucks, with carrying capacities ranging from 1 to 5 tons have been determined upon as best for army use. Two models are commercial types, but the other two have been developed by army engineers.

GEN. FOCH IS CONTINUING HIS STRATEGIC PRESSURE

German Official Communiques Are Deliberately Lying—Germans at Home Have Not Been Informed That Hindenburg Has Had to Give Up His Entire Hold on the Marne—Allies Are Conserving Manpower.

FOCH FIGHTING WITH BRAIN POWER

(By J. W. T. Mason—United Press.)

NEW YORK, July 29 — General Foch is continuing his strategic pressure against Aisne-Ourcq salient with the same firm refusal to be tempted in a general engagement that has marked his course since the Germans started to retreat from the Marne.

Full justification for this policy of caution has been proved by the renewed retreat during the last 48 hours. General Foch is fighting with brain power as well as with man power. This combination does not provide quick, spectacular results that Von Hindenburg has accomplished by use of power alone, but it will win the war with minimum losses of life.

GENERAL EFFECT

It is not necessary for the Allies purpose to sacrifice lives in thousands to gain ground more quickly. The Allies money can hold out to whatever extent is necessary to save the lives of the Allied troops. This is the principle on which General Foch is working. The General effect on the German morale of Von Hindenburg's retreat from Marne will be the same regardless of the method in which it has been brought about.

BREAKING NEWS SLOWLY

This is encouraging evidence that German War Lords are badly frightened at prospect of telling the German people what has happened north of the Marne. For the first time since the war began, German official communiques are deliberately lying and camouflaging. The Germans at home have not been informed that Von Hindenburg has had to give up his entire hold on the Marne and is headed back toward Vesle and the Aisne. In all previous German defeats, the war office at Berlin has been studiously frank, for purpose of impressing on Allies belief that German morale was sufficiently unbending to withstand bad news. This condition no longer exists.

DARE NOT CONFESS

The Kaiser dare not confess his present defeat outright. He is breaking the news slowly and timorously. Well he might, for his dynasty is in grave danger of being found out. After Verdun, the Marne the Hohenzollern Heir may soon become known throughout Germany as the Crown Prince of disaster.

Becoming More Difficult to Fill the German Ranks

Boys of the Younger German Classes Cannot be Counted in Same Class With the Americans.

DEFENSIVE POSITION

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 29.—Barring the worst hard luck imaginable for the Allies, the German armies never again will be able to drive forward with the punch they carried when they opened their series of 1918 drives last March.

On the starting point of the fifth year of war, it seems to me to be merely a question of time before a forced retreat to defensive positions will have to be carried out by the Boche in the hope that it will be possible to obtain peace before streams of arriving Americans so swell the forces of the Allies that an unconditional surrender will be forced.

It is an open secret here that it is becoming increasingly difficult to fill German field depots. Boys of younger German classes cannot be counted in the same class with Americans who are daily arriving in such numbers as to completely nullify Germany's new crop.

Hopeless Condition.

Documentary evidence in the hands of the British Army shows that Gen. Ludendorff fears political results at home from too quickly shoving boys into battle. The German people, who reluctantly consented to participation in battle of these youths to gain promised victory that was foreseen in the hope of bringing about an early peace, are beginning to feel they have been betrayed. Opposition is growing to giving up sons for cannon fodder.

A sergeant recently captured, declared drafts are being filled with the utmost difficulty. Prince Rupprecht's army is practically the only fit reserve left on the western front. The Crown Prince, it is declared, has only five first-class divisions left. Confusion exists behind the German lines. There is indecision everywhere.

Manifestly there is a question of whether Germany is not now putting up a colossal bluff, while trying to hide hopeless conditions behind a wall of imitation steel.

CANADIANS GET FISH.

CONTRACTS PLACED FOR HALF MILLION TONS TO SOLDIERS

LONDON, July 29.—Although there has recently been a good delivery of supplies to the Canadian forces here, considerable increases in cost of supplies are to be noted. From Canada there was received 314,217 pounds of whitefish and 20,336 pounds of hake and pack trout. Advice has also been placed for 1,500,000 bloaters and 400,000 pounds of frozen herring to come forward in monthly shipments.

Lines Are Very Close Together

There Has Been No Contact Between Opposing Infantry for Several Hours.

(United Press Service.)

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 29. — (9:30 a.m.)—The French and Americans are continuing to advance northward and northeastward from Fere En Tardenois, and are improving their positions they took yesterday.

Fighting continues on the north bank of the Ourcq at some points, where the German defenses were not completely wiped out.

Enemy artillery is heavily bombarding Seringes (a mile and a half east of Fere En Tardenois), Nesle (two miles east of Seringes), and Serge. There is also heavy Boche machine gun fire from the Nesle Forest (north and northeast of Fere En Tardenois.)

Heavy Fighting.

The fighting continues to consist entirely of infantry rushing enemy machine guns. There has been no contact between the opposing infantries in the past several hours.

Near Sergy, the lines are so close together that the Boches can plainly be seen digging shallow holes in the open fields.

German airplanes are harassing our rear areas. One attacked a field dressing station, swooping down and playing machine gun fire on the wounded who lay about on the ground on stretchers.

THE WEATHER

The heated spell last year began on July 21, and continued without interruption until August 3rd. The warmest day was July 30th, with 95 degrees, and on seven days during that period the thermometer went to 90 or over. This year also the hot wave struck here on July 21st. The temperature yesterday went up to 90—not as warm as the figures of the preceding Sunday (95) but high enough. Saturday's high point was 89. The storm which passed over on Saturday afternoon was a good example of the erratic character of thunderstorms in general, and their usually local nature. At the north end of the city there was no rain. At the south end there was a brisk shower, but at Rice Lake it came down in a deluge for about an hour, and was a storm of the first class, with much lightning and thunder.—W.P.

Bridges Were All Destroyed

Enemy Efforts to Halt the Progress of the Allies—Heavy Fighting in Progress.

(United Press Despatch.)

(By Lowell Mellett)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, July 29.—(10:40 a.m.)—French and American troops have driven the Germans entirely out of the important concentration center of Fere En Tardenois and have pushed a short distance to the northeast, crossing the Ourcq. The Franco-Americans also have taken Roncheres (five and a half miles southeast of Fere en Tardenois) and Villers-Agron (nine miles east and south of Fere en Tardenois).

Hard fighting by the infantry cavalry and tanks, following up the terrific artillery bombardment, has given the allies complete possession of the lower half of the wide, deep salient between Soissons and Rheims.

Fere en Tardenois was captured only after a desperate struggle lasting many hours. The French and the Americans co-operating with them found many machine guns, cleverly concealed in houses and cellars. These nests were wiped out in bitter hand to hand struggles in which no quarter was asked and none given.

The Germans had destroyed all the bridges across the Ourcq, but the Poilus and Doughboy's forded the shallow stream at several points in the face of a storm of bullets.

The allies also advanced their lines to the left and right of Fere en Tardenois taking the villages of Roncheres and Villers-Agron. The French and Americans are proceeding cautiously and are determined to waste no men in the machine gun filled Bois De Ste Uniere (northeast of Fere en Tardenois).

Cavalry felt out the German positions there late yesterday. The Boches are expected to put up a strong resistance in that wood, as they are already doing in Ville en Tardenois but the Franco-Americans may have adopted the plan so successfully used in the past of encircling the wood and clean out the nests afterward.

The advancing allies are finding their path strewn with remarkable numbers of enemy dead.

The Enemy Retreat Continues From the Lower End of the Pocket—Heavy Fighting in Progress.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, July 29.—The French and Americans have advanced three miles on a twenty-mile front since Sunday noon it was learned from an authoritative source this afternoon. The Allies hold all on the Rheims-Dormans Highway and the whole bank of the Ourcq.

The German retreat continues from the lower end of the pocket, but the enemy is resisting desperately, in the Ardre Valley, southwest of Rheims and at Buzancy, south of Soissons. The Americans are engaged in heavy fighting in the latter region.

The German Retreat.

Canadian Press.

LONDON, July 29.—The German retreat is continuing along the whole line with the Allies closely in pursuit, according to news from fighting area in the Soissons-Rheims salient received up to noon. The Germans have succeeded in checking to a certain extent but not in stopping the French advance. The French are on the north bank of the Ourcq and to the east they have secured the whole road between Rheims and Dormas. The Germans are stubbornly resisting and are burning villages. Heavy fighting is still in progress to the south of Soissons and in the neighborhood of Buczacy. So far the French have made no progress there. Villages between Soissons and Bazoches about 14 miles to east, however, are on fire, leading to the belief that the Germans may intend a further retreat.

Line Abandoned.

Since yesterday the allies have advanced between two and three miles on a twenty-mile front. The enemy has definitely abandoned the line of the Ourcq and there is little doubt now he will go back beyond the Vesle to line 30 miles long between Soissons and Rheims which is probably well entrenched and has good lines of communication. The German retirement has been quite orderly and deliberate. So far the taking of only four guns has been reported.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

Canadian Press.

LONDON, July 29. — On the British Front there is nothing special to report, an official statement from the British War Office said last night.

Field Marshal Haig reported today that north of Gavelle (five miles northeast of Arras) Canadian troops made two successful raids.

Two lines of German trenches on a two mile front astride the Brey-Corbie road east of Amiens front, been captured by Australian troops was officially announced today. In carrying out this operation the Australians took 100 prisoners.

Canadian Press.

LONDON, July 29.—An official statement on Air operations issued last night reads: On the 26th and 27th instant low clouds and rain prevented flying by day, but during the night bombs were dropped on houses, billets and hutments in the vicinity of Bapaume.

PARIS, July 29.—In the fighting north of the Marne yesterday 400 prisoners were captured, says an official statement from the War Office today... There was no change in the situation during the night.

Enemy's Resistance.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, June 29.—The forward pressure of the Allies was continued uninterrupted throughout Sunday. On Saturday the progress of the Allies forces was extremely rapid with slight opposition from the retreating enemy, but yesterday the Germans everywhere demonstrated their powers of determined resistance which was still very strong.

In the street of Fere En Tardenois, there was very severe hand to hand fighting but the Allies eventually obtained the upper hand.

Heavy Fighting.

Late last night fighting was still in progress for the mastery of ville En Tardenois, the Germans' strong point on the south westerly side of the salient, but the Allies were gradually gaining the ascendancy here, they are established in the southern portion of the town having beaten off all efforts of the Germans to dislodge them.

SAVING THE CROPS.

The co-operative spirit that is being fostered between our neighbours to the south and the Canadian people is evidenced by the announcement from Washington that a great army of harvesters from the United States is preparing to invade Western Canada in the next two or three weeks to assist in harvesting the crops. Thousands of men who have been at work in cutting the bumper wheat crop of the Middle West will be brought to Canada as a result of an arrangement between the two countries, and it is expected that the shortage of farm labour in the Canadian West will be met by the reinforcements from the south. It is the intention after the Canadian harvest to transport the army of workers back to the cornfields of the Central American West. This arrangement means a systematizing of the harvest operations on both sides of the line, and should result in the saving of their entire crop.

THE END OF BASEBALL.

The order issued by United States' Secretary of War Baker, that professional baseball players must engage in essential work before September 1st, or else be called upon to join the army, means the end of organized baseball until the war is over. The game occupies such a hold upon the affections of so many people, not only in the United States, but on this side of the line as well, that the order will cause much regret, although it is generally recognized not only as a proper step, but as effective proof that Uncle Sam is in the war to the end. There will be general agreement with Secretary Baker's remark, that while he regarded it unfortunate to have so wholesome a recreation as baseball destroyed, it would be a much more unfortunate thing to preserve even so wholesome an amusement by making an exception in favour of baseball players, which is denied to great classes of people in the United States who are immediately associated with processes of the national daily life more fundamentally than any mere amusement.

It was certain that when men in other occupations were being called upon to change their work or enlist there would have been a strong objection to allowing the diamond stars to continue. And the conduct of some of the ball players who have fled to the sheltering arms of the ship-building plants to dodge the draft has not helped to create a very sympathetic feeling on the part of the public generally toward the men who, in peace times, were almost worshipped as heroes.

FOOD PRICES.

There is a steadily increasing demand throughout Canada that the Government shall take some action in regard to the ever-soaring cost of living. Prices are rising month by month in a manner that is alarming, and people can no longer be pacified by the theory of experts that a system of price-fixing is not practicable. When Canadians realize that they are paying more for food-stuffs in the "granary of the Empire" than are the people in England, whose food has to be imported, it is certain that essays and articles by the Canada Food Board will not suffice to convince them that there is not need for improvement. It is not to be wondered at that there has been strike after strike in Canada. The purchasing power of the dollar has dropped steadily until the wages paid in peace times are utterly inadequate to keep body and soul together.

The Toronto Globe effectively presents the need for action in the following editorial:

"The situation in Canada is not what it should be. There is ominous labour unrest, murmuring, and discontent. This condition exists to an extent which is only beginning to be realized. It must be remedied. Until the war is won there is no place in Canada for national schism.

Conditions will not be cured by shutting the eyes to them. No policy of inaition and drift can prove effective. The business — the important and immediate business—of those charged with the responsibility of government is to ascertain the causes of the very general unrest and set themselves to dealing with them. Canada's war endeavour must not be interrupted by avoidable and unnecessary troubles at home.

It is impossible to ignore the self-evident fact that a serious contribution to much industrial unrest is the continuous advance in the prices of necessaries of life. Discontent concerning this condition is not without cause. Why should the prices for food in Canada—a country which raises a huge surplus of foodstuffs for export—be higher than they are in the importing British Isles? What operates to bring this remarkable condition about? These are questions which should have administrative attention if the acute problem of the cost of living is to be effectively grappled.

The producers are not getting the benefit of the soaring prices. There is a startling diverence between what the farmer receives and what the consumer pays. What "something" between the farmer and the consumer is fattening at the expense of both? And how can that "something" be reached and dealt with?

There is one way to curb cost that is running riot. Food prices can be fixed and standardized in Canada as they have been fixed and standardized in Britain. Price-fixing has been adopted for wholesalers in certain staple food commodities. The result has justified that course. Whot objection is there to extending the mtahod found effective in dealing with the large transactions of the wholesaler to the little transactions of the retailer? The question of fixing food prices should engage the attention of the Canada Food Board.

FOCH UNDER ORDERS

(New York Herald)

If we are to believe the experts and apologists of the German press, the Crown Prince's strategy in the region of the Marne has been on the lines of that described in the old ballad:—

The brave old Duke of York, sirs,
He had ten thousand men.
He marched them all right up the hill,
And marched them down again,
And when they were up they were up,
And when they were down they were down,
And when they were only half way up
They were neither up nor down.

Some of the enemy papers wish it to be understood that the German high command having succeeded in getting troops across the Marne was content to withdraw them on the attainment of their objective. The Cologne Gazette goes so far to say that Foch's counter offensive was in reality designed by the Crown Prince and his staff, for, to use the precise words, "Foch is no longer free to make his decisions, but must be dictated to in making them by the German command, which will not allow the initiative to be taken from it."

It must therefore be understood that the retreat of crack German regiments across the Marne before American troops was deliberately planned by the enemy himself, that he has purposely permitted himself to be turned out of Chateau Thierry, Oulchy and a dozen other points of vantage, and that if he gives up Fere and Soissons, as he most likely will, it will be of his own free will and accord. Inasmuch as these operations have involved the loss of close on to 20,000 men as prisoners, an uncounted number of killed and wounded more than 400 guns and large supplies of valuable war stores, the voluntary sacrifice of such enormous quantities of men and materials must have a profound ulterior motive which possibly the German people will be able to understand and appreciate.

Meanwhile Foch, still with the kind permission of the Crown Prince continues to follow up his success in closing in on the Rheims-Soissons-Epernay salient, and there is at present no sign of a let-up in the advance of his forces. The German troops are, to say the least, in an awkward pocket, in which they are being harassed by severe artillery, infantry and cavalry attacks from three sides and from which it would appear they must either withdraw or be captured. Possibly the Crown Prince's complaisance will even admit of the latter, although it would seem that he has come to the conclusion that it is time to dictate a retreat to Foch, and has sent to his cousin Rupprecht for reinforcements. The only question is, Will he find it as easy to dictate a retreat to the Generalissimo as to command his advance?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Canadian munition workers must redouble their efforts to make up for the loss in output caused by the strike among English sell makers.

Ludendorff is said to be getting the blame for the failure of the German plans. If the attack had been partly successful Hindenburg would likely have claimed the credit while a complete success for the German cause would have given the Kaiser a chance to assign the honour to himself.

A merchant who would place on the market waterproof holders for the use of bathers who want to carry their registration cards into the water with them would undoubtedly make a fortune.

HAS HIS SONS AND HIS MONEY

(The Labor Advocate.)

The Kaiser had six sons and a large income when he started this war. The war is in its fourth year and he still has all his sons and his large income. How he can look in the face the thousands of Germans, crippled by his war, we don't know, but he does it. Everybody about him has given something or someone to the war. The Kaiser has given nothing. He still has everything he started with and more.

ONLY ONE NATIONAL GAME.

(Boston Globe.)

Secretary Baker has fairly stated the case for professional baseball and has fairly stated the case against it. He is not at all blind to what it means to Americans, but he stands upon the ground that "non-productive employment of able-bodied persons useful in the National defence cannot be justified" and that therefore, if necessary, we are "called upon in the public interest to sacrifice a favorite form of amusement." There is only one National game for Americans today, and it is played up on the battlefields of France.

THE TIE THAT BINDS.

(London Daily Telegraph.)

Instead of domination, instead of an Imperium in the Roman sense, what we have aimed at is a vast confederation. We have not asked our Colonies to subordinate their wills to ours. On the contrary, we have respected the love of liberty and independence which we recognize to be the master passion of the English mind, and we have granted to the full responsible government—the free chance to our Colonists of making their own mistakes and correcting their errors by experience gained in actual legislation. In one sense, of course, a confederacy of sovereign States represents the weakest of links; in another sense it is the strongest, because it is not dependent on material means, but is based on spiritual elements and the inspiring influence of similar ideals. That principle was finely expressed by Mr. Lloyd George when he said that "in life the most enduring tie are the invisible ones."

NOT ALL WASTE.

(London Daily Express.)

If waste from the kitchen table will keep a pig or a thousand pigs what could not be done with all the other waste in the world? Waste is not only material. It is not only a matter of cabbage leavee and potato peelings We are all wasting something every hour of every day. If all our wasted efforts could be gathered up by some Controller of Energy and used for the common good, what a force could he wield! If all our wasted opportunities could be recalled, what a matter for self-reproach! We waste our affections and our favors. We waste our tears and our repinings when it would be better to set our teeth. We might begin to believe that everything is wasted in a world where life itself is being wasted at a rate that would appal a master spendthrift. Yet all is not waste. Cheerfulness is never wasted. I recreates itself even in a world of gloom, and gives us new courage—to go on wasting.

GEN. DE GOUTTE'S RECORD.

Made His Reputation in the Colonial Service.

General de Goutte, the victor of Chateau-Thierry, who shares with Generals Mangin, de Mitry, Berthelot, and Gouraud in directing operations in the battle of the Marne, is one of the most brilliant of the young French Generals, says an announcement given out by the Official Bureau of French Information. This reads:

"By a curious coincidence, General de Goutte is a Colonial, like Mangin and Gouraud. All his military career has been made in the colonial campaigns of the French Republic in Tunis from 1890 to 1895, in Madagascar from 1895 to 1896, in China in 1900, and in Morocco from 1911 to 1913.

"Like Mangin and like Petain, he was at the outbreak of the war a simple Colonel and has revealed himself during the war, especially in the battle of Ailette in November, 1917, where with his army corps he captured 4,000 prisoners, 134 guns, and 282 machine guns in a few hours. He is now commanding a whole army, including American troops, which attacked the Germans from the Ourcq to the Marne and took Chateau-Thierry."

Riversides Beat All Stars From Cobourg by 9 to 3

Manager Solomon's Outfit too Good For Aggregation From Lake Shore, Who Were Outfielded and Outhit—Veteran Dick Turpin in the Game.

SOME GOOD FIELDING

Manager Solomon's Riverside valiantly upheld the credit of the City Twilight League on Saturday afternoon when they handed a 9-3 trimming to the Cobourg All-Stars before a big crowd at Riverside Park. The local team had little trouble in grabbing the decision away from the visitors who were both out hit and out fielded while the Riversides took all kinds of chances on the bases and got away with most of them. Kirn kept the visitor's ten hits well scattered and had perfect conrol, not a visitor getting complimentary whileLundymore who was on the slab for the Lake Shore gang was found for twelve hits and in addition passed three and hit two other batters, several of the charities blossoming into runs.

In the early stages a thunderstorm threatened to break up the game and a small shower drove the players to shelter at the end of the third innings, but it soon cleared.

The veteran Dick Turpin who fought for Canada in South Africa and in France and who has been playing baseball for to these many years held down first base for the visitors. Dick is carrying a few more pounds than in the old days but he has not lost his batting eye and he accepted every fielding chances that came his way.

The fielding features were supplied by Drumm, the Cobourg right fielder who robbed Connors of a hit by a long sprint to nail a fly to short right centre and by Roy Smyth who wound up the game by a running one handed shoe string catch of a low drive to left. The Riversides infield contributed some fast fielding and Yilland and Skitch for the visitors were also in the lime light while Chalk the big catcher whipped the ball around with rifle shot speed.

Art Johnston handled the indication in faultless fashion.

First Innings.

Cobourg— Fox died on a roller to Kirn. Yelland singled to right, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch, and scored on Skitch's single to short when Sheehy slipped in going after the ball. Smyth made a nice catch of Campbell's sky scraper, and Drumm fanned. One run, two hits, no errors.

Riversides—Sheehy fanned, McCarney flied out to Turpin, and Guerin missed three. No runs, hits or errors.

Second Innings.

Cobourg—Chalk grounded to Sheehy. Woods hoisted one to Connors, and Turpin's fly was nailed by Smyth. No runs, hits or errors.

Riversides—Phelan beat out a tap in front of the plate and stole second. Murray struck out. Phelan went to third on Smyth's grounder to Turpin and scored on Solomon's clean single to left. Connors singled to right and Solomon tried to score on the play. He made third all right when Fox dropped the ball, but was nailed at the plate. One run, three hits, one error.

Third Innings.

Cobourg — Landymore singled to right, Fox and Yelland fanned. Skitch drove a single through short. On Kirn's high throw to second, and Connors' bad peg to third, Landymore scored. Campbell missed three. One run, two hits, two errors.

Riversides—Kirn was hit. Sheehy beat out a swinging bunt. Chalk threw down to second to catch Kirn off, and the base runner tore for third, scoring on Fox's muff and wild throw, while Sheehy went to third. McCarney drew a walk and stole second. Guerin's fly was nailed by Skitch. With Phelan at the bat the squeeze play was pulled off, Sheehy scoring when Phelan bunted, and McCarney also crossing the plate when Chalk's throw to first hit Phelan, and everybody was safe. Murray forced Phelan at second, Yelland to Skitch, and Landymore threw out Smyth. Three runs, one hit, two errors.

Fourth Innings.

Cobourg—Drumm grounded to Sheehy. Murray threw out Chalk. Woods and Turpin singled to left centre, but Landymore fouled out to Phelan. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Riversides— Solomon was hit and went to second on a wild pitch. Connors drew a walk. On a delayed double steal, Solomon scored on Fox's error and Connors reached third. Kirn rolled to Yelland and Connors was out at the plate. Sheehy fouled to Chalk and McCarney flied to Turpin. One run, no hits, one error.

Fith Innings.

Fox grounded to McCarney. Yelland popped out to Guerin. Skitch was safe on Sheehy's fumble, and stole second, scoring on Campbell's single to right. Campbell stole second and third, but Drumm rolled to McCarney. One run, one hit, one error.

Riversides— Guerin singled through third. Phelan sacrificed. Murray hit through third, sending Guerin to third. Murray stole second. Smyth's single to right scored Guerin. Solomon rapped a hit through the box, scoring Murray. Connors was out on a beautiful catch by Drumm, and Kirn grounded to Fox. Two runs, four hits, no errors.

Sixth Innings.

Cobourg — Chalk fanned, Wood grounded to Kirn, Turpin singled through short. Kirn threw out Landymore. No runs, hits or erorrs.

Riversides—Sheehy singled through short and advanced on McCarney's grounder to Skitch, the second baseman making a nice play. Guerin was safe on Skitch's fumble. Phelan's single scored Sheehy and sent Guerin to third. Phelan drew a throw to first, and while he was being run down Guerin scored. Murray singled to centre and Smyth walked, but Solomon lifted one to Skitch. Two runs, three hits, no errors.

Seventh Innings.

Cobourg—Fox popped to Kirn, Yelland singled to left and stole second. Kirn nabbed Skitch's fly and Campbell fanned. No runs, hits or errors.

Riversides—Connors singled, Skitch over-running his pop fly. Kirn hoisted to Fox. Sheehy hit into a double play, Yelland to Skitch to Turpin. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Eighth Innings.

Cobourg— Drumm singled to right and stole second. On Chalks tap to Murray, Drumm was tagged on the line. Woods grounded to McCarney and Turpin died on a drive to Murray. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Riversides —McCarney grounded to Turpin. Guerin hoisted to Drumm, and Landymore threw out Phelan. No runs, hits or errors.

Ninth Innings.

Cobourg—Kemmel, batting for Landymore, was thrown out by Sheehy. Murray tossed Fox out and Smyth made a sensational catch of Yelland's drive to left. No runs, hits or errors.

SPORTING COMMENT

Gene Paulette, once a Giant is one of the most valuable men on the roster of the Cardinals. He plays first base and shortstop equally well.

Owner Comiskey, of the White Sox, has lost his lucky charm and says he cannot drive away the Old Jinx.

Doc Johnston is starting off well with the Indians. He is leading off in the batting order and getting his share of hits.

Charley Hollocher, the Cubs' clever shortstop, is a St. Louis boy. He is one of the "finds' of the season.

Gedeon still is making good at second base for the St. Louis Browns. He's one of the surprises of the year.

Rollie Zeider hasn't been troubled with bunions since he jumped the Yankees in 1913.

The Yankees always have contended that the Cleveland park is the best in the league for hitting. There is not a sign of any kind on the fences.

Al Wickland's heavy hitting has won him the clean-up position in the Braves' batting order. Another dangerous slugger, "Red" Smith, bats after Wickland.

Walter Holke, the Giants' first-baseman, who was ordered to work or fight, has secured a position at the Bethlehem Steel Plant and will play baseball.

SONGS SOLDIERS SING

LOVE DITTIES AND NONSENSE ARE THE FAVORITES.

Men Do Not Make Much Use of Patriotic Songs, Even When Marching Into Action, But They Have a Liking for Humorous Verse and Plenty of Sentiment—They Know That Peace Is a Long Way Off.

THE necessity for poetry and song is fully and officially recognized by the British and Canadian military authorities at the front. Every division has its own concert party. These men are chosen out of the ranks because they can sing, and their one task is to furnish nightly concerts for the men. They are provided with a good hall, or tent, or open-air position; and they are given enough money to buy stage scenery and appropriate dress. Everybody attends the concerts from the general to the private; and while the entertainments last, the war is forgotten. A charge is made at the door but the balance sheet is published for all ranks to see; and the profits are distributed among the divisional charities.

But, after all, the singing in the concert rooms is but a small fraction of the singing one hears in the army. On every march, in every billet and mess, there is the sound of singing. Nor must the singing at our religious services and in the Y.M.C.A. huts be forgotten. Song seems to be the great renewer of hope and courage. It is the joy bringer. Moreover, it is an expression of emotions that can find no other voice.

How real these songs are to the soldiers is indicated by one striking omission. There are no patriotic songs at the front. Except the National Anthem rendered on formal occasions, I have never heard in eighteen months, a single patriotic song. The reason is not far to seek. The soldiers' patriotism calls for no expression in song. They are expressing it night and day in the endurance or hardship and wounds — in the risking of their lives. Their hearts are satisfied with their deeds, and songs of such a character become superfluous. In peace-time they sing their love of the homeland, but in war-time they suffer for her and are content. They would never think of singing a patriotic song as they march into battle. It would be painting the lily and guilding refined gold. Are not their deathless deeds, songs for which they make a foil by singing some inconsequential and evanescent song such as "There's something in the seaside air."

On analysis I should say that there are five subjects on which our soldiers sing. First) there are Nonsense Songs, or, if you prefer it, songs of soldier philosophy. They know that no theory will explain the war; it is too big a thing for any sheet of philosophy to cover. It has burst on our humdrum life like a colliding planet. The thing to do is not to evolve a theory as to how the planet got astray but to clear up the mess it has made. Our soldiers show this sense of the vastness of war-happenings, by singing of things having no real importance at all, and keeping steadily at their duties. The path of duty is, they find, the only path of sanity. The would-be war philosopher they put on one side. The war is too big for him. Let him leave his explanation of the war and lend a hand to bring it to an end. So they sing, with laughing irony,

"We're here because we're here, because We're here, because we're here."

Or,

"While you've got a lucifer to light your fag,
Smile, boys, that's the style,
What's the use of worrying?
It never was worth while,
So pack up your troubles in your old kit-bag
And smile, smile, smile."

The second class of song is the Love Song, of a more or less serious character. The Tommies came out of England singing "Tipperary," but they dropped it in France, and the only one on whose lips I have heard it was a little French boy sitting on the tail of a cart. The chorus alone gave it popularity for it was the expression, ready to hand, of a long farewell; and with its "long, long way to go" showed that, like Kitchener, the soldiers were not deceived by hopes of an early peace.

Now another song with verses more expressive of their sentiments has taken its place. The chorus runs

"There's a long, long trail awinding
Into the land of my dreams,
Where the nightingales are singing
And a white moon beams;
There's a long, long night of waiting
Until my dreams all come true;
Till the day when I'll be going down
That long, long trail with you."

Sometimes the imagination will wander into the days that are to be—for some—and they sing,

'We dont' want a lot of flags flying,
"We don't want a lot of flags flying,
bands;
We don't want a lot of speechifying,
And we don't want a lot of waving hands;
We don't want a lot of interfering,
When we've safely crossed the foam;
But we DO want to find the girls we left behind,
When we all come marching home."

Will the girls remember? The words are not without tragedy. How deeply some of the men love may perhaps never be realized by those at home. The longing of their hearts is at times, almost unbearable. A captain, past middle life, took my arm one day and led me aside. He was, he said, a little anxious about himself, for he was getting into the habit of taking more drink than he was wont to take. He had been taking it when he felt lonely and depressed to ease the longing of his heart.

"I never touch it at home," he said, "the society of my dear little wife is all the stimulant I need. I would give the world to be with her now—just to sit in my chair and watch her at her sewing or knitting. The separation is too much for me and, you know it has lasted nearly three years now."

The men's thoughts pass easily from the sweetheart to the mother who bore them, and we have a third class, The Home Song. I have been awakened in the night by men, going up the line, singing "Keep the Home Fires Burning." It is very thrilling to hear in the dead of night, when every singer is within range of the enemy's guns.

On the eve of one big battle, a soldier handed me a letter in which he gave me the addresses of his father and his sweetheart, so that I could write to them if he fell.

"In the last battle," he said, "one of my brothers was killed and another wounded. If I fall I shall die without regrets and with a heart content; but it will go hard with those at home; and I want you to break the news gently. These are terrible times for those at home." "These are terrible times for those at home." That is their constant refrain, and it finds an echo in the songs sung by them.—Chaplain Thomas Tiplady.

"DEATH OF WOLFE."

Famous Painting Presented to Canada Was Copied for George III.

Sir Robert Borden recently announced the presentation to Canada, through Lord Beaverbrook, of West's famous painting, "The Death of Wolfe." The gift is made by the Duke of Westminster, who, in writing to Lord Beaverbrook, says the painting has hung at Eaton Hall since the days of his great-grandfather, who purchased it from the painter.

The picture was painted in 1775, when West was painting other pictures at Eaton for Richard, Lord Grosvenor. This was the first battle picture in which the figures were represented in the uniforms of the day. Sir Joshua Reynolds, hearing that this was West's intention, implored him to abandon the idea, affirming that it was against all tradition, and the picture would lose grace and elegance. West replied that what he would lose in grace and elegance he would gain in simplicity. When Reynolds visited West's studio he subsequently expressed great admiration of the picture.

George the Third ordered a replica, which is at Hampton Court, and the Monckton family later ordered another picture on a larger scale.

"They Won't Believe Me."

Florence Harper, the Canadian writer, in her new book, tells of a Chicago drummer's terrible worry in Petrograd at the beginning of the rioting and bloodshed when the revolution started. To those at his hotel who could understand him he kept moaning:

"'They won't believe me; they will just call me a liar. What good does it do me to run from the Cossacks and go through all this fighting, if the boys at home won't believe it when I tell them. They won't believe me! They will just call me a liar.' He did not care about the revolution, he had only one worry, and that was to have his wild tales believed when he sat over a stein of beer, surrounded by a few congenial souls in his favorite cafe in Chicago. For three days we listened to his wailing: 'I ran from them; I ran six blocks without stopping! Do you think anybody will believe that when I get back to Chicago? They won't believe a word of it! Isn't it just my luck?' He begged Thompson to take a picture of him in the mob, just to have some evidence that he was really there. He lived in the Hotel Du Nord, which forms one side of the square at the Nikolai Station. That was one of the most dangerous localities in town. It was impossible for him to get back there; in fact, he wasn't caring about trying to. Whenever any of us were feeling particularly blue, we would find O'Neil and listen to his wail. I hope his friends in Chicago did believe him, because he was there and in it all."

ADVERTISING

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING offers the manufacturer the best possible way to eliminate waste circulation, for it enables him to advertise where he has and can get distribution. To sell goods profitably depends largely on ability to reach the maximum number of people at the minimum cost.

Newspaper advertising is the quickest and surest means of getting retail distribution. It shows the retailer that a wide spread demand is being created.

The dealer is always ready to sell products that sell easy. He is a reader and an advertiser of the daily newspaper, and is sold on newspaper advertising, for he knows what it will do.

You prove to the retailer you are doing the utmost to help create a demand for him; this is real distribution. You can expand at will, adding steadily to your markets making each a permanent stronghold.

"THE STATESMAN"

Issue of New Liberal Weekly Edited by Mr. Lindsay Crawford Formerly of the Toronto Globe, Sets Forth its Purpose—Will Strive to Unite Canadian Thought and Action for Problems That Must be Solved After the War

e first number of The Statesman ared on Saturday last at 26 Adel- St. West, Toronto, at the modest of $2.00 per annum, or five cents py. It is proclaimed as "a Na- l weekly Journal of progressive ght." It is edited by Mr. Lind- Crawford, who was formerly an rial writer on The Globe when Journal was an exponent of Lib- principles, and was an opponent principled self-seekers and poli- fakirs.

he imperative need of such a Jour- under such an Editor is apparent ll who love justice, liberty and . So far as the newspapers of onto are concerned The States- has the field all to itself because orrow its own words from its editorial "There is no Daily chester Guardian or Weekly ion Nation to maintain a high of independent thought."

ere never was a time in the his- of this Country when the appli- n of sound economic principles essential to our National wel-ur civilization is being daily con- ted with problems which like the e of Sphinx "not to be answered, be destroyed." We are in the test need of honest guides and are in the greatest need at the ent time of Journals that will d by sound principles and will ose the faddist, the grafter and the crat.

is therefore to be hoped that a e and influential number of sub- bers will become constant readers The Statesman.

he following extract from its first rial indicates its lofty aims and poses:

"As a Journal of advanced Lib- al thought The Statesman will iscuss all phases of public ques- ions in a broad and generous spir- free from partisan bitterness nd with a single eye to the rowth and development of all that best in the life of the nation. The war has brought the country ace to face with tremendous prob- ems, which will tax to the utter- most the resources of Canadian tatesmanship. These grave prob- ems can be solved only in an at- nosphere of unity and toleration. It will be the chief aim of The Statesman to mitigate as far as possible the ugly spirit of faction- ism and to bring all classes to- gether for the discussing of the problems of reconstruction that call for solution. The country is at present divided into warring and irreconcilable class interests. It surely must be the duty of all who love their country and who seek its welfare to bring these con- flicting interests into closer har- mony, so that every sectional or class interest may be subordinated to the general welfare and, pro- gress of the whole community. Above all, our public life must be purged of the malignant and dis- ruptive tendencies to racial and sectarian strife which have proved the bane of Canada in the past. In the creation of an invigorating at- mosphere of good-will and unity lies the hope of our country when it emerges from the terrific struggle with Germany, staggering under the crushing burdens of unexam- pled war.

"To reconcile and unite the pro- gressive forces of the country must be the primary end of Liberalism in the present crisis. The refash- ioning of New Canada as a land in which Liberty, not Privilege, will be the dominant note, will come at a time when the metal is still hot in the crucible. Whatever changes take place after the war will stamp for generations to come the char- acter of our political and social life. Unless the progressive forces unite in legislative demands that will make Canada truly safe for Democracy, the moulding of our country's future will be left in the hands of privileged classes which in the past have taken heavy toll of the people and controlled and exploited our national resources."

"A new generation of Liberals has arisen which seeks to translate its new ideas and hopes into real- ities. It will be the purpose of The Statesman to give Voice to this new movement so that the cause of Liberalism may be recharged with the fresh enthusiasm of this fuller faith of a New Democracy."

ALLIED EXPEDITION WOULD MEET WITH LITTLE RESISTANCE

Red Guard Army Did Not Number Much More Than 50,000 Men—Russian Masses Are Sick of the Bolsheviki.

NEW YORK, July 29.—Gregory M. Ignatieff, member of the Russian Supply Committee in this country, having just returned from Moscow, stated that an allied expedition in Russia would meet with little or no resistance, as the Red Guard army did not number much more than 50,000 men, mostly quartered in Moscow and Petrograd.

"My rough guess is that the entire Russian Empire does not contain more than 3,000,000 supporters of the Bolsheviki cause. Distributed over thevast territory of Russia, such a number means absolutely nothing compared to the millions of Russian peoples who are eager to throw off the yoke of Germany and Bolshevism and who would rally instantly to any offer of help in that direction. An allied expedition could safely proceed through Siberia without an opposition at all, because in Siberia the masses are largely out of sympathy with the Bolsheviki and are remote from the influence of the Central Soviet of Moscow.

"Even in Russia, the chances of any resistance from Bolsheviki are small, because they are scattered over large areas, and do not exist in any compact form outside of large cities like Odessa, Moscow and Petrograd. At such centres the worst that could be expected would be some show of force from the Red Guards, but it would be very brief because the Bolshebiki do not fight the moment they realize that they are up against some kind of organization. They scatter and run, or surrender and go over to the other side.

"Furthermore, most of the Red Guards in Moscow are Letts, serving for pay, each man receiving some- thing like 300 rubles a month It is one of the highest paid services in the country. Many of these Letts, however, are patriotic and are anti- German, and while they render ser- vice to the Bolsheviki under the nom- inal peace that now existe between the two countries, they need only be shown that war has been resumed against Germany, when they would rapidly swing to the side of the Allies."

Mr. Ignatieff stated that it was the custom of the Soviet Government to treat the Red Guards exceedingly well, in order to retain their loyalty. Not only would they be well paid, well clothed, and well fed, better than any other class of the population, but ordinarily the Red Guards would be billetted around to the best houses in the city, every bourgeois family being compelled to receive at least one Red Guard as a permanent in- habitant in the household.

"There seems to be no other pur- pose in this practice," said Mr. Ig- natieff, "than to make the families of the middle class as miserable as possible. It is not uncommon to see a Red Guard enthroned in the best room of a bourgeois household, watching the other members of the family with a rifle across his knee."

Describing some of the excesses committed by the Bolsheviki against the bourgeoisie, Mr. Ignatieff told of an incident in Blagovostchenk, Siber- ia, where the local Soviet was com- posed entirely of criminals, with a notorious counterfeiter as President.

"One day," he said, "it occurred to this counterfeiter that the bourg- eoise of the community ought to be punished. Consequently, he collected a score or more of children ,from 14 to 16 years of age, belonging to bourg- eois families, and ordered them to be shot on the ground that they were counter-revolutionary. The parents of the children offered their own lives in place of the children, but the Soviets wouldn't have it so, and the children were shot."

"The Russian masses are sick of the excesses of the Bolsheviki, and yearn for the day when they will be released from the destructive plague of Bolshevism and Red Guards. If the Allies don't help them, the time may come when they will be com- pelled to seek that help from an en- emy source, because there are many Russians, especially in the towns, who have come to the point where any order, even though it be German order, is preferable to Bolshevik disorder."

he preliminary hearing of Nichol- Deberardini was postponed this rning until Tuesday, August 6th. is charged with doing grievous ily harm to Lindora Marcatulio h intent to kill, on Sunday, July . Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for berardini and succeeded in tem- arily liberating him on $2,000 bail two sureties of $1,000 each, sub- ibed by Nicholas Febbo and John mpson, both Italians living on rnell street.

Thompson is a Scotch name," d the magistrate. "What is your lian name?"

"Thomasino" replied the little Ital-

Magistrate Dumble remarked that lians should be extremely cautious about carrying knives, because of their flashing temper.

"I never carry a knife," Thomp- son said, and Febbo declared that Italians carried only ordinary knives for whittling.

"They seem to bring the habit with them to this country, and we want them to do away with knives. Their temper is too quick, and the result brings trouble to themselves and to their families and friends. It gives Italians a bad name."

Mr. Febbo agreed with the Magis- trate in that particular, but denied that Italians as a class here carried any other knives than little pocket ve ies that most men use.

M. Gordon intimated that Macat- ulio would probably be able to leave the hospital by August 6th and attend police court.

TROUBLES OF A MERCHANT AND JUST HOW TO STOP THEM

Great Interest Manifested in the Lecture and Film Story to be Given Free This Evening in T.A.S. Hall—Capacity Audience Expected.

Merchants and salespeople of this city are manifesting great interest in the retail merchandising lecture which is being brought here by the Retail Merchants Association and which will be given free of charge this evening at 8 o'clock in the T. A. S. Hall, Simcoe street. The lecture, which will be given through the courtesy of the National Cash Register Company, Dayton, O., contains the results of that concern's experiences in dealing with merchants in all parts of the world, and is the most comprehensive lecture of its character on the road to- day.

How to Advertise.

Mr. W. H. Farley, expert lecturer will tell by means of stereopticon slides and motion pictures the causes of failure in retail business, and ex- plain some of the latest methods of storekeeping. One of the features of the lecture will be that part devoted to newspaper advertising. The writ- ing of newspaper advertisements, their value to the retail merchant, and the necessity for advertising con- tinually will be taken up, and ex- plained in detail. In a like manner the question of window display, de- livery problems, perfection of a store organization and other interesting topics will be discussed.

$30,000 Film.

In addition, the three-reel Essa- nay feature film, "Troubles of a Mer- chant and How to Stop Them," will be given for the first time in this city. This film was prepared for the National Cash Register Company at a cost of $30,000 and has been shown before commercial bodies, conven- tions and other organizations from coast to coast. It is declared to be the best exposition of the troubles of the average retail merchant ever given.

How to Become Prosperous.

In an interesting manner the film tells the story of Mr. White, a gro- cer, who has been brought to the verge of bankruptcy through out-of- date business methods. The reasons for his lack of success become ap- parent as the film unfolds the story. His clerks were indifferent, his goods arranged in a poor manner, his sys- tem thoroughly disorganized. Other troubles also beset him, and as a consequence the grocer was in de- spair. But one day a change came in his career and by the installation of modern business methods, he be- came prosperous. The manner in which he turned the tide in his favour will prove an interesting and edu- cational story to everyone.

Much enthusiasm has been creat- ed in other cities where the lecture has been given, and it is expected that a capacity audience will greet it in this city. All merchants and sales- in this city. All merchants and sales-

He is 13, so I do not ask him to do any heavy work and besides his daily wage I give him 25c every Saturday night as he goes to a nearby vil- lage. So in justice to us farmers I could not keep quiet since reading the aforesaid letter, of course city boys may not be as handy on the farm, but if they did as stated, very surely were worth 75c per day. Germans Mistook Foch's Patience for Weakness and Plunged Army Into a Trap

Believed That France Had Been Bled White and Blundered in Their Drive—Co-operation of the Allies a Great Factor in Recent Success.

STRUGGLES YET TO COME

The New York Times publishes the following cabled report from Paris under the date of July 24:

"Since yesterday," writes Gustave Herve this morning, "the name of Foch has suddenly, throughout the entire world, become as great as that of Joffre." And the entire world, including all of Germany that really knows the facts, undoubtedly agrees with Herve.

Hour by hour as the great Allied victory between the Aisne and the Marne develops, France realizes more the genius of the man who has brought it about, and how sound was the action of the Allies in deciding, in spite of their long hesitation, to place the fate of the whole of their armies and their own priceless future in the hands of this one great soldier.

For several dreary, heartbreaking months murmurs of "Why doesn't Foch attack?" were frequent here. With Foch alone, however, was the knowledge of all the real facts of the situation. Several of these facts might have caused a panic had they been allowed to become generally known, and only the future will reveal to the world in general how critical, almost desperate, was the Allied position at more than one juncture.

General Foch knew that in spite of all appearances the only possible policy was to wait. To every impatient Minister, who, while abating none of his confidence in the Generalissimo, yet failed to see the facts truly as did the great soldier who was strong enough to refrain from all attempt at spectacular avdertisement, Foch answered: "Attendez, attendez." (wait, wait.)

The Germans, with characteristic psychological blundering, mistook Foch's patient logic for inherent weakness. France, their muddle-headed and always overrated intelligence told them, was down and out and had no longer men to fight for her nor Generals to lead them. German scorn of France, based on bought and poorly paid for "intelligence," was one of the great factors Foch relied on to lead them into the fatal blunder which, beginning last week, landed the flower of their armies into the desperately critical situation in which they find themselves this morning.

When Gouraud in the Champagne abandoned Moronvillers Heights before the Germans even reached them, the onrushing Grmans believed the French really were helpless and their triumph at hand. When Berthelot's army simultaneously gave ground in front of Epernary the German commanders shook hands with each other and the Kaiser came out to see the triumph of his arms. Then, to the enemy's unutterable amazement, Foch's moment came. Gouraud had merely played the trick of a clever jiu jutsu student in the Champagne. From his real positions behind he had the German masses under terrible fire, and his gunners who, knowing every inch of the ground and every yard of the distance, heaped the abandoned French lines with German dead.

Berthelot also gave ground before Enernay, but when the enemy, already shouting "Victory!" hurled themselves against the French commander's Italian, French, and American forces, they found a wall of resistance that said "thus far and no further." The arrival of liberal reinforcements in the shape of several divisions of well seasoned British troops relieved Berthelot of all immediate anxiety. Having now got the enemy fatally entangled in the depths of their own salient, far from the possibility of effective help from the north and with thousands of them involved in the dangerous adventure south of the Marne, while Gouraud in the Champagne was holding cheerfully like a wall of brass, Foch suddenly made his tremendous and long foreseen thrust into the exposed flank of the maddened bull between Soissons and Chateau-Thierry. German amazement at this inexplicable lightning stroke from a direction which they were firmly convinced no danger could come was only equalled by the disorder into which they were thrown by this triple destruction of all their tremendous and scientifically thought out plans.

That was only the beginning of Foch's triumph over the men who claim to be the greatest military leaders in the world. How great that triumph will be before the present battle is over can only be gauged for a moment by the degree of his success in preventing the Germans from extricating their defeated and demoralized armies from the critical situation in which he placed them between the Marne and the Aisne.

Foch's great attack against the flank of the German salient is being compared in many quarters to the offensive by which Maunoury in 1914 with his so-lalled taxicab army drove von Kluck back across the Marne. The two offensives only superficially bear comparison. Maunoury's offensive, that sound critic, General Lacroix, points out, was the prelude to a strategic re-establishment conceived and carried out by Joffre, the result of which drove the German lines back to the north of the Aisne. In the present battle Foch's flank attack has developed into a principal operation. "Already," says General Lacroix, "it has forced the enemy, while putting up a most active resistance, to abandon little by little the terrain of his recent offensives in order to concentrate on a new line of resistance. * * * There are yet some severe struggles to come, but the initiative of operations has changed hands and that is the capital point. Foch willed it; he knew how to take advantage of the opportunity and he will never release his grip."

Foch is Cool and Firm, No Bustle Around Headquarters

Has No Kaiser Interfering—Organization Perfected Since He Was Made Generalissimo of the Allies Forces—Has the Confidence of the Governments.

WITHOUT MILITARY AIRS

London. — Nothing since the war has put allied Europe in such fine spirits as General Foch's reappearance in his own proper role. He has been "lying doggo" all these months awaiting a good opening and the arrival of American reinforcements, but he has never drifted a minute.

To Foch, the student, philosopher, and master-strategist, the Kaiser's battle has been a wonderful opportunity. In the darkest hours he has never been depressed. There is never the slightest bustle around his headquarters. One of our American generals called there one day when the action was at a critical stage. After offering salutations, he was about to leave, but the Generalissimo insisted on his staying the whole afternoon, during which they discussed general matters.

On General Foch's table the whole battle is laid out, and while his generals are fighting one action he is preparing another. He can figure pretty closely what Ludendorff will do in given circumstances. The matching up of brains between these two opposing leaders has become a feature of the war, now that the forces are about equal and the Germans have ceased to monopolize the offensive. Foch has one clear advantage over his rival—he has no Kaiser nosing about. Correspondents who were formerly attached to the German headquarters tell me the Kaiser made himself an awful nuisance, and Ludendorff and Hindenburg resorted to all sorts of subterfuges to mitigate the inconvenience and injury of his constant interference with military matters. Foch had his difficulties at the outset, but his grip has steadily tightened, and after May 27 he perfected the organization and assumed more control.

Though he is a strict disciplinarian General Foch is an excellent diplomat and gets on well with his associates. Only such a man could have ironed out all the difficulties inevitably attendant upon putting a Generalissimo in charge. From now on our unity should work more smoothly than Ludendorff's. Foch has gained the full confidence of all, and all the allied governments will back him up to the limit. Fortunately he is not a man to abuse his power. He has as much tact as firmness. With all his remarkable vision his feet are always on the ground. He is as plain as an old shoe, entirely without military airs, delightfully free from egotism. Thorough preparation and quick action are the combination he believes in. To quote one of his expressions —"The victory always goes to those who merit it by superior force of intelligence and will." Such are the comments one hears everywhere in London. Not even Paris rejoices more heartily in the success of this real soldier, whose motto might be the words graven on the gate of an ancient city: "Be bold. Ever be more bold. Be not too bold."

In Tropical Countries Liver Chill Very Common

In Northern latitudes also the liver is a very unruly organ, and requires careful watching. The concentrated vegetable juices in Dr. Hamilton's Pills act directly upon the liver and stimulate it to action to a normal basis. The blood is purified, the skin grows clear, headaches disappear and robust health is firmly established. No medicine for the stomach, liver or kidneys can compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. box at all dealers.

MILK PRODUCERS PLAN ORGANIZATION

Farmers Contemplate a Central Distributing Station.

Plans and details are shaping up among the farmers of Peterborough to secure a better price for milk, both for the producer and for the consumer. Under the present arrangements milk brought in by the farmers is sold at 5 1-4 cents a quart. By organizing, with the possibility of subsequently installing a central distribution centre, the farmers hope to raise the price for themselves and lower it to the consumer.

Speakers will come from Toronto who will assist the farmers in their project.

Miss Tully in putting up her parasol frightened the horse causing it to run away. All three occupants were thrown to the ground but none seriously hurt except Mr. McGuire. Presented Clock to Miss Elsie Fallis

A very pleasant event took place at the Park Street Baptist Sunday School at the close of the school yesterday, when Miss Elsie Fallis, teacher of the Primary Class, was called to the platform and Mr. W. H. Moore, Assistant Superintendent, read the following address. At the proper time Mrs. B. Lemon presented Miss Fallis with a beautiful clock.

Peterborough, July 28, 1918.

Dear Miss Fallis,—It is with deep regret that we learn of your removal from our midst, and we cannot let the occasion pass without in some way showing to you our deep appreciation for your kindness, patience and perseverance as Primary Teacher.

We also wish to thank you for the great interest you have taken in our children who have been under your teaching and guidance from Sunday to Sunday.

We would ask you to accept this clock as a slight token of our love and esteem, and we trust that the future may hold for you great joy and happiness in your new sphere of life to which you are entering.

We trust and pray that God's blessing may rest upon you and in whatever vineyard you may be called upon to do His work.

With love and best wishes from the mothers of the Primary Class of Park Street Baptist Sunday School.

Mr. Fry, Superintendent, and Mr. H. Goodwin, also made a few congratulatory remarks.

The school then closed by singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Miss Fallis' wedding took place this morning to Mr. Harold Selton, of St. Catharines, formerly a Sunday School teacher in Park Street Baptist School.

WINDSORITES ARE PEEVED.

Allege Discrimination is Shown in Handing Out Coal.

WINDSOR, July 29.—That this city is being discriminated against by both the Federal and Provincial Fuel Controllers is believed to be shown by an investigation of fuel needs of the border cities now being made by the Civic Industrial Committee and the Border Chamber of Commerce.

The investigation has already disclosed, Windsor officials declared, that London has had only one-third more hard coal this year than during 1917, while Toronto and Brantford have more anthracite than they had last year.

REV. F. J. SAWERS WILL GO OVERSEAS

Rev. Canon Cornish Will Take Over Duties in Cobourg.

Rev. F. J. Sawers, son of Mr. Augustus Sawers, 298 Brock street, leaves his parish, Cobourg, where he is rector of St. Peter's Church, for overseas duty this week. The unit to which he will be attached is not yet known. During Mr. Sawer's absence at the front Rev. Canon Cornish, who endeared himself so greatly to the hearts of St. John's congregation during his short stay in Peterborough as rector, will take Mr. Sawer's place and will arrive from the west in the latter part of August.

Captain Sawers had long ben desirous of going overseas but had no idea his opportunity would be given to him so soon and was surprised at receiving last week his orders to report in Kingston this week. He conducted service yesterday in St. Peter's church in uniform. Being an old member of the Queen's Own while attending Trinity he reports for his new post of chaplain with the C.E.F. with some military experience.

Food Board Flashes

The latest reports from the British Ministry of Food indicate that there will be a serious shortage of jam in Britain this year. Here is a chance for Canadian women to help by using all the fruit they can and by making preserves of wild berries whenever they are able to secure them. The more jam used the more butter and canned goods will be saved for export.

Jam is on the soldier's ration list and he must not be deprived of this whatever happens. Besides providing a sweet the sugar is extremely essential in his fare and adds to his energy and all-round efficiency.

Ordinarily too much sugar is used in the making of jam. A pound a sugar to a pound of fruit is the old-fashioned theory and it is a wrong one. Three-quarters of a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit makes better jam, while half a pound is sufficient where the fruit is extra sweet.

Lovely afternoon frocks are made of tan and brown chiffons.

Organdie collars and cuffs are indispensable to cotton frocks.

WEDDING BELLS

SELTON—FALLIS.

A pretty but quiet marriage took place this morning at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Fallis, 153 Rutherford Ave., their eldest daughter Elsie, being united in marriage with Harold E. Selton, of Liverpool, Nova Scotia.

The happy couple left on the 8.25 a.m. train G.T. for Nova Scotia, where they will visit Mr. Selton's parents home, for three weeks. Afterwards returning through Peterboro, en route to St. Catharines, where they will reside. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. Brown of Park street Baptist church of which the two young people were members.

The presents were numerous and the best wishes of their many friends go with the couple, entering on their new sphere in life.

Two women like to start a fuss and then leave their husbands to fight it out.

King Ferdinand Has Left Bulgaria for Extended Visit

Premier Malinoff Will Replace the King During His Absence

SIGNIFICANT EVENT

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, July 29.—King Ferdinand has left Bulgaria for an "extended trip" to foreign lands, presumably on account of his health, according to French despatches to-day, quoting reports from Basle.

Premier Malinoff, who reorganized the Ministry after the fall of Radaslavoff, will replace the king during his absence, the cable added.

Ferdinand's sudden departure from Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, at the time when the Turco-Bulgar dispute is critical, is regarded as significant in diplomatic circles here.

While nothing has been said, it has been generally known that the Bulgarian throne is on an unstable foundation.

Tired of War.

Bulgaria is tired of the war. Four years of fighting, preceded by the two Balkan wars, in which she lost heavily, have drained her man power. In addition to this, despatches from the Neu Frie Presse, of Vienna, received by neutral cables to-day, stated that the prospect of a very poor harvest is having a distressing effect on the Bulgarian mind.

The comparative ease with which the Malinoff party deposed Premier Radaslavoff and his Germanopsile cabinet, indicates the rapidity with which changes occur in Bulgaria, diplomats point out. Entente influence and propaganda, now gaining headway in the Balkans, together with the success of Allied arms on all fronts, and Turkey's deflection, may easily result in destroying the weaker link in the Pan-German chain. Minister Stephen Panaretoff, of the Bulgarian Legation here, could not be reached to-day, being out of the city. Since the overthrow of the Radaslavoff regime, Dr. Panaretoff has been expecting his recall, being of opposite political affiliations. The inability of the government to send his successor here, probably will delay a change in the Legation until peace is declared, however.

SUDDEN DEATH OF SAMUEL SWARTZ

Was About to Undergo an Operation in Nicholls Hospital.

Samuel Swartz, 432 George street, the boy violinist, who showed great promise of being a celebrity in the musical world, died suddenly this morning in Nicholls Hospital. He had been suffering from tonsilitis and adenoids for some time. Last night his condition became worse and he was taken to Nicholls Hospital. This morning while Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch and Dr. T. P. McCullough were preparing the boy for his operation his condition was such that he had gone beyond medical aid and died in spite of every effort including the pulmotor which was used.

The boy was born in Canada the son of Mr and Mrs. Abraham Swartz who emigrated here from Austria. He was brought to the city eight years ago when three years of age and was sent to the Conservatory where his musical genuis, as a pupil of Miss Laura Logan, attracted much attention. He was later sent to a prominent Toronto master. He was a member of the Children's Orchestra at the Conservatory.

There are two small brothers left. The body was taken this afternoon to Toronto for burial.

Urges Settlement of Posties Strike

Hon. T. W. Crothers Wires From Winnipeg Advice to Ottawa.

WINNIPEG, July 29.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, has wired Ottawa making recommendations for a settlement of the postal strike in the West, and expects within a few hours to be able to submit some proposition to the men which will meet with their approval. This was the statement made by the Minister this afternoon before a mass meeting of labor men in the Labor Temple.

Mr. Crothers told the postal clerks that they were not without some well founded grievances which he would endeavour to have remedied before he left Winnipeg, and that he would not leave as long as he was of any use to the labor men of this city.

A general strike of all organized labor will take place throughout Canada unless the Government rescinds the order that all striking letter carriers and postal clerks be dismissed, and giving Postmaster McIntyre power to employ men or girls to take the place permanently of the strikers, was the statement made this afternoon by Harry Leitch, vice-president of the Trades and Labor Council, to Mr. Crothers.

SITUATION AT OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, July 29.—The conference between the sub-committee of the Cabinet and representatives of the Letter Carriers' Federation to settle the details of the agreement reached at the conference with the full Cabinet on Wednesday last will take place on Tuesday, August 6. This date was suggested by Alex. McMordie, of Toronto and agreed to by the Government.

A LARGE ATTENDANCE EXPECTED TO-NIGHT

Professor Farley in the City to Address Retail Merchants Association and Employees

There never was a time in the history of the Retail Business in all lines in Canada, when it was necessary that sound business methods be put into effect.

Old methods of doing business, must be superseded by up-to-date time saving, labour saving, and money saving ideas or it will be impossible to succeed in business where a few years ago it did not matter as much as it does just now and will in the future.

In order that the Retail Merchants of this City will not be behind the times the Association has arranged for Prof. W. H. Farley to give his important illustrated lecture entitled "Troubles of the Merchant and How to Stop Them," this evening in the T. A. S. Hall, Simcoe street and no merchant or his employee should be absent.

Just to show what one large concern thinks of the lecture might be mentioned that the Woolworth Company local management and all the employees, wherever the lecture is given to be presentdrl upu uup upup given are asked by Head Office to be present.

No special invitation has to be given in this case.

It is hoped that in the interests of good business methods Prof. Farley will address a large audience tonight.

PATRIOTIC FUND

In order to clear up a misunderstanding with regard to those who are entitled to participate in the Patriotic Fund, the committee desire that it be known that the wives of men on service, who are not housekeeping on their own account, and who are without issue, do not go on the fund until they take up house.

A number of applications recently put forward have had to be set aside under the above rule.

RAPID GROWTH KILLS BOY.

NEARLY 8-FEET TALL AND ONLY 19 YEARS OLD — PUZZLED PHYSICIANS.

CAMDEN, N. J., July 28.—As the result of growing too fast, Joseph Yanniuck, 19 years old, died here today. He was 7 feet 10 inches tall, and physicians who had been treating him for a year said death was due to abnormal growth which they found impossible to prevent.

There was no hearse in town large enough to carry the coffin, which was in a box nine feet long. The box was placed on a dray. The coffin itself was 8 feet 6 inches long. The grave was ten feet long and one burial plot was not large enough. An adjoining one had to be obtained.

Allies Pushed On.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, (Noon), July 29.—The Allies pushed on beyond Fere-En-Tardenois this morning and maintained their positions everywhere in the face of strong German counter attacks. The village of Sergy southeast of Fere-En-Tardenois changed hands four times, finally remaining in possession of the Allies. An extremely violent artillery duel was on this morning north of the Ourcq as far as Soissons. In the sector south of the Ourcq our guns also were busy.

Heavy Shell Fire.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, July 29.—Americans at Roncheres sustained and defeated a strong attack by the Guard's division. Chosen Prussian troops were stopped everywhere suffering enormous losses. The eastern wing of the front was comparatively quiet to-day except for artillery fire. During tre night and this morning the Germans launched thousands of shells into the valleys of the Marne and the Ardre.

COUNTER ATTACKS

(Special to The Examiner.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, July 29.—(3:35 p.m.)—The Germans are fighting desperately to retard the Franco American advance northward from the Ourcq. Repeated enemy counter attacks on Serggy last night and early to-day resulted in the village changing hands four times, Remaining in the possession of the French.

South of Sergy, a German guard division attacked the Americans who finally held their line and inflicted enormous losses.

HIS FATHER AMONG FOES.

Youth Who Died in U. S. Army Also Had Brother on Other Side.

GREENFIELD, Mass., July 29. — News of the death in action of Private Julius Sand of this town, received today by his brother Michael, brings to light the fact that another brother, who was a soldier in the German Army, is now a prisoner of the French and that the father is serving in the Austrian Army.

Private Sand was formerly in the poultry business here. He went from here with the second draft contingent, apparently enthusiastic to serve the United States.

BINGOES LOSE PITCHERS

Frock, Higgins and Beckvermit Leave League to Take Positions in Shipyards.

BINGHAMTON, N.Y., July 29. — Samuel Frock, Festus Higgins and John Beckvermit, the three crack pitchers of the Binghamton International League team have left the International League to accept positions in the shipyards at Baltimore. Owner G. F. Johnson granted them their releases on patriotic grounds if the International had discontinued. Haddock, Kay, Barnes, Riley, Hooper and Zimmerman would have accompanied them.

FARM PRODUCTS FOR ARMY.

Huge Quantities Required for U. S. Soldiers Here and Abroad.

WASHINGTON, July 24.— Feeding soldiers in the cantonments and abroad is taking a large proportion of the country's farm products. August requirements of the army, the Department of Agriculture estimated to-day, will call for 25,157,000 pounds of potatoes and 1,731,000 pounds of onions.

Government requirements are expected to call for one-third of the output of canned tomatoes, 25 per cent. of the total output of canned peas, corn, and string beans, about 60 per cent. of the salmon pack, one-half of the output of canned cherries, and one-half that of dried peaches.

MAKING OF ICE CREAM

Food Control Board Permits But 10 Per Cent. Fat.

A Recipe That Has Proven Successful —Stake Vines and Trim Leaves to Grow High-Colored Tomatoes.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

A GREAT many inquiries have recently come to the Dairy Department of the Ontario Agricultural College regarding the new regulation from the Canada Food Board with reference to the manufacture of ice-cream, and also as to methods of testing ice-cream for fat.

Order No. 34, section 8, issued by the Canada Food Board reads: "On and after May 1st, 1918, no person in Canada shall use in the manufacture of ice-cream more than 10 per centum of fats, whether of animal or of vegetable origin; or more than six pounds of cane sugar, to eight gallons of ice-cream."

As a result of recent investigations made in the Dairy Department of the O. A. College, by Messrs. McMillan, Parfitt, and Miss Miller, of the Dairy Staff, we can recommend the following formula or recipe, for a batch or mix which will produce about eight gallons of plain ice-cream of good quality and which will come within the regulations as laid down by the Food Board:

44½ lbs. (4½ gallons) cream testing 18% fat.
1½ lbs. skim milk powder.
6 lbs. cane sugar—1½ lbs. sugar may be replaced with 2 lbs. corn syrup.
4 ounces vanilla extract.
3½ ounces gelatin dissolved in 6 lbs. (½ gallon) skim milk.

The cost of the ingredients in this formula will range from 53 to 67 cents buying in small quantities. If bought wholesale, the cost would be less.

If whole milk and cream are used, mixing equal quantities of these will produce an ice-cream testing not over ten per cent. fat, assuming that the milk and cream are of average fat content—3.5 and 18 to 20% fat respectively.

Three Methods of Testing Ice-Cream for Fat.

It is necessary for the ice-cream maker to test his ice-cream occasionally, and the following methods will give satisfactory results if carefully carried out:

1.—The Glacial Acetic and Hydrochloric Acid Test.

A representative sample of the ice-cream is taken and melted and thoroughly mixed; a 9-gramme sample is weighed into an 18-gramme Babcock cream test bottle. A mixture is prepared using equal parts of glacial acetic acid and concentrated hydrochloric acid. Twenty cubic centimeters of this acid mixture is added to the 9-gramme sample of ice-cream in the test bottle, and is then all well shaken. The bottle is placed in a water bath of 120 to 130 deg. F., and shaken at intervals until a brown color appears. It is then placed in the Babcock centrifuge and the test completed in the same way as for testing cream and the reading multiplied by two.

2.—The Sulphuric Acid Test.

To make the test with sulphuric acid, a 9-gramme sample is weighed into an 18-gramme test bottle. About 9 cubic centimeters of luke-warm water is then added to dilute the sample, in order to have about 18 cubic centimeters of mixture in the bottle. The sulphuric acid is then added slowly, a little at a time, at minute intervals, shaking well after each addition until a chocolate brown color appears in the bottle. No definite amount of acid can be stated, as the quantity will vary with different ice-creams. As soon as the chocolate brown color appears in the ice-cream a little cold water may be added to check the action of the acid. The bottle is then placed in the centrifuge and the test completed in the usual way. The reading is multiplied by two.

3.—Acetic and Sulphuric Acids.

Weigh a 9-gramme sample of ice-cream that has been thoroughly mixed. About 9 cubic centimeters of water is then added to dilute the sample. Add 5 cubic centimeters of acetic acid and then add carefully 6 to 8 cubic centimeters sulphuric acid. Centrifuge, and then add water the same as in other tests. If using an 18-gramme bottle multiply the reading by two, to obtain the per cent. fat in the ice-cream. A 9-gramme bottle which is reduated to give the percentage of fat directly needs no correction when reading. —Prof. H. H. Dean, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

To Grow Tomatoes Most Successfully.

If you are growing tomatoes to a single stem, be sure to remove all side shoots before they become of any size. All the extra food which is used in their growth is wasted and the breaking off of large shoots injures the plants. When August 15th comes it is well to nip off all growing ends so that the fruit will finish ripening, also open out the plant, if very thick, to allow the sunlight in.

When first fruits begin to ripen, apply nitrate of soda,—a teaspoonful in a watering can, full of water,—to the plants twice a week to make a liquid manure and use it instead. These are more especially valuable after the growth has been stopped.

Keep a dust mulch around the plants. If the weather is very dry, soak the ground around them thoroughly in the evening, then make a new mulch in the morning.

When the first fruits in staked tomatoes are beginning to color, remove one-half of each leaf. This will hasten the ripening. Sunlight is necessary for rapid ripening.

Leave only growth enough on your plants to carry what fruit will ripen before frost. There is no use in allowing more to set than will be of use to you and the fruits you leave will be larger. — A. H. MacLennan, Ontario Vegetable Specialist.

OUR LOPSIDED BODIES.

Legs, Arms, Hands and Ears Are Rarely Perfectly Matched.

"I venture to assert that if you measure the legs of every one in this court you will not find a person who has a pair of equal length," said Dr. G. W. Cooke in giving evidence in a London court.

"The human body is not symmetrical, as is commonly believed," said a widely known doctor. "The legs vary in length and circumference, and the arms as well. The right hand is usually bigger than the left, because it is used more. The head is by no means regular in form—in fact, it is often as not lopsided.

"The left leg is generally a little longer than the right, presumably to counteract the overbalancing effect on the body of the right arm, which is usually somewhat heavier and longer than the left, since ninety-five out of every hundred people use their right arm more than their left. The eyes, too, are nearly always different, both in shape and strength, and through sleeping more on one side than another every man's ears are tilted at different angles. Feet, too, are nearly always unlike in shape, due frequently to the wearing of ill fitting boots.—London Mirror.

Nature's Sweet Restorer.

What is the secret of M. Clemenceau's youth? The sobriety of his habits, his Spartan way of life, is partly responsible; but the fresh and eager interest of his mind is more powerful still. He has the precious faculty of Sarah Bernhardt and Napoleon of sleeping at any instant. The fatigue of any journey is relieved by this recreative power, and even a short motor ride affords a few moments of complete repose, a truce in his vast activities. Even when the Allied conferences are being held at Versailles, he sleeps a while after lunch. And from his siesta he arises a new man.—Atlantic.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday, 165 cars, with 3,287 cattle, 224 calves, 790 hogs, and 523 sheep and lambs.

The market was very weak yesterday for all grades of butcher cattle except heavy steers of export quality. For the latter class there is a good active demand at firm prices anywhere from $14 to $15. But these are the only kind of cattle that were in active demand. All grades of butcher cattle appeared to drag and were generally 40 to 50 cents lower than a week ago yesterday. In some cases the decline was even more marked, fair to good loads of butcher, but lacking weight, scarcely getting a bid.

Fat cows were fairly holding their own at last week's prices. Medium cows and heifers very weak.

Lambs again easier. Sheep steady. Calves a little easier.

LIGHTNING KILLED ENNISMORE BOY AND TEAM HE WAS DRIVING DURING YESTERDAY'S STORM

Francis Killen, Aged Sixteen, Was Bringing in a Load of Hay—His Father, Walking Behind, Was Benumbed by the Electricity, But as He Recovered He Saw His Son Fall Lifeless to the Ground.

COMMUNITY SHOCKED

"They're catching it up in the country," remarked a man on George street yesterday afternoon, shortly after four o'clock, as he gazed at the black, threatening cloud that spread over the northern sky, filling the wide arc of the horizon. There was stark truth in that casual reflection, for could he have witnessed, perhaps at that very moment, the brief tragedy enacted on lot five, concession seven, of Ennismore, he would have seen Francis Killen, the sixteen-year old son of Henry Killen, topple from a load of hay, killed instantly by lightning, and the horses he was driving fall dead in their tracks.

The boy and his father were bringing in the hay crop on their farm, which is situated a little more than a mile north-west of the Ennismore church. When the storm broke they were making toward the house with the waggon piled high. Francis was driving, and the father was a short distance behind. A vicious flash of lightning broke over them with awful suddenness. Mr. Killen was momentarily dazed. The overpowering sensation left him as quickly as it had come, and on looking up he saw his son falling inert from the top of the load. Death was evidently instantaneous. It was stated that there was some little sign of life when the body was carried into the house, but it was only the last flicker. Friends said there were no visible marks of the fatal current upon the body; only a contusion from the heavy fall to the ground.

The tragedy and its circumstances cast a deep gloom over the township where the family is well known. The boy Francis is survived by his grief-stricken parents and younger sister and brother, Mary and Eugene.

Mr. Killen lived for three or four years in Peterborough, on Lake street, but decided to return to the country. More than a year ago he lost his barns with their contents of grain and stock, a blow from which he had not fully recovered. The team of horses instantly killed yesterday by the same deadly force that struck down his eldest son, were about five years old and worth $400. The financial loss is, however, effaced by the death of the bright young boy. The community in which he was well known will not quickly recover from the shock of his sudden summons.

OYSTERS LIVE AND DEAD.

And the Big Difference It Makes When They Are Eaten Raw.

Speaking about keeping hotels, Simeon Ford, who won fame and fortune in that profession, had time to say about the succulent oyster:

"People have come and sworn to me that we had the finest oysters in the world. Now, that was all tommy rot. We had the same oysters any one else could buy, although we always bought the best we could. But there is this about the oyster: When he is good he is very, very good; when he is bad he is very, very bad.

"There is a whole lot of difference between a dead oyster and a live one. When an experienced opener puts his knife into an oyster he can tell in a second if the oyster is really alive. He can even tell by the resistance whether the oyster is in prime condition or only fair. If the oyster was not just right our men would throw it away, and they used to throw away about one oyster in every four that we bought.

"A dead oyster isn't fit to eat raw. But the live oyster that is opened right in front of you and stays on the plate just long enough to squeeze a drop of lemon on, he goes down your throat a juicy and a palpitating treat. That's only possible when you stand up to an oyster bar.

"Why, in some of our gilded palaces they begin to open oysters after breakfast and you get them for dinner. Well, you get them, that's all, and they're dead! A corpse is a corpse, even if it is kept on ice."—Henry M. Hall in New York World.

HEART STRAIN.

Unusual Exertion May Cause It, and So May a Fit of Temper.

To keep your temper is rather a good idea, said Dr. Strickland Goodall in a lecture at the Institute of Hygiene. Every time the heart contracts, he said, its force would raise a weight of two pounds to the height of one foot, and it does this from 70 to 140 times every minute.

Acute heart strain was difficult to produce in a young, well nourished and healthy adult, but it was very easy to produce if the heart muscle was anæmic or poisoned or was the seat of degenerative disease.

Running to catch a train increased the heart's work by 228 foot pounds a minute. Ascending a staircase slowly increased the heart's work by 112 foot pounds; ascending quickly by 152 foot pounds.

The enormous amount of total extra work done by the heart was shown in the experiment of riding a bicycle up hill, the gradient of which was one in ten and the length 2,904 feet. The ride occupied three and one-half minutes, and the total extra work done by the heart was no less than one and one-eighth foot tons.

A rest of half an hour daily would save in a year 219,000 foot pounds of work on the heart.—London Chronicle.

HALIFAX, July 29.—The Republic of France has issued a writ in the Admiralty Court here against the Belgian relief steamer Imo for $2,000,000, claiming this to be the value of the cargo of the French munitions ship Mont Blanc, which exploded in Halifax harbor on December 6th of last year, after colliding with the Imo. The case will be heard in the Admiralty Court here at a date not yet announced. A counter claim has been lodged by the owners of the Imo.

John Pollie Will Step Aside to Allow Private to Be Appointed Inspector of C. A. S.

KINGSTON, July 29.—That Mr. John Pollie, the newly-appointed inspector of the Children's Aid Society, will step aside as soon as the A. and N. Veterans or any other organization produces a private who has been in France, and who has qualifications for the position of inspector, was the statement made by a prominent member of the executive of the C.A.S.

No official sanction of his appointment has been received from Toronto yet, but it is expected in a few days. Mr. Pollie was at the police headquarters this morning, and spoke hopefully of his work in his new position. He is well-known in the city and is popular in all circles of the city's activities.

John R. McMahon, travelling correspondent of Country Gentleman, estimates that there is needed for the Canadian harvest 44,000 extra farm hands and that this help must come mainly from towns and cities.

An unprecedented June "drop" in Okanagan Valley orchards has reached the fruit yield so that the total production will not be helped by the increased acreage.

A Serious Matter

There is a delicacy about mentioning piles. And yet so many suffer needlessly who could be readily relieved and cured if they only knew about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Men tell one another about this remarkably successful treatment. But many women pine away their health and vitality, dreading a surgical operation and not knowing how easily they can be cured at home by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

GEORGE IS PLEASED WITH HELEN

CHAPTER CXXXI

We sat around the supper table until the commenced to dim the lights of the grill. Then we said good-night, after accepting an invitation to dine with Mr. and Mrs. Babcock the following day.

"I want to talk a little business with your husband," Mr. Babcock said to me, "and I don't see why we can't talk before you and Mrs. Babcock. I never hesitate to discuss my affairs with her"; he gave her a loving glance, "she is apt to be more often right, in her judgment, than I am. And you strike me as being the same kind of a little woman she was at your age."

"I am afraid you flatter me," I replied, as we broke up with gay good-nights.

"Did you enjoy the evening?" George asked when we were alone.

"Very much." I said quietly. I had purposely waited for him to speak.

"I was very proud of you, to-night, Helen. You made a very good impression on Mr. Babcock and his wife. It is very unusual for them to invite business acquaintances to their home."

"Is Mrs. Collins a friend of theirs?" I had noticed she was not included in the invitation.

"No—she is a friend of the niece."

ENCOURAGED.

I asked no more questions and made no more comments. Had I done as I felt like doing, however, I should have thrown my arms around George's neck and told him how glad I was I had pleased him. But self-restraint was one of the lessons I had to learn—one I must learn if I were to come up to the mark set for me by my husband.

I was wonderfully encouraged by the way he had received my confession about Julia Collins— her talk at the luncheon table. Then, too, he had acted really proud of me, that night. He had not made it apparent, at least to me, as he had done before, that he had me with him on sufferance. He had introduced me in a way that told me, as well as if told those strangers, that he thought me worth while.

I was so happy I felt like dancing and singing; instead, I demurely prepared for bed, chatting with George of the proposed dinner. I could see he was flattered by the invitation, altho he had said very little. I had no idea of the kind of a man Mr. Babcock was—no idea that he was one of the big men of the Windy City. They were so simple and plain, so nice to me, that I felt quite at ease at the thought of dining with them.

Before George left me in the morning he cautioned me to lie down, for a few minutes in the afternoon, so that I might be fresh for the dinner.

"If you need anything to wear, get it this morning," he said, laying a roll of bills on the dresser.

"I don't need a thing," I assured him.

"Well, tuck the money away. You'll find use for it before we leave."

HELEN IS SURPRISED.

When we arrived at Mrs. Babcock's I was surprised. George had said nothing to prepare me for the elegance of their home, the perfection of their service. And yet, it was the simplicity of the host and hostess in their beautiful surroundings, that still impressed me most.

"We are so glad to have you," Mrs. Babcock said to me, as I removed my wraps. "We had a daughter who would have been just about your age, had she lived. Mr. Babcock said you reminded him of her, the moment he saw you. She was seventeen when she died."

"Oh how sad!" I said, wanting to throw my arms about the mother, my eyes full of tears.

"Yes, at first it seemed we couldn't bear it. We could not, had we not had each other. But I had to be brave for my dear husband's sake, and he for mine. You see, my dear, that even if we lost her, there was still much for us to live for."

"They loved each other, and that is what made them brave," I thought, as I followed my hostess downstairs. She had insisted upon going up with me, instead of turning me over to a maid.

The dinner was perfect and perfectly served, altho there were not many courses. The silver and china were exquisite, and the napery the finest I ever had seen. George was in his element. He loved luxury, luxurious surroundings. That is, if there was no trace of the common about them. Here, all was so refined, in such perfect taste, that there was a feeling of harmony about it all which one immediately felt and appreciated.

The business was very lightly touched upon, during dinner. But, as we finished, Mr. Babcock said:

"If the ladies do not object, we will go into the library and have a little talk. Come with us, or not, as you like."

"He knows we will come," Mrs. Babcock said, with a comical glance at me.

HOMEMADE TROUSERS.

With a Word to the Woman Who Makes Her Own Gowns.

Would men ever get anywhere, do you think, if they fussed around with as many disconnected things as most women do? And the worst of our case is that we are rather inclined to point with pride to what is really one of the most vicious habits of our sex.

We have all seen the swelling satisfaction with which the comely young schoolma'am, complimented upon a pretty gown, announces, "I made it myself." And we have all heard the chorus of admiring approbation following the announcement—joined in it perhaps, and asked to borrow the pattern. But really, viewed in the light of reason, what is there about the feat upon which she should so plume herself?

Suppose that a man should point proudly to his nether garments and say: "Lo! I made these trousers." I have not a mental picture of even the most economical of his fellow clerks or mail carriers, or clergymen, or school teachers, crowding around to admire and cry: "What a splendid way to spend your time out of business hours. And it looks just like a tailor made."

Which last is just as truly a lie when we tell it to our fellow women as it would be if men told it to men.—Mary Lee Harkness in Atlantic.

An Employment System.

We should have a national system of employment offices, with branches in every locality, and a central clearing-house. Within this national system should be zones or districts, with clearing-houses for each district, and within the districts should be sub-districts with their own clearing-houses. If a local office in a sub-district could not fill an order, it would telephone the order to its clearing-house, which would seek to obtain a man from some other local office in the sub-district. If the demand could not be filled in the sub-district, it would be transferred by the sub-district clearing-house to the district clearing-house, which would seek a man in the district. Similarly, if the district could not fill the order, it would clear the demand through the national clearing-house. This clearing-house system, if combined with a monopoly of the labor market, would enable the public employment offices to check labor migration by always finding the nearest man competent to fill the job.

G.W.V.A. EXECUTIVE IS IN SESSION

Dominion Association of Veterans Meets in Toronto Next Week.

The members of the Executive of the Dominion Great War Veterans' Association, which will convene next week at the Carls-Rite Hotel, are in session at the King Edward Hotel, drafting amendments to the constitution. Officials of the organization last night declined to discuss any of the questions under consideration, or make reference respecting the possibility of the governing body extending more privileges to associate members, a contentious problem which has been very much in the limelight lately among the local branches of the organization. Officials said they did not intend handing out information until it had been formally submitted to the convention.

LEMON JUICE TAKES OFF TAN

Girls! Make bleaching lotion if skin is sunburned, tanned or freckled

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very, small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons, and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear, and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

A MAN-MADE DESERT.

What German Autocracy Has Done In France.

To stand at the beginning of a road is always wonderful; for on all roads before they end experience lies; sometimes adventure.

And a trench, even as a road, has its beginnings somewhere. In the heart of a very strange country you find them suddenly. A trench may begin in the ruins of a house, may run up out of a ditch, may be cut into a rise of ground sheltered under a hill, and is built in many ways by many men.

As to who is the best builder of trenches there can be little doubt, and any British soldier would probably admit that for painstaking work and excellence of construction, there are few to rival Von Hindenburg. His Hindenburg line is a model of neatness and comfort, and it would be only a very ungrateful British soldier who would deny it. German dugouts, in particular, have been a great comfort to our men since July, 1916.

You come to the trenches out of strangely wasted lands; you come, perhaps, to a wood in an agony of contortions, black branchless, sepulchral trees, and then no more trees at all. The country after that is still called Nord or Somme, still has its old name on the map as though it smiled there but with Sahara, Gobi, Kalahari and radiant white orchards and gardens, but the country named Somme, or whatever it be, is all gone away, and there stretches for miles instead one of the world's great deserts; a thing to take its place no longer with smiling lands, but with Sahara, Gobi, Kalahari and the Kooroo; not to be thought of as Picardy, but more suitably to be named the Desert of Wilhelm.

Through these sad lands one goes to come to the trenches. Overhead floats, until it is chased away, an airplane with little black crosses, that you can scarcely see at his respectful height, peering to see what more harm may be done in the desolation and ruin.

You see many things there that are unusual in deserts; a good road, a railway, perhaps a motor bus; you see what was obviously once a village, and hear English songs; but none who has not seen it can imagine the country in which the trenches lie unless he bear a desert clearly in his mind, a desert that has moved from its place on the map by some enchantment of wizardry and come [illegible]. Would it not be glorious to be a Kaiser and be able to do things like that?

Past all manner of men, past no trees, no hedges, no fields, but only one field from sky line to sky line that has been harrowed by war, one goes with companions that this event in our history has drawn from all parts of the earth. On that road you may hear, all in one walk, where is the best place to get lunch in the city; you may hear how they laid a drag for some Irish pack and what the master said; you may hear a farmer lamenting over the harm that rhinoceroses do to his coffee crop; you may hear Shakespeare quoted and La Vie Parisienne.

In the village you see a lot of German orders with their silly notes of exclamation after them, written up on notice boards among the ruins. Ruins and German orders. That turning movement of von Kluck's near Paris in 1914 was a mistake. Had he not done it we might have had ruins and German orders everywhere. And yet von Kluck may comfort himself with the thought that it is not by his mistake that destiny shapes the world; such a nightmare as a worldwide German domination can have had no place among the scheme of things.

Beyond the village the batteries are thick. A great howitzer near the road lifts its huge muzzle slowly, fires and goes down again, and lifts again and fires. It is as though Polyhemias had lifted his huge shape slowly, leisurely from the hillside, where he was sitting, and hurled the mountain top, and sat down again. If he is firing pretty regularly you are sure to get the blast of one of them as you go by, and it can be a very strong wind indeed.

And so we come in sight of the support trenches, and at the same time perilously near to the limit of space that in these exiguous days the editor is likely to allow to this article.

Where Poets Fail.

"Trouble 'bout these here poets," said the Georgia farmer, "none of 'em make good field hands. They won't plow for fear they'll burt a wild flower, an' they won't swear at a mule for fear the animal's got a soul. But it's my public opinion that they're all afflicted with downright laziness!"—Atlanta Constitution.

CHANGE OF WATER CAUSED DIARRHOEA

People moving from one place to another are very much subject to diarrhoea on account of the change of water, change of climate, change of diet, etc., and what at first appears to be but a slight looseness of the bowels should never be neglected or some serious bowel complaint will be sure to follow.

The safest and quickest cure for diarrhoea dysentery, colic, cholera infantum, cholera morbus, pains in the stomach, sickness and all looseness of the bowels is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mr. T. T. Allard, Parry Sound, Ont., writes: "In the fall of 1914 I was working on the new 'Chiclet Gum' factory, on Carlaw Ave., in Toronto, when I had a violent attack of diarrhoea, owing, I think, to the change of water. One of the foremen advised me to get a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which I did, with the result that I hadn't taken it all before I was completely cured."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Wild Strawberry has been a national remedy for the past 72 years, and is sold by medicine dealers everywhere at 35c, a bottle. Don't let anyone palm off a substitute on you. When you pay your money for the genuine, you've a right to get it. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Few drops on corn or callus stops pain, then they lift off.

Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on your feet, but why care now?

This tiny bottle holds an almost magic fluid. A genius in Cincinnati discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Small bottles of freezone can be had at any drug store for a few cents. Never limp or twist your face in pain again, but get a bottle of freezone and apply a few drops on your tender, aching corns or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you lift it off with fingers.

Just think! You get rid of a hard corn, soft corn or a corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses, without suffering one particle, without the slightest irritation of the surrounding skin. Just a touch of freezone on a sore corn gives instant relief.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WHO WAS THE THIEF?

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Copyright, 1. , by American Press Association.

Adrian Markham, paying teller of the Tenth National bank, was called from his window to the cashier's desk. When he returned a package of bills amounting to $20,000, that had lain on the shelf before him, was gone.

Markham could not at first believe the testimony of his eyes. He had not been absent three minutes. No such package could have been taken out through the bars that protected his window. No one had been in his inclosure with him, and the door of the cage had been closed and fastened by a spring lock. It seemed to the teller that some one of his faculties had suddenly deserted him. But, no; the package had been there before he left the window, and it was not there now. He looked about the cage for it, though he knew full well exactly where it had been left, and nothing except some live being could have removed it. Satisfied that the money had really been taken, he rushed into the president's office and frantically reported the loss.

The president turned in his swinging chair and fixed a scrutinizing glance upon the teller. Convinced that the man's troubled appearance was not feigned, he said:

"Keep a cool head, Mr. Markham. It will help you to recall minutely circumstances pertaining to the case. Who were inside the counters with you when the money was taken?"

Markham gave the names of five employees, all of whom had been and were then busily engaged. "None of them would or could have committed the theft," he said.

The president called the cashier into his office, and after a few moments' conversation the three men went to the cage and inspected it with a view to ascertaining how it would be possible for any one to take the bills. But one weak point appeared. The cage was not covered, and there was a possibility that some one might have stood on a projection of the woodwork outside the frame and have withdrawn the bills. But he could not have reached the bills with his arm and would not have been likely to avoid being seen by some one inside the inclosure, though all but his arm would be screened by the woodwork, which was in all eight feet high.

The party examined the mahogany frame outside the cage and found the imprint of some small square substance, probably the head of a nail or tack. That this imprint had been freshly made was evident, for when examined under a microscope its edges were found to be sharp and not smoothed away as they would have been after a time.

The books of the bank were examined by an expert accountant, and it was discovered that each man's accounts were correct. No one had been concealing a loss. The president was disposed to exonerate Markham, but at a meeting of the directors it was decided to "lay him off." Markham received the information of this action with a crushing sensation.

The case was reported to a prominent detective agency, with instructions to work in two directions. They were to consider the imprint on the woodwork and to establish a close surveillance over every employee. The only information given them as to those who were in the bank outside of the inclosure was that a man dressed rather shabbily had presented a check on another bank at the receiving teller's window. He had appeared to be stupid when the teller told him that he had got into the wrong bank and asked a number of irrelevant questions. So far as could be determined that man was the only person in the bank outside the inclosure at the time he presented his check.

One morning not long after the theft a detective employed on the case was passing through the lobby of a cheap hotel. A man sat in an armchair, tapping the heel of his boot with a cane. The detective heard the cane strike some metallic substance. It occurred to him to ask the hotel clerk who the man was and was told he belonged to a circus company visiting the town, the members of which were stopping at the hotel.

Past experience on other complicated cases which had come under his personal observation and the record of crimes as recorded at headquarters made him suspicious of this man. Desperate characters join shows by reason of their opportunity for theft.

A combination of thoughts flashed in upon the detective's brain. He saw a possible solution to the bank theft. Taking a big risk, he had the man arrested. Upon examination a tack was found in the heel of the man's boot the head of which exactly corresponded with the imprint on the woodwork at the bank.

Of course the man was indignant at his arrest and threatened the detective with all the vengeance the law would give him. The receiving teller at the bank looked at the prisoner, but could not say whether he was the man who presented a check on another bank or not. A hunt through the suspect's room revealed nothing. A search warrant was procured that would enable a constable to go through the circus tent and properties, but after every article had been overhauled nothing had been discovered.

Before giving up the matter the detective resolved to rip up the mattress on which the prisoner slept. There he found the package of stolen money intact.

The exonerated paying teller when informed of the solution exclaimed:

"None but an acrobat could have done it!"

The Man With The Hoe

Hoeing is a severe strain on the back. It calls into play muscles not used much in lifting or in other kinds of farm work.

If you have a weak back you cannot stand much hoeing unless you use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver, Pills to set the kidneys right and remove the cause of weakness and lameness of the back. Just try one pill a dose at bed time and see how much better you will feel.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigour and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro phosphate, which is inexpensive and sold by most druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION.—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

TIRED AND DISCOURAGED

So when spring came I was all run down doing all my work and looking after the children. I felt all tired out, and looked on the gloomy side all the time. METHOD OF TEACHING.

Wherein Our Educators Often Put the Cart Before the Horse.

This simple principle (spirit before discipline) we sometimes seem to lose sight of in our education, consistently putting the cart before the horse.

In the days of the renaissance, when people had caught a vision of a new world, they studied Greek with avidity because they believed it was a path into that world. We reverse the process. We set our students to grinding Greek verbs in order that in an indefinite future they may come in contact with the Hellenic spirit, when what they wanted was a touch of the Hellenic spirit to transform the Greek grammar into a book of magic.

We set them to cutting up earthworms when what they wanted first was to have their thoughts turned toward the mystery of physical life. We put them to studying Italian, trusting that in due time a knowledge of that language may prove an incentive to read Dante, never perceiving that a craving for Dante might be made the strongest incentive for studying Italian.

We red ink and blue pencil their compositions, believing, with a touching faith, that there is some intrinsic beauty in correct spelling and perfect punctuation that will appeal to the undergraduate mind, and all the while what they needed was a sense, however dim, of the wonder of literary creation.—Harold C. Goddard in Century.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acids and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

The War's Loneliest Post.

The man who thinks he has the loneliest job in all the war was recently on leave in London. There he was spending all his waking hours walking the streets and looking at the crowds. Three years ago he was a cog in London's commercial machine. Then he went to Gallipoli. Now he is attached to the Soudanese army near the Abyssinian and Belgian-Congo frontiers. He is the only Englishman in an area of 200 miles and none of the native troops in his command speak English. He has a smattering of Arabic and his only conversation is in that language. Some of his men, who, he says are fine soldiers, were enemies not many years ago. In an interview reported by the Manchester Guardian he remarked that the very sight of crowds was a luxury after his experience. His chief diversion in Africa is playing, "Patience," although this is diversified by incidental lion hunting and the casual chance of shooting other big game.

THAT SON-IN-LAW OF PA'S——Pa Has The Pleasure Of Saving One Thousand Dollars — By Wellington

Munitions Workers

The cost of war is reckoned in blood, in treasure, and in the labour of those behind the lines. Of these, the desire is always to save blood at any cost.

The battle of Langemarck and St. Julien in April, 1915, cost the First Canadian Division 7,000 casualties.

A portion of the cost lies buried in Flanders: some of it languishes in German prisons: the balance of it you see in the maimed men hobbling about your streets.

Ask yourself: Is not any cost easier to pay than that?

It is a fact that the spending of shell saves life and limb.

It is a fact that the spending of shell is limited only by the quantity available.

It is a fact that the output of Canadian munitions has been a large percentage of the amount used by the British Forces. This output, man for man and woman for woman, is now less than it has been, less than it should be, less than it could be.

What do you make of these facts?

Will you work while your brain, your nerve, your sinew lasts, or will you spend men's lives to save yourself a little extra labour?

The cost of war must be paid. Shall it be in work or blood?

The answer lies with you.

Speed Up Your Output!

VISIONS IN THE EYES.

Why It Does Not Appear Absolutely Dark When You Wink.

When a person winks his eyes he momentarily covers the entire eyeballs and everything therefore should turn absolutely black and be in total darkness for the instant. As a matter of fact, he certainly is in total darkness, but he is unconscious of same.

The reason he is unconscious is that the eye is incapable of removing a certain view from itself until an eighth of a second has elapsed. So the view seen just before the ball goes into eclipse continues to be seen for an eighth of a second. But as the eye is not covered by the lid as long as this, a new view arrives to supplement the old view before the old one has vanished. Thus the darkness is not noticed, although there is no doubt that it exists.

This same peculiarity of the eye enables moving pictures to have their being. It also is the reason why a lighted torch whirled rapidly around shows a path instead of a sequence of torches. Also why a rapidly rotating wheel does not show its spokes. If a snapshot be taken of such a wheel it does show the spokes, however, and proves the above fact of persistence. Or if the wheel be viewed by a lightning flash it shows them.—New York World.

He Escaped.

He was standing at the counter of a gun store waiting for a clerk when an acquaintance came in. He was one of those communicative acquaintances who catch the victims by the buttonhole and talk and talk and say things over and over. Presently the clerk came up.

"Do you keep the Maxim silencer?" asked the waiting man.

"Yes, sir."

"Is it any good—will it stop the noise?"

"It will."

"Have you one for a large bore?"

"We have them for all sizes."

"Will they work on a repeater?"

"They'll work on anything."

"Then put one on Bill here and charge it to me."

And in the moment of mystified silence that followed the rude man made his escape.—Indianapolis News.

Tongue Charms.

The tongues of animals have been and still are in some parts of the world favorite amulets. A tongue cut from a living fox is said to ward off disease of all kinds, but as the person carrying one will surely die if he happens to meet a fox at any crossroads the charm is seldom used. The tongue of the vulture plucked out with iron and hung about a man's neck in a new cloth will bring him what he desires, and some East Indians believe that if they do not bite off the tip of the tongue of any wild animal they kill they will not have good luck in hunting.—London Tit-Bits.

An Old English Custom.

In the northern counties of England there was practiced at Easter up to at least half a century ago the curious custom of "lifting." It may still exist. I have before me, writes a correspondent, a newspaper cutting of 1860, giving an account by an indignant commercial traveler of the ritual to which he was subjected on Easter Tuesday by the maids of a hotel at Crewe. He was placed in a chair, lifted three times and kissed by the merry revelers. It appeared that a like privilege might have been his for the exercising on Easter Monday—a privilege which absence made impossible. There is a remonstrance of a century earlier by a man who was treated by the maids of the Talbot inn, Shrewsbury, in a similar fashion, but who in addition had to pay a fee.—London Chronicle.

Worry and Selfishness.

Worry, when you come to analyse it, is not a social vice. We work chiefly over those things which concern the "me." Show me that what impends will leave my bank account intact, my health impaired, my friends and family out, and any further tormenting solicitude that I may feel is frankly academic. I may still take thought and use preventive measures, but I cease as if by magic to worry over the outcome. On the contrary, I can now work for the accomplishment of my object better than ever before, for most worry is not only an arch form of selfishness, but it is the great inhibitor of action. We say "I am worried;" we mean "I fear for myself."—Elliott Park Frost in Atlantic.

Scott and His Secretary.

Sir Walter Scott's amanuensis and much esteemed friend, Willy Laidlaw, often found it difficult to keep up with the rapidity of his dictation, though on one occasion, having to wait for a second or two, he said, "Come, get on," and was answered, "Oh, aye, it is very easy for you, Willy, to say 'Get on,' but you forget I have every word to spin out of my brain."—T. P.'s Weekly, London.

Knew More Than Pa.

"Say, pa, what was the longest day in Adam's life?"

"I am sure I don't know."

"But, pa, you are a minister."

"I can't answer any such"—

"I can. It was the day on which there was no Eve."—Grit.

A Broken Promise.

"Did she promise to obey?"

"That was in the marriage platform, I understand, but when she found how easy he was to boss she rescinded it."—Detroit Free Press.

Athletes at War.

No better proof is needed that the boys who played the games of Canada are now playing the greatest game of all across the ocean than the item to the effect that the Canadians will have an athletic field all their own near London. The grounds were opened a few weeks ago with a track and field day. "Over There" it would be quite possible to gather together more all-star teams of lacrosse, hockey and soccer than could be gathered in Canada at the present time, and it only bears out the argument that sport must be kept alive and the boys even now in the army must be encouraged to play the different games in their spare time. It is creditable to the army officers, both here and in the Old Country that they fully realize the benefits of sport to the men, and are always willing to help along any program of events that are arranged. Nothing would break the morale of the army, especially among the young fellows of this country, as quickly as giving up the different pastimes, and it is to be hoped that the Canadian troops will never be headed by one of those leaders who will listen to the "croakers" who stay at home and declare that sport should be cancelled until after the big battle is over. At present the Canadian army is controlled in most districts by men who are big enough to realize the benefit of a little play, and this is as it should be.

More Fish Caught.

The total value in first hands of all sea fish landed in Canada during the month of April was $1,153,040, as compared with $1,008,955 in the same month last year. The statement issued from the Department of the Naval Service shows that during April, 1918, the catches of salmon, cod, haddock, hake, pollock and flatfish were greater than during the same month a year ago, while those of lobsters, herring, alewives, sardines, halibut and clams were less.

Though the weather on the Atlantic coast was not favorable for fishing operations during April, the outstanding feature of the month's work was an increase of over 28,000 hundredweights in the quantity of cod and haddock landed in Nova Scotia, compared with the catch in April, 1917. Due largely to abnormal ice conditions and bad weather, the catch of lobsters was smaller than a year ago. The catch last month was 22,705 hundredweights, as against 35,295 hundredweights in April, 1917.

The catch of alewives in St. John harbor was almost 9,000 hundredweights less than a year ago, and the sardine catch in Charlotte, New Brunswick, was only half that of April last year.

Medieval Quebec.

Presiding at the annual meeting of the Royal Asiatic Society in London, Lord Reay said British culture had not sought to impose itself upon other people, but to further the national ideals and aspirations of peoples with whom it came into contact. No more striking example of British respect for national idiosyncrasies could be found than in French Canada. The Frenchman who wished to study his past history had to go to Canada to find out what France was like in the seventeenth century. He could find it in Quebec.

The Germans Have Launched a Heavy Counter Attack

West Front Disaster Causes Depression In Germany

DEFEATED THE GUARDS

Rugged American Farmers Threw Crack Boche Regiments Back Across the Ourcq—Heavy Fighting.

RUSHED POSITIONS

(By Ferd S. Ferguson—United Press)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 30. — The Crown Prince hurled the fourth Prussian Guards, one of the "Ace" divisions of the German army against the rugged American farmers at Sergy, in an attempt to check their advance, but the Americans threw them back across the Ourcq.

Today, this famous enemy division is broken. The farmers are in full possession of Sergy and the ground beyond.

Standing out from the other fighting along the Ourcq is the bitter struggle for Sergy, which has been taken and retaken nine times since Sunday morning. To reach this town the Americans waded waist deep across the Ourcq and advanced up the opposite bank in a hail of machine gun fire. They rushed the machine gun positions, swept over them, and took the town. Our artillery aided in holding off the Boches. Then the Prussian guards came up.

Heavy Machine Gun Fire.

Prisoners say they were rushed from Avricourt, northeast of Luneville (150 miles east and south in an airline) especially for counter attack work. They Bivouacked in the Nesle forest, two nights and were then brought out for the Sergy fight.

Behind a German barrage they drove the Americans from the town. The latter called on their artillery for further assistance and returned to the attack, fighting through the streets and from behind crumbled walls. Enemy machine guns had been placed behind barricades of debris and in a ruined church. The machine gun and shrapnel fire was so hot that the Americans lay in the streets close to the burbing, seeking even that shallow protecion.

Doughboys of one battalion style their commander, who won the heart of every man in the outfit, "that new Major." He lay in the debris alongside his men while Boche fire was worst. Then crying "Come On Boys," he jumped up into open and led them in a new dash through streets.

Attacked Four Times.

The Prussians guards attacked four times Sunday following Americans capture of town, each time the Americans retook it. The fifth attack was final, the Doughboys driving off the guards Monday morning despite a vigorous defense.

Statement of prisoners indicate Boches generally plan to hold finally further north, probably at Fismes.

Prisoners say men engaged in moving guns and material were ordered to Fismes.

After failure of their counter attacks, Prussian guards were ordered to retire slowly, inflicting heavy casualties if possible.

A prisoner from one of Bavarian divisions said positions they were ordered to hold were all lost.

What Prisoners Say.

A captured artilleryman said he formerly worked in an airplane factory in Berlin. He participated in general strikes last May and was sent to the front as punishment. He said he and his fellow workers struck because "some wanted peace, some more food, some more money."

In addition to guards, Americans in this region took prisoners from 201st and 10th Landwehr regiments and the 6th Bavarians.

The roads in rear of Allied lines are as jammed as they were at the beginning of the offensive. All are going forward. French lancers are mingling with Doughboys. Some of the latter hastening to lines are so new to actual fighing that their tin hats are unscratched.

CLECHS SEIZE RUSSIAN SHIPS

Troops Have Penetrated To The Black Sea

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, July 30.— Czecho-Slovak troops have penetrated to the Black Sea in South-eastern Russia and have seized two Russian cruisers in the harbour at Novorostok, according to authoritative advices reaching here to-day.

THE ENEMY HAS LAUNCHED A VERY HEAVY COUNTER ATTACK

Attack Was Directed at the American Sector—Americans Were Driven Back at a Couple of Places—Allies Advance at Other Points—Heavy Fighting is Under Way.

FRENCH ARE PROGRESSING NORTH

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, July 30.—The Germans have been counter attacking very heavily along virtually the entire battle front, according to news that reached London shortly after noon to-day. Their attack was especially heavy in the American sector and resulted in driving the Americans out of the village of Serges, about five and a half miles southeast of Fere-En-Tardenois. Another thrust drove the Americans back from Beugneux near Grand Rozoy, northwest of Fere-En-Tardenois. There has been heavy fighting near Busancy, five miles south of Soissons, and also in Plessier Wood, about five miles further south. The enemie's withdrawal is reported still orderly, and military opinion in London discounts the possibility of rounding up the Germans in the salient.

Heavy Fighting.

Very heavy fighting has been in progress along the whole hattle front from Ville-En-Tardenois to Buzancy, according to advices received up to noon. It has resulted so far, however, in very little progress for the Allies. Some advance has been effected by the Allies in the Ardre Valley, along the easterly side of the front toward the Village of Aubilly. A certain amount of ground has likewise been gained near the centre in the neighbourhood of Villers Agron Aiguizy. The main advance on the westerly side front seems to have been at Grand Rozoy, about five miles northwest of Fere-En-Tardenois. French here are progressing north onto the crest of the plateau between the Vesle and the Ourcq.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, July 30.—We captured a few prisoners last night in a successful raid in the neighbourhood of Ayette. Shortly after midnight Australian patrols entered the enemie's positions about Merris. Forty prisoners have been taken by our troops in this locality. Hostile artillery has been active with gas shells northwest of Albert, and has also shown activity at a number of points between LaBassee Canal and Ypres.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, July 30. — During the night no event of importance was reported from the front north to the Marne.

Retreat Continues.

LONDON, July 30.—(Via Reuters)—The capture of Chalmont, where it was expected the Germans would be able to stand, shows the German retreat has by no means ended, and it is doubtful if the enemy will be able to hold the Vesle line, for Allied pressure on two pivots defence south of Soissons and south of Rheims is increasing. Mention of the Scots at Buzancy, south Soissons, is interesting, showing the British are now engaged on the western as well as eastern side of the salient. Should these pivotal positions go in there is still a possibility of the retreat becoming a disaster, therefore the Germans are despenately holding the triangular bastion between Soissons, Oulchy and the Aisne, which General Mangin is hammering from the west, while General De Goutte is advancing northward from Fere, endeavouring to turn it.

Huns Suffer Heavy Losses

Losses in Recent Operations Estimated at 250,000 - A Berlin Report

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 30.— The Germans have launched a heavy counter attack on the whole Soissons-Ourcq front, it was learned this afternoon.

The enemy so far has engaged seventy-one divisions (872,000 men) on this front, ten of which belonged to Crown Prince Rupprecht's army group.

Correspondents in the Rheims-Soissons salient declare the Germans have lost thirty thousand prisoners in their recent operation and that other casualties will total 250,000.

Material Destroyed.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, July 30.—"All material was destroyed before the well-prepared retirement to positions near Fere En Tardenois and Ville En Tardenois," a semi-official despatch from Berlin states to-day.

Caused Depression.

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, July 30.—The west front disaster caused a depression in Germany similar to that the Piave debacle did in Austria-Hungary, said a Berne despatch received here to-day. The south Germans accuse the German General Staff of deliberately sacrificing troops of the Southern German States.

A NEW STRIKE BREAKS OUT

Machine Guns Were Used to Suppress the Movement

Canadian Press:

AMSTERDAM, July 30. — A new strike has broken out at Kalk, Rheinish Prussia, near Cologne, according to Echo Belge. Machine guns were used to suppress the movement and the leaders were arrested, the paper declares. The police were still busy when the report was sent, dispersing the crowds which continued to gather in the streets.

Merris Taken In To-day's Attack

Australian Troops Captured the Village After a Few Minutes Fighting

(United Press.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

With the British Armies in France, July 30. —The Australian troops captured Merris by a surprise attack early to-day.

The Australians quickly surrounded the village shortly after midnight. After a few minutes snappy work the place was cleared of the Germans and outposts were established to guard against surprise counter attacks.

CROP SITUATION IS ONE FOR ANXIETY

Resolution Passed by the Food Controllers of the Allied Countries

Canadian Press:

OTTAWA, July 30.—That rigid economy and elimination of waste in the consumption of all foodstuffs must be continued throughout the allied countries to guard against harvest failure and the possibility of having to feed larger drafts from America to Europe, forms the substance of a resolution passed by the Food Controllers of Great Britain, United States, France and Italy and forwarded to the Canada Food Board to-day. The Canada Food Board says the crop situation in Britain is one for anxiety. The drought, early frosts and labour shortage will cut the production below previous estimates.

TURKEY'S BREAK WITH GERMANY NOT CONFIRMED

Authorities Inclined to Doubt That There Has Been An Actual Split Between the Nations

ALL IS NOT WELL

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, July 30.— The report that Turkey has broken with Germany, though unconfirmed here to-day, gave increased evidence that all is not well at Germany's back door.

Authorities inclined to doubt that there had been an actual split between the nations. But they did admit there was sufficient evidence of verity in the stories to indicate that Turkey is increasingly imperious in her demands on Germany and Bulgaria.

Reaching Out.

State Department advices recently have shown that the Turks were reaching out with greedy hands for territory now that the Teutonic Entente considers Russia and Roumania fair spoils. This has engendered bitterness in Germany.

It is doubted that Turkey would split with Germany without first trying to strike a bargain with the Allies. Reports that King Ferdinand, of Bulgaria, has departed mysteriously, constitute another angle of the turmoil brewing among Germany's friends.

This Government is still awaiting an official Turkish answer to its demands for information as to the anti-American outrages at Tabriz.

8 PERSONS FELLED BY LIGHTNING BOLT

All Escaped Death, but Toronto Soldier Was Badly Burned.

Whitby, July 29. — During the thunderstorm of Saturday afternoon, the home of Mrs. C. Brown, near Audley, Pickering township, was struck by lightning, and Sergt. C. E. Bradley of Toronto, very badly burned. Sergt. Bradley, with a party of friends, including Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Booth, Mrs. C. E. Ray, Mrs. Mabel Ray, and Miss M. Jamieson, of Toronto, had arrived at Mrs. Brown's by automobile, just before the storm broke. Miss Ray was standing inside the screen door looking at the storm, when a bolt struck a cedar tree in front of the door, followed the draft to the open door, smashed the screen door to pieces, singed the hair of Miss Ray and knocked her to the floor, and passing in where Sergeant Bradley was seated, tore the boots and socks from his feet, tore his trousers, and very badly burned his limbs right up to his body. All the inmates in the house were violently thrown to the floor, but were otherwise uninjured.

Another section of the bolt entered a west upstairs window, shattered the mirror of the dresser, tore a hole through the floor, ceiling and kitchen floor, and slivered a beam in the cellar.

Sergt. Bradley was removed to his home in Toronto after his dreadful burns were dressed by a Pickering physician.

A horse owned by Arthur Jeffrey, feeding in a nearby field, was killed.

LINDSAY MAN FINED.

Failed to Report an Automobile Accident to the Local Police.

J. J. Hendricks, of Lindsay, was fined $8.70 in police court this morning for failing to report an automobile accident in which he was involved. On Saturday, July 20th, he was driving south on Water street when he bumped Jopling and Sons' car as it backed out of their lane north of Brock street. The Hendricks car failed to stop, but the little Ford followed its smoke down Water street and reported its number to the police.

HEAVY FIGHTING CONTINUES NORTH OF THE OURCQ RIVER

Fresh Troops and Supplies Are Advancing While the Backwash of This Stream Consists Mostly of Ambulances Carrying Wounded—German Airmen Brought Down.

AMERICAN GIRLS FORM RELIEF UNIT

(United Press Service.)

(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 30. — Two ever-moving streams of traffic over the roads between the Ourcq and the Marne testify to the intensity of the struggle north of the former river.

Fresh troops, guns, ammunitions and supplies are advancing, while the backwash of this stream consists mostly of ambulances carrying wounded.

At hastily established dressing stations in villages, in woods and at crossings, the wounded are laid on the ground, quickly attended to and "sorted out," then sent on to the rear in large ambulances. Doctors and attendants who have not slept for forty-eight hours remain at their work. Most of the wounded are reaching hospitals, fifty miles behind the lines, within four hours of the time they are hurt.

Relief Unit.

American girls comprising a unit for the relief of civilian war victims, who were near the front, hastily manned automobiles and, speeding to the front carried wounded from dressing stations to hospitals, over roads that were constantly under bombardment.

German airmen attempted to hamper the Americans by pouring machine gun fire into the roads last night. A number of doughboys, in charge of a sergeant turned their automatic rifles upward and literally got "two birds with one stone."

They wounded the pilot of one machine, who lost control and drove his plane into another. Both machines dropped near the Americans.

Population is Getting Nervous

The New German Retreat Became Known Yesterday Throughout Germany.

(Special to The Examiner)

PARIS, July 30.—The new German retreat in the Soissons - Rheims pocket, which became known only yesterday caused extraordinary nervousness among the population in Berlin and throughout Germany, according to a Zurich dispatch to the Journal today.

The Cologne Gazette and the Lokal Anzeiger declares that loss of ground of the west front is "unimportant."

Resolution Adopted By Local L.O.L. Lodge

At the regular meeting of Duke of Manchester L.O.L. No. 50, held July 11th, 1918, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Be it resolved that the Loyal Orange Lodge No. 50, meeting at Peterborough, with 154 members in good standing, and 65 members on service, joins the various ministerial associations in demanding a full, thorough, impartial enquiry in the circumstances attending the raid on the Jesuit Novitiate at Guelph, on June 7th, 1918; cherishing, as we do the motto of "Equal rights to all and special privileges to none," we feel that we owe a debt of gratitude to the Protestant Ministers of Guelph for the firm and reasonable stand they have taken, and desire to express our determination to give them all the moral and material support in our power to press upon the Government of the day the absolute necessity of an official enquiry at which the Ministerial Association of Guelph shall be represented, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice; Hon. S. C. Mewburn, Minister of Militia, and the Prime Minister, Sir R. L. Borden; and that copies be sent to the daily press and The Sentinel."

LIGHTNING BROKE WATCH IN POCKET OF FRANCIS KILLEN

A slight abrasion on the left heel, that might have pased as a broken blister, was the only mark left by the lightning that killed Francis Killen on his father's farm in Ennismore, yesterday afternoon. The report of the fatality appears no page one. The boy's hat was torn, his watch was smashed, and the boot was almost torn from his left foot. There was not a mark found on the horses, which were also killed.

THE WEATHER

A change to much cooler conditions has given an agreeable variation to the brand of weather we have had of late. The storm of yesterday evening gave a total rainfall of .79. Last night's lowest temperature was 55; to-day at noon 67 degrees. This date last year was the warmest day of the year—viz., 95 degrees.—W.P.

Admits Failure of Submarines

Admiral Von Holtzendorff Attempts to Explain the Steady Flow of "Sammies" Into France.

(Special to The Examiner)

THE HAGUE, July 30— Explanations of the steady flow of American troops into France were given in an interview with Admiral Von Holtzendorff, printed in the Cologne Gazette, it was learned today. The German Admiral, who predicted that submarines would account for American transports, declared the failure of the under-water craft is due to the fact that transports are able to make landings from the North of Scotland to French Mediterranean ports.

Little Chance of Success.

"Should our submarines lie in wait off these ports, to get a chance shot?" He asked. "The transports are strongly protected by convoys and do not arrive regularly. Taking all this into consideration, it is evident how little is the prospect of success in the employment of the submarine against American transports.

"The British assertions that shipbuilding is exceeding the sinking of submarines and that the destruction of submarines exceeds the output are incorrect. To July 1, 1918, the enemy's shipping and cargo losses amount to $12,500,000,000."

On February 12, 1916, Von Holtzendorff declared that within six months the submarine campaign would reduce England to suing for peace.

Peterboro Red Cross Society

SEWING MEETINGS WILL BE DISCONTINUED

The Red Cross work room at the Public Library will not be open for work Wednesday, July 31st. The sewing meetings will be discontinued until September.

This brief holiday has been made possible by the fact that the auxiliaries and the central work room have, during the past two months, responded well to the request for an increase in supplies.

The Knitting committee will be in attendance to-morrow afternoon as usual to receive socks and give out wool. The committee would like if all those willing to knit during August to get a supply sufficient for the month, as the committee will not be at the Library until the 1st Wednesday in September.

The Packing committee ask that all the auxiliaries send to the Public Library as soon as possible all the finished articles which they have on hand. L. J. Davidson, Secretary.

COUNTER ATTACKS

This Morning's Attack by the Enemy Appear to Be Magnified Rear Guard Actions

COVERING MOVEMENT

(United Press.)

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

New York, July 30. —Von Hindenburg's counter attacks started this morning north of the Ourcq, give evidence of being primarily magnified rear guard actions for the purpose of trying to prevent the allies from breaking through the German front.

Between Soissons and the Ourcq is Von Hindenburg's most dangeraus sector. If General Foch were to succeed in penetrating the German line near Soissons, a real disaster would overtake Von Hindenburg's forces.

That Von Hindenburg has suddenly tried to seize the initiative in this quarter, indicates a haunting fear on his part of the perilous situation in which his forces continue.

LAVISH SLAUGHTER.

Since the retreat from the Marne began, Von Hindenburg has concentrated his heaviest reinforcements around the Soissons corner of Aisne-Marne salient. He unquestionably has a very strong force at present in that area. He might believe that a lavish slaughter of German troops at this moment would perhaps result in bending the allied front southwestward from Soissons in the general direction of Paris.

A serious offensive of this character, however, would run into the strongest positions the French have prepared for defending the roads to Paris. The Villers Cotterets Forest is but five to seven miles away, and east of the forest General Foch sensibly improved his positions by local attacks before he began his Marne drive. Should Von Hindenburg therefore be suddenly overcome once more by his periodic mania to reach Paris, he will undoubtedly be quickly involved in serious difficulties.

FAILING MORALE.

Von Hindenburg has got to do something to stem General Foch's relentless pressure. The Berlin war office has at length been forced to tell the German people that the German Marne army is in retreat. Von Hindenburg's attack to-day followed hard on this admission. It may be well due in part to an intensity of depression among the Kaiser's subjects. The Kaiser perhaps is despairingly counting on a few yards advance between Soissons and the Ourcq to relieve the failing morale at home.

EXPENSIVE PRESERVING.

The housewives of Ontario are experiencing considerable difficulty in following the advice of the Canada Food Board to preserve as much fruit as possible for use next winter as a substitute for butter. Sugar is a very expensive article and the extraordinary price that is being asked for fruit this year is bound to check the activities of the home canner. Raspberries at 35c. a box are not much of a temptation to the housewife, and the price would seem to call for the attention of the Food Board. It is hard to see how such a charge for these berries or the prices that were asked for blue berries are justified. Surely war conditions have not increased the cost of growing raspberries or of picking blueberries to such an extent as the prevailing prices would indicate. "Can the Kaiser by canning fruit" is the advice that is being given, but the average housewife cannot find it possible to adopt this slogan with the high cost of fruit and sugar staring her in the face.

THE FOE'S PLIGHT.

For the present at least, and forever in the opinion of the majority of the expert correspondents at the front, the initiative has passed from the German High Command into the hands of General Foch. The retreat of the Germans from the Rheims-Soissons salient is a clear admission of a crushing defeat. The retirement not only blunts the spear head that was pointed at Paris, but also demoralizes the Ludendorff-Hindenburg policy. While it is evident from the small number of guns and prisoners taken in the latest advance of the allies, that the enemy, by drawing on his reserves, has been able to prevent General Foch's pincers from closing until the greater part of the German forces had withdrawn from the pocket in which they were partially enclosed as the result of the brilliant French-American counter stroke, yet the necessity of having to fall back over ground which was won at heavy cost of life, must be bitter medicine for the Kaiser and his generals. The effect of the news on the civilian population is evidently dreaded, for the German official bulletins have given hardly an inkling of what is happening. The whole action has been a brilliant allied success that has inflicted huge casualties upon the enemy and that has compelled him to yield important positions, even the great supply base of Fere En Tardenois having to be given up in the face of the great allied pressure.

THE USE OF SUBSTITUTES.

That if the regulations of the Canada Food Board in regard to the sale and use of substitutes for wheat flour are to prove really effective in conserving wheat for the allies, there will have to be a change in the system as far as the private consumer is concerned, is the opinion of a prominent local baker. As the regulations now stand, the householder in purchasing flour from a grocer must also purchase a certain amount of substitute, the expectation of the Food Board evidently being that the substitute and wheat flour will be mixed before using, and in this way there would be a considerable saving of wheat flour. However, it is stated that the regulation is not having this effect because the average housewife uses the wheat flour in doing her baking as she always did and employs the corn meal or other substitute in the manufacture of the delicacy known as Johnny cake or some other cake. The plan suggested by the local baker, and which he expects will in a short time be adopted by the Food Bord is to make it necessary for millers to mix the wheat flour and substitutes in the proper proportions before offering it for sale, a simple measure that would ensure not only bakers, but householders as well, using only the quantity of wheat flour laid down in the regulations of the Food Board. The suggestion is a timely one and seems to offer a solution of the problem of making the individual consumer do his or her share in conserving wheat for overseas use.

THE FOURTH ANNIVERSARY.

The importance of a proper celebration of August 4th, the fourth anniversary of the entrance of Great Britain into the world war, should not be missed by the civic authorities. The occasion is a glorious one in the history of Great Britain—the anniversary of the day when she was called upon to make the great decision, and when she decided in favour of the right.

The New York Times emphasizes this point in the following splendid editorial:

August 4 of this year is a day indeed worthy of celebration. Nobody would dream of denying that who has even a little appreciation of what it meant for the world when on Aug. 4, now almost four full years ago, Great Britain heard the call of duty and of interest, combined as they always are for those who understand what interest really it, and answered the summons with a noble promptness.

She knew the cost of what she did, not as well as now, of course, but well enough for the knowledge to have explained and even to have excused something of hesitation, and she plunged instantly into the conflict that otherwise would have been so short and so dreadful in its termination. If, by doing it, she did not exact save the world—it is not saved yet, but confidently can hope to be, thanks to Great Britain—she gave the world the chance it needed to prepare for battle at its leisure and in vastly better conditions than Great Britain chose to insist on for herself.

Fully appreciating all this, and frankly acknowledging the debt we owe to the nation that went to war on Aug. 4, it is possible without incurring suspicion of ingratitude to differ with those among us who are proposing or demanding that the United States join with Great Britain and her other allies in making that ever-memorable date one of conjoined rejoicing—a sort of international anniversary. The intention is admirable, but the day, unlike the July 14 of the French or our July 4, is not one that lends itself easily and properly to such celebration. That day is England's. The glory is hers. On it she made her Great Decision, and it is her high privilege to congratulate herself that the decision was right and noble. But it is peculiarly and wholly hers—a family affair, as it were. After the war, a day for the international celebration of a victory the civilized world has united to win should be selected, and with joyful piety observed. It ought to be done and doubtless will be. It should and will be, however, another day than any now appropriated for the marking of smaller happenings than what will have been the greatest happening in human history.

That day, possibly, in the years to come, Germany herself can join in celebrating. If she cannot, she will be no longer in existence.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If Hindenburg could make as much progress towards Paris as he has in health, the news from the western front would not be as roseate as it is at present.

Every time the Kaiser hears of a fresh American success in the Marne salient, he must feel like calling for the head of Admiral Von Tirpitz.

The U-boats which were responsible for America's entry into the war, are unable to prevent the Americans from taking an ever-increasingly important part in the struggle.

300,000 United States' troops have gone overseas this month. There are over one million and a quarter now in France.

There does not seem to be much sympathy with the attitude of the western postmen. On the other hand, the Peterborough letter carriers and their comrades in the east have the backing of the majority of citizens, because they returned to work as soon as they were convinced their grievances would be looked into.

FLAG-WAVING

(Brantford Expositor.)

Flag-waving is not by any means a test of patriotism,—the Canadian article falls far short of that prevailing in the United States,—but in war-time it has a certain stimulating value. Canadians should recognize this fact more largely than they do. The streets of every American city are to-day alive with flags and bunting displayed not only on public and business buildings, but also in the windows of private residences. In Canada we see no such display. Not only are war decorations noticeable by their absence, but the average flagpole is as bare as Mother Hubbard' cupboard. There is room for genuine improvement in this matter, and the Rotarians and Women's Patriotic Leagues of Brantford and elsewhere might well join forces to keep the home flags flying. A mayoralty proclamation might also help

KING OF ITALY IN THE TRENCHES

Declares it means Territorial Changes after the War.

New York July 30. — Dr. Felice Ferrero, head of the Italian Information Bureau in this country, delivered a lecture at the School of Journalism, Columbia University, in which he was reported as having hinted at an Italian republic after the war. Dr. Ferrero made no such suggestion. As shown by the stenographic notes of the lecture; what he said was:

"When a victory is achieved, what will happen? Victory must necessarily result in some changes of some kind in the world, and necessarily the changes could not be anything else but territorial changes. * * * Democracy is a principle, that is to say it is an insubstantial thing, something that you cannot get hold of, and to fight for democracy does not mean anything unless when you are through fighting, you have carried your fight to victory, you can do something by which, or through which, you can apply your principle of democracy.

"In other words to fight for democracy on our part means that we consider ourselves the representatives of a particular system of political and social organization, and that we consider our enemies representatives of a different system of political and social organization, and we feel that our system of organization is much better than theirs; at any rate, we think that we want to live with our system, and we do not want to have our enemies interfere with it. Not only that, but we want to force our enemies to let any people that is now living under their rule be free to choose to live under the principles of democracy if they so choose.

WOULD BE ILL-TIMED

"How can we accomplish this unless we force our enemy to give up territory and people? In other words to withdraw their social and political system from certain states of the world and let us substitute our system for theirs. In other words to fight for democracy comes down to nothing but territorial changes; so you see that when Italy is fighting for territorial changes, and others are fighting for the principle of democracy, we say exactly the same thing if—and that is a fact—the system for which Italy is fighting is a system, political and social, for which the other allies are fighting. If that is true, fighting for democracy must necessarily be fighting for territorial readjustment."

Commenting upon the lecture and the misquotation from it, Dr. Ferrero reiterated his stand that "democracy is a political condition which has no direct connection with any particular form of government, and besides with King Victor in the trenches, living the life of an ordinary soldier for three years, separated from his family except for the ordinary annual leave of two weeks granted to the common soldier, any proposal to "abolish kings" in Italy at this time would be extremely ill-timed."

MIGHT APPOINT ROYAL COMMISSION

POSSIBLE WAY OUT OF POSTAL DIFFICULTY IF EMPLOYEES IN WEST STAY OUT.

OTTAWA, July 29.—The situation in Western Canada arising out of the strike of letter carriers was under review by the Cabinet Council this afternoon, but there was no definite announcement when the sitting was concluded as to what the Government proposes to do should the postmen insist on remaining out. There is still a possibility, it is believed here, that a way may be found out of the difficulty by the appointment of a Royal Commission to deal with any matters still in dispute between the Government and its employees, after the conference between the sub-committee of the Cabinet and the representatives of the men on August 6.

"We are positive," said a Minister of the Crown this afternoon, "that we could get together if the Western men could agree to resume work and be represented at the conference."

Further consideration will be given to the matter to-morrow by the Cabinet. To-day's meeting was attended by all the Ministers in the Capital. They fully realize the difficult character of the problem confronting the Government, but insist that it would be unwise to admit the principle of exercise of control over the salaries of civil servants by a body not responsible to Parliament, which would be involved in the appointment of a Board of Conciliation.

Once a Golfer Always a Golfer As This Story Conclusively Proves

Lieut. Sutton Was One of the Best Players in England Before War—Lost Arm at Gallipoli, But He Still Plays the Game.

Once a golfer always a golfer. That's the axiom of the golf fiend, and it seems to be gospel truth. You may ridicule the golf enthusiast all you care and sympathize with the loving wife who has become a "widow" through her husband forgetting home and duty when the golf season starts, but just you once allow this same forgetful husband to take you out to the links some afternoon—and it's all off. You become a "bug" like he is.

It's always that way. You start with the idea that the game is for infants and old folks in their second childhood. Before you have played three holes and have taken three or four times as many strokes as the poorest dub on the ground ever does, you are beginning to "get the blood," and are starting to change your opinion of the game. As for the game, it's a lot of work you think. Then you go out and buy up all the clubs and balls that every golfer should wear, but doesn't get yourself a paid-up membership in some prominent country club and you think you are made. But you ain't. You soon realize that your new clothes and clubs don't make you a better putter, and that your drive is not at all enhanced by the new green and red stockings you have just purchased. In three or four months after constant effort, you begin making the 72 course in around 130, and you are picking out the members who play as "well" as you. Whenever you make a round in 125 or less you hold a celebration. You thoroughly appreciate yourself, and can't realize how anybody can say that golf isn't a nice game.

WITH ONE HAND NOW.

Now to go back to our very first sentence, "Once a golfer always a golfer." Before the war broke out, Lieut. Sutton was a plus 2 man in England, and one of the very players in the country. Very few played a better game than he, which is shown by his handicap. He was sent down to the Dardanelles when the English and French tried to force through the Bosphorus to Constantinople. Sutton took part in the Gallipoli campaign and distinguished himself. One day the Turks and British had a hand grenade tossing contest, and the Britons had much the better of it. The Turks would toss grenades to the British trenches and Sutton and his men would throw them back before they would explode. The sons of Mohammed were bewildered until one of them decided to count four before tossing the bomb. Lt. Sutton tried to catch the grenade but failed. Knowing that his men were in danger of being blown up at any moment Sutton tried to throw the grenade away with his right hand. He saved his men but lost his right arm. It was shot off when the grenade exploded. The next moment a Turk tried to enter the English trenches, but Sutton with his one arm useless, attacked and killed him. He continued fighting until dragged away. He was invalided home and is now in America as an ordnance expert for his government.

Sutton loves golf, and feared that his days as a golfer were over because of the loss of his arm. One day a friend took him to an eastern golf course. The soldier could not resist any longer, and started down the course, swinging the club with his left hand. He is getting to be a good golfer all over again, and can make the course now in around 90, and he is enjoying himself. Remember, once a golfer—— Try it.

Fletcher, of Giants, Leads N. L. Players in Drawing Free Trip to First

Captain of New York Nationals Set Pace in 1913, '14 and '16, and is Setting the Pace Again This Season in Being Hit by Pitchers

Just as Max Carey of the Pirates can be counted on annually to lead the National League in stealing bases, so can Arthur Fletcher of the Giants be counted upon to show the way in the senior organization. In ranking first in drawing casualty passes. The New York shortstop was the pace-setter in this respect in 1913, 1914, 1916 and 1917, and probably in 1915, too, the figures for that year being among the missing.

Fletcher is running true to form this season in qualifying as a home-runner in what might be termed the hardest way, the slang of the professional when a man is passed that he gets on in the easiest way.

Why Fletcher should collect so many Red Cross complimentaries annually is one of the puzzles of the pastime, since Arthur is not a good waiter and more or less a first ball hitter. Fletcher seldom draws more than 25 passes a season from the gunners (last year he acquired 23), and he generally manages to get hit about 20 times in every campaign. He never has had to take any vacation because he was winged.

The number of men hit by pitched balls in the National League thus far this season is 135, New York getting 23 of these Red Cross passages to first Brooklyn 22, Boston 17, St. Louis 17, Pittsburgh 17, Chicago 16, Philadelphia 12 and Cincinnati 11.

Fletcher lays claim to almost half of the New York casualty camps, having 11. These are the men who have winged him:—

RIGHT HANDERS.

Crum of Boston.
Griner, Cheney and Coombs of Brooklyn.
Schneider of Cincinnati.
Hogg, of Philadelphia.
Sanders and Slapnicka of Pittsburgh.
Doak of St. Louis.

LEFT HANDERS.

Cavanan of Boston.
Cooper of Pittsburgh.

No other National Leaguer has been hit 10 times this season. Oliver Edward O'Mara of the Superbas ranking next to Fletcher is being a human target. The little third baseman has weeded his way to first nine times this year after having stopped wildly pitched balls with various parts of his frame.

Few players in the National this year have been seriously damaged by the casualty passes they received. Ed. Konetchy received one of Leon Ames' wild pitches on his left ear on June 17, and had to leave the game and take a vacation of a few days. Long Tom Hughes should have had an assist on this hit by pitched ball, as he was coaching at third when Ames started to pitch to Koney, and yelled, as Leon Kalamity made his wind-up "Now for a wild pitch or anything." The pitch was wild, all right, as Konetchy can testify.

Last year, toward the end of the season, Konetchy was hit on the hand by a pitched ball and was denied first by the umpire. He had to continue batting, singled, and after scoring it was found that his hand was broken, and he did no more pastiming during 1917.

Andy Coakley seemed to hold the major league record for wholesale crippling of players. When Andy was with the Reds in 1907 he felled Roger Bresnahan of the Giants with a pitched ball, and it was feared had killed him. The game was held up 15 minutes while doctors worked over Bresnahan and tried to bring him to and then an ambulance took him to the hospital.

Dan McCann batted after Roger and when play was resumed the first ball Coakley pitched hit Old Ky on the wrist and shattered that member.

Frank Delahanty, who did a lot of valuable hitting for the Yankees when they were making their bid for the flag in 1906, and who at that time gave promise of being another Ed, did not like to be hit by pitched balls, making a speech to this effect after he fell back to slow company. Del was with Minneapolis, where Sunday ball was being allowed on sufferance.

Some club for which Grover Cleveland Lowdermilk was pitching visited Contillonville, and when Del batted for the first time against the men now with the Browns, he made this speech to the populace:

"This is Frank Delahanty, of Cleveland, O. The American Association season isn't two months old yet and he has been hit by pitched balls 14 times. Mr. Lowdermilk has hit him twice. He hereby serves notice that if he is hit again there is going to be trouble."

Lowdermilk did not hit Del the first time he batted, but he did hit him the second, whereupon Frank starte for the box armed with his bludgeon, and was knocking the shins off Grover Cleveland when the player of the two teams disarmed him.

That casualty pass almost stopped Sunday baseball in Minneapolis.

WOMEN CAPTURE ALLEGED ROBBER IN STREET CHASE

Telephone Girl Helps Rout Man From Apartment Closed for Summer.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Two women capured an alleged sneak thief after pursuing him through two city blocks and held the man until the arrival of a policeman. The women were Mrs. Muriel C. Wakeman, of No. 523 West 134th street, and Miss Eva Bouchard, the telephone operator at that address. The man arrested said he was Charles Harrington, seventeen years old, of No. 425 West Fifty--sixth street.

When Harrington was locked up by Patrolman Oppenheim at the West 125th street police station, is said to have had in his possession a black bag containing a valuable pearl necklace and other jewelery, said to be the property of Mrs. Charles H. Stokes, the mother of Mrs. Wakeman, who has an apartment on the fifth floor of the apartment building.

Miss Bouchard said that for the last few days a man has been telephoning and asking for the Stokes' apartment. Yesterday when he phone again and was informed that occupants were away for the summer he asked to be connected with the adjoining apartment which also is vacant. A few minutes later, she told the police, a man, believed to be Harrington, entered the building and disappeared down a flight of stairs leading to the cellar. The operator says she then saw him through a window going up a fire escape on the court yard. She called to him and replied that he was going to repair some windows.

Miss Bouchard telephoned Mrs. Wakeman, whose apartment is on the third floor. The man had meantime entered the Stokes apartment, on the fifth floor, through a window from the fire escape. The two women ascended to the fifth floor and tried to enter the Stokes apartment, but found the door barricaded. They screamed and the man ran down the fire escape.

The two women descended and pursued the man through 134th street across Broadway to Amsterdam avenue, where they caught him.

ICELANDERS WITH ALLIES

MORE ENLISTED IN PROPORTION THAN OF ANY OTHER NATIONALITY.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Icelanders living in other countries have enlisted with the Allies in greater proportion than an other nationality, according to Arni Benediktsson, an exporter and importer of Reykajavik, Iceland, who is at the Waldorf-Astoria.

"There are 18,000 Icelanders in Winnipeg, Canada," he said, "a group larger than the entire population of our largest city, Reykajavik. Our Minister to Canada told me recently that our boys now living in Canada have enlisted in great numbers, really showing a larger proportion than any other nationality.

"We have large contracts with England for fish and wool, and have sent them many cargoes. Our Government controls the imports of coal, oil, salt, and grain. Coal is 300 kronen a ton, about $85, yet food and other necessities have advanced from 200 to 500 per cent. during the war. Iceland has about 90,000 population, 17,000 in Reykajavik. The Government is independent of Denmark, with three Ministers comprising the Government.

"Many tourists formerly visited our country, and at the outbreak of the war a German vessel just about to make port at Reykajavik received a wireless message stating that war had been declared. Without stopping the Captain put off and made for home. Carrying about an even number of English and German tourists the vessel was a perfect bedlam on its return voyage until it was finally interned in Norway. The English had demanded that the boat make directly for Hamburg, knowing that their cruisers would be on the lookout and would doubtless capture it, while the Germans were wary and recommended a course be made for Bergen, Norway, which was done, and there the ship was held."

JUDGES WANT INCREASE

Feel the High Cost of Living On $3,000 a Year.

TORONTO, July 30.—County judges on a salary of $3,000 a year have felt the pinch brought about by the high cost of living. They hadn't decided late this afternoon how much they wanted, but appeared to be agreed that the Dominion Government should "come across." It is nearly fifteen years since the county judges' salaries were increased from $2,500 to $3,000.

Th secretary intimated that the matter of salaries was a topic, which if not discussed, would rob a judges' meeting of its atmosphere. It has been three years since the judges gathered together, for they decided the first year after the war that they would not meet annually. The superannuaion of the president made necessary the calling of today's meeting.

The secretary stated that no application would be made to the Dominion Government for more money but there was nothing to stop the judges from personnally interesting members of Parliament in their cause.

SMALL STORES need advertising as well as large ones. If the small dealer fears that his little ad. will be lost in a newspaper carrying large ads., he should be reminded if this were true, it would follow that his little store located in a city with large stores, would also be lost.

ANDREW FREEDMAN NAMED BY BROKER IN WIFE'S SUIT

N. A. Bourasse Charges She Was Intimate With One-Time Owner of Giants.

NEW YORK, July 30.—The name of the late Andrew Freedman, capitalist and one time owner of the Giants, has been brought into a separation action begun in the Supreme Court by Mrs. Helen Bourasse against Napoleon A. Bourasse, an investment broker. The defendant in his answer, which came up before Justice Lehman on Mrs. Bourasse's motion for alimony, alleged she and Mr. Freedman had known each other intimately for years.

Mr. Bourasse based his assertion on a statement that he alleged was made to him by Mrs. Bourasse and substantiated by information which came into his possession after Mr. Freedman's death.

"My wife told me when Freedman died that she had lost her best friend," said the broker. "I subsequently learned she had travelled through Europe with Freedman and had been supported by him for years before our marriage, which fact she concealed from me."

A vigorous denial was interposed by Mrs. Bourasse to her husband's allegations. She declared his income amounted to $50,000 a year derived from an estate left him by his parents in Canada, and that he lavishly entertained a woman, who lived in West Forty-ninth street and whose country home is at Deal Beach, N.J.

Narrating the incidents which led to their estrangement, Mrs. Bourasse said her husband had concealed a previous marriage to the daughter of a one-time Canadian Mayor. When she and the broker were married, said the plaintiff, he declared himself a bachelor.

Mr. Bourasse disputed his wife's statement concerning his income, asserting it was considerably less. He also refuted her charges of cruelty which she declared left her highly nervous. "Why your honour, she weighs over 200 pounds and drinks a dozen bottles of beer each day and a considerable amount of wine," declared the broker.

WAR VETERANS' ASSOCIATION WILL DEFINE THE POSITION OF MEN WHO HAVE NOT SEEN SERVICE

Dominion Convention, Now In Session In Toronto, Deals With Important Questions—Agitators Frowned Upon.

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, July 30. — At the Great War Veterans' convention this morning, the point was raised whether Vice-President Shanahan, who is no longer a member of the Toronto branch through failure to pay his dues, was entitled to hold office as member of the Dominion Executive. After a brief discussion, the chairman ruled it was necessary to be a member of a local branch. Discussion was begun and continued til afternoon as to the position those who had returned from oversea without seeing service.

A profound impression was made upon the Dominion convention of the Great War Veterans' Association yesterday by the address of its Dominion President, Lieut.-Col. W. P. Purney of Halifax. Col. Purney bluntly told the delegates that the association was the parting of the ways. Repeatedly he referred to members who thoughtlessly brought the body into disrepute, and to the groups who believed "that they could seize constituted authority by the throat for their own ends." Willingly he would fight these elements which made for destruction and anarchy, to restore the confidence of the public in the organization.

Following Col. Purney's appeal came the report of the Dominion Secretary, Mr. R. M. Stewart, of Ottawa. He pointed out that there were now 16,000 paid-up members, and that over 40 branches had refused to pay their per capita tax. There were 9,000 members who were not in good standing. His report touched upon much of the work of the Executive, but failed to refer to the alien question. The omission brought a storm. Mr. Stewart cleared the air when he explained that Mr. N. F. R. Znight, to whose position he had succeeded, had left him with nothing upon which a report might be built.

A HIT AT AGITATORS.

Reviewing the progress of the association for the past year, W. P. Purney, Dominion President, declared that the organization was "at the parting of the ways," and asked it to get to work to restore public confidence. He expressed dissatisfaction over the Government's land settlement scheme, which "falls short of what an ambitious man would take advantage of"; the meagre allowances which the Government was now paying the dependents overseas, and referred to the pensions to soldiers, which might be improved upon.

MUST KEEP PUBLIC CONFIDENCE.

"We must keep public confidence. It is the very breath of the life of this association. Governments are not disposed to legislate against it. You are now in danger of losing public opinion. Why? Because we are harboring in our ranks men who are unreasonable, who make impossible demands and shock the intelligent minds of this country. There are some who have conducted themselves in a manner to bring the name of the association into disrepute. Sometimes this has been done thoughtlessly, but there are groups who think that they can take constituted authority by the throat and run the country for themselves. The time when the returned soldier controls affairs in this country will be when we have reached the higher planes of citizenship," he said.

Farmers Calling for Harvest Help

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, finds an increasing demand for men and boys for harvest work on farms near Peterboro. Farmers are urgently calling for help, the first appeals since harvesting began, and it is expected that in a short time many other requests will be sent in. Mr. Gillespie stated today that he has not an available man or boy on his list. All those who desired to do farm work have been placed long ago. The new call should be heeded and it is hoped that the farmers' voice will not go unheard. Those who desire to help in the harvesting should notify Mr. Gillespie at once.

INTENSE FIGHTING

AID FOR CANADIAN FARMERS.

Our Army of Wheat Harvesters Will Help Them Gather in Crop.

WASHINGTON, July 30.— Under the direction of the United States Employment Service, America's great army of wheat harvesters is preparing to cross the border into Western Canada. If weather conditions continue favourable the vanguard probably will be engaged on Canadian farms in two or three weeks' time, the cutting now having progressed as far north as the Dakotas and Minnesota.

Thousands of men and boys, who have been instrumental in saving the banner wheat crop of the Central West, are preparing to carry through the same service for our northern ally. Their employment in Canada is the result of an agreement between the two Governments.

W. W. Cory, Canadian Deputy Minister of the Interior, who came to Washington early this week to make final arrangements with Director Densmore, of the United States Employment Service about the transfer of the harvest army to the Canadian wheat fields, stated that record crops have been planted by the farmers of Western Canada this year, and all their grain is in excellent condition. The influx of trained American harvest hands will meet, he expects, the severe shortage of native farm labour in the Dominion.

COUNT D'HARCOURT UNMASKED AS HUN, WALLOPED ON JAW

"Artist" in Lost Girl Case Proved To Be A. G. von Donwitz—Beaten by Prisoner.

NEW YORK, July 30.— As if by magic Inspector John Cray at Police Headquarters changed an alleged Spanish nobleman of considerable hauteur into an insolent German—insolent until the fist of a fellow prisoner in the line-up landed on his jaw and sent him sprawling to the floor. Count Childe de Rohan d'Harcourt by the transformation became Gurtav von Donwitz. The magic wand was a finger print card which told how Von Donwitz had been in jail here.

As Count d'Harcourt Von Donwitz was arrested on Wednesday on a charge of extortion, it being alleged by Mrs. Julia Bowie, of No. 27 North Old street, Trenton, N.J., that following the payment of $25 to the German he gave her information that led to the finding of her daughter, Thelma fourteen years old, who disappeared from her home two weeks ago. A detective and Mrs. Bowie went to Bellevue Hospital and found the girl quite ill. Peter Coccia, thirty years old, of No. 226 Thompson street, also was arrested, but on a more serious charge.

Von Donwitz, who said he was thirty-four years old and an artist with a studio at No. 16 East Nineteenth street, with much boasting told of his noble birth and during the night asked that the Spanish Ambassador be notified of his arrest and detention at Police Headquarters. He still was boasting when placed in the line-up yesterday morning. Next to him was Coccia.

"So you're a Spanish count, hey?" was Inspector Cray's greeting when Von Donwitz's name was called out for inspection by detectives.

"I would have you know, sir, that I am none other than Count Childe de Rohan d'Harcourt," he replied, as he twirled his moustache, the tips of which were on the ascendancy. "I am of true Spanish blood and"—

"You're just German and I'll prove it," Inspector Cray began.

"Yes, I am German. What of it?" Von Donwitz said.

It was at this point that Coccia became wildly excited, saying something about the alleged propriety of a German standing next to him, and letting a mighty blow with his clenched hand. Von Donwitz's jaw was the objective and it was reached in record time and the German went to the floor. Coccia followed the advantage by throwing himself upon the prostrate German and was pummelling him when Inspector Cray separated the men.

In the Jefferson Market Court later Von Donwitz, somewhat subdued and nursing a bruised chin, was held by Magistrate Corrigan in $2,000 bail for examination next Monday. Coccia was held in similar amount.

DRAFTEE FIRED ON QUEEN'S STUDENTS

KINGSTON, Ont., July 30.—While paddling from a civil engineering camp in the Province of Quebec several days ago to a little village called Lacfrontier, M. C. Fleming, Owen Sound and A. R. Garrett, Johnson street, both Queen's University students, were made targets of by some defaulters who were hiding in the district dressed in khaki trousers and shirts. The young men were mistaken for military police and after several attempts to shoot them one of the bullets pierced Mr. Fleming's leg. He was taken to Sherbrooke where he is now recovering.

DANCE AT JUNIPER.

On Saturday night the first dance of the season was held at Juniper. Tucker's Orchestra furnished the music. It was a fair success considering the scarcity of young men but of course in times of war one does not expect anything else. However, the girls have proved that dancing with girls for partners can be done successfully and pleasantly.

NO ACTION IN SIGHT AGAINST OTHER MEN WHO HAD NO CARDS

There have been no signs around the police station that the $20 fine imposed upon eight men the other day for neglecting to carry their registration cards will also be levied upon a number of others whose names were taken that same night for the very same delinquency. Chief Thompson stated that these men who had been excepted were manifestly beyond the military age, but the Registration Act makes no reference to miliary age. It requires every person over 16 years to carry their registration cards, and on their own statement and Chief Thompson's corroboration, a number of men escaped the recent fines. The Act says that everybody shall carry his or her card. There is no exemption contemplated there, and the man on the street has voiced the opinion that every man or none of them who failed to show their cards to the police should have been fined the $20. All or none is the expression heard on the street. It might also be pointed out that several of the men who were fined were evidently beyond the military age, if that unthinkable explanation were acceptable. It may be that Chief Thompson is reserving the remainder of his list for some quiet day, but as the interval broadens the prospect of even-handed justice being shown alike to the entire group of those whom the police found at fault seems to be growing less.

Corned beef should be soaked in cold water and put into fresh water when cooked.

JUDGE HUYCKE IS 1ST VICE-PRESIDENT

Of the County Judges' Association Which Held Annual Meeting Yesterday

TORONTO, July 30.—Judge D. F. MacWatt of Sarnia was elected President of the County Judges' Association at its annual meeting in the King Edward Hotel yesterday afternoon. Judge E. C. S. Huycke of Peterboro was chosen First Vice-President; Judge Hugh O'Leary, Second Vice-President, and Judge T. A. McGillivray, Secretary. The election of officers and other business was concluded at one session in the afternoon, which, owing to war conditions was the first meeting of the association since 1915. The retiring officers are Judge Hardy of Lindsay and Judge J. A. Valin of North Bay.

A feeling prevalent for some years among the members of the Bench that their salary is entirely inadequate found expression yesterday and was under discussion for some time. A committee was appointed to go into the matter and petition the Government, if they found it advisable. The salary of $3,000 a year, with additional Surrogate Court fees, in most instances, was said to be far too little particularly under present conditions.

W. J. McWhinney, K. C., President of the Canada Bar Association, and R. T. Harding, President of the Ontario Bar Association, visited the session and asked the sympathetic cooperation of the Bench in the work of their organization.

MR. G. W. HATTON SUES THE COUNTY

Interesting Question to be Decided at Osgoode Hall.

(Special to The Examiner)

TORONTO, July 30.—Is a municipality obliged under the Municipal Act to supply light, heat and other accommodations to its legal officers? This is a question which will be decided at Osgoode Hall Court. G. W. Hatton, Crown Attorney, Peterboro, is suing the municipality for $1,200 for light fuel and furniture that he claims ought to have been supplied him as an official of the municipality. He wants a mandatory order compelling the municipality to make provision of these accomodations to him in the future.

A Representative Gathering of Merchants Hear an Interesting Illustrated Lecture Last Evening

"More Merchants Fail Because They Advertise Too Little Than Because They Advertise Too Much," Said the Speaker—The Selection of Store Clerks.

Incompetence and inexperience cost 25 per cent. of the profits of a business.

Credit is as important as capital.

Progress comes through education.

Be loyal to your employer.

Don't knock your competitor.

Don't peddle store secrets.

Always be courteous.

Be especially nice to newcomers.

Always wear a smile.

Don't be afraid of doing more than you were hired to do.

Eighty per cent. of failures are due to lack of system.

More merchants fail because they advertise too little, than because they advertise too much.

Advertisements should be simple and not crowded.

Don't advertise too many "below cost" sales.

Continuous advertising pays—always.

Advertising mediums should be selected with very great care.

The people can be reached cheaper and easier by the newspaper than any other advertising medium.

Watch the change of seasons and events for suitable store windows.

Bright colours that harmonize catch the eye.

Change window displays frequently.

The foregoing are a few words of advice to employers and employees alike, flashed on the screen at the T. A.S. lecture hall last evening. A representative gathering of merchants were present who listened attentively and eagerly to the speaker, Mr. W. H. Farley. Slides were shown of stores with unattractive fronts and interiors, which, when renovated, almost doubled the net returns. The way the store was organized so that confusion would not result and that all customers would be attended to promptly.

"Wonderful Bargains."

Don't advertise somebody else's doings in your own window," said the speaker. "Use you own windows for your advertising."

Slides were also shown of advertisements that sometimes apear. Crowded to the limit with printing and unattractive in the extreme. Specimens of good advertising were also shown, where everything in the store was not advertised in one advertisement. "Don't advertise everything in your store as a wonderful bargain," said Mr. Varley.

Some of the slides of windows were most amusing. Goods thrown into a window almost in one great pile, where no single article will catch the eye, but the attention is directed from one article to another.

Store Clerk.

The inefficiency of clerks is a very serious things, said the speaker. The store should be so organized that clerks have a real interest in the store. This was shown vividly in the moving picture which concluded the lecture.

Clerks should be schooled to be accurate and their duties should be clearly defined.

DUTIES OF A HEAD CLERK.
Supervise other clerks.
Assist in buying.
Take orders over the counter.

DUTIES OF A SECOND CLERK.
Check outgoing goods.
Watch prices of unstable goods.
Report on competition.
Take orders over the counter.

DUTIES OF A THIRD CLERK.
Look after stock.
Watch condition of stock.
Report regularly to head clerk.
Take orders over the counter.

DUTIES OF A FOURTH CLERK.
Make window displays.
Study other store windows.

DUTIES OF THE DELIVERY MAN.
See that a receipt is in every basket.
Report complaints.
Get tips.
Make sales.

WHAT EVERY CLERK SHOULD KNOW.
The prices of all goods in the store.
Where found.
Every possible selling point of the goods.

An Example.

The "movies" told the story of Mr. J. W. White, a grocer, representative of many merchants. He wondered why he was going behind in his business. Why he had to borrow money to pay his wholesalers. And why his banker was chary in giving him more credit. His clerks did only what was required of them and that when the boss was around. The cash system was antiquated and the cashier's chief concern was what she'd do after working hours. The cash for the article was paid to the cashier, who put the receipt on file. If a bunch of bananas or anything else was bought, the money was paid out by the cashier and no record made. And yet Mr. White wondered why he could never balance at night. At last it came to the point where his wholesaler deserted him and his credit was exhausted at the bank. After being shown the wonderful utility of a cash register, he buys one and installs it. The system was thoroughly illustrated and the merchants present were unanimous in their praise. The lecture covered every phase of a merchant's business life. "The troubles of a merchant and how to stop them," is very educative, not only to the business man but to the customer, who will know what to expect from a progressive merchant.

A BOUQUET FOR PETERBOROUGH LAWYER

Mr. Joseph Wearing, M.A., Barrister, of Peterborough, will preach again to-morrow at both services in the First Baptist Church. Mr. Wearing, who is an ornament to the Bar in his adopted city, uses his talents with fine effect as a preacher of the Gospel.—Woodstock "Sentinel-Review."

Cars Collided on George Street

It Took Half An Hour to Pry Them Apart.

Traffic on George street was held up last night at 9:30 for half an hour while the police sought to pry apart the automobiles of Dr. Holloway and J. W. Cox, which had collided. Dr. Holloway was coming slowly down Charlotte street going east, and Mr. Cox coming down George street when, the two cars collided. Both cars were more or less damaged, but both managed to get away without help. Dr. Holloway said this morning that the damage to his car only amounted to the loss of a rear wheel, but the real hurt came in the fact that his car was new, and he didn't care to see it mistreated so early.

Food Board Flashes

Whose fault is it that housekeepers cannot always get the varieties of fish that the Food Board is advocating? Take the case of pollock, for instance, which is fine fish and cheap. The following is an incident that occurred recently in Fredericton, N.B., when a woman who happens to be interested in the food question asked her dealer if he handled pollock.

"We don't handle pollock?"

"I would take one a week and ten of my friends would do likewise."

"We don't handle pollock."

"Are they often caught here?"

"Yes."

"If a demand was started for them would you get the fishermen to bring them to you"

"We don't handle pollock."

"Dr. Kierstead of the Food Board wants you to have a supply of the cheaper fish in this market."

"Yes, I know."

"Well, what are you going to do about it"

"We don't handle pollock."

Then she gave up.

INCREASE IN THE PRICE OF COAL SOLD IN PETERBORO

Will Cost Fifty-five Cents More to Bring a Ton of Coal to Peterboro—Other Increases Due to Increase in Freight Rates.

Another boost will be made in the price of coal when the freight rates are jumped another 25 per cent. Day after to-morrow 55c is added to the freight charges on a ton of coal from Buffalo. Formerly it cost $2.60 to bring a ton of coal from the mines to Buffalo, and from Buffalo to Peterborough $1.45, making a total cost of $4.05 for freight per ton. Under the new rates the price will be $4.60.

Other Increase.

Class rates west of Fort William will be increased 25 per cent., calculated on the tariffs in force prior to March 15, 1918, the increase of ten per cent. allowed by the Board of Railway Commissioners since that date to be disallowed.

Advance on rates on coal, stone of different kinds, sand, and gravel, brick (except enamelled or glazed), cement, lime, and plasters are the same as allowed by the United States railway administration effective June 25 last. This order of the Director-General of the U.S. Administration was issued on May 25, 1918, effective June 25 as to freight rates, thus giving the public 30 days within which to meet the changed conditions.

Live stock rates are advanced 25 per cent., but not exceeding an increase of seven cents per 100 pounds where rates are published per 100 pounds.

Packing house product rates are increased 25 per cent.

Rates on sugar, syrup and molasses are increased by cancelling the existing commodity rates and applying the new 5th class rates.

Commodity rates not specifically mentioned in the order-in-Council are to be increased 25 per cent.

THREE MAYORS IN BOHEMIA

THREE MAYORS IN BOHEMIA—C

(By Captain J. A. F. Ozanne.)

It sounds like the title of a comic opera or revue, but there is very little comedy in it so far as Bohemia itself is concerned. About a month ago the Neue Freie Presse invited the Mayors of several Bohemian towns to write their impressions with a view to publication, as that paper held that the state of distress prevailing in Austria should be more generally known. In response to this invitation the Mayors of Bodenbach, Gablonz, and Aussig wrote to the Neue Freie Presse, and their impressions are given below.

The Mayor of Bodenmuch said that his people had received no flour for weeks, and for the last three weeks their weekly bread ration had been from 60 dekas to 90 dekas, or from 20 to 30 ounces. During the last fortnight 50 dekas (16 1-2 ounces) of potatoes were issued per head of the population. The mayor goes on: "No help was vouchsafed, and the conviction spread that we should be left to starve. Popular feeling was not improved by finding that our Czech neighbours are living as in peacetime. We know also that our German neighbours are living in comfort thanks to a well-organized scheme of distribution. They are getting 2 kilos (4 lbs) of bread and 3 1-2 kilos (7 lbs.) of potatoes weekly, and butter, fat, and vegetables, etc., at infinitely lower prices than we have to pay." The Mayor concludes by saying that the people of Bodenbach have been driven by starvation rather than by political reasons to think of affiliation to Germany for the duration of the war and the transition period. Possibly Germany, however, has quite enough mouths to feed as it is.

The Mayor of Gablonz wrote "There are daily offers of sugar, potatoes and flour from the Czech districts, and this illicit trade is permitted by the State. We are foundering on the rock of Central administration. The Administration will not issue transport permits, though they cannot effect transport themselves. The State cannot keep its promises, and at the same time forbids the nation to fend for itself. The nation is desperate; it has lost trust in the honourable intentions of the Government. The food bureau protects the upper classes, not the consumer."

Finally the Mayor of Aussig holds that it is a scandal that flour can be bought illicity at an extortionate price, whilst the War Grain Office cannot supply the necessary amount. He blames the Government who "must have forseen this crisis months ago, and should have prepared for it and shown its trust in the nation by reducing the flour ration then."

All the Bohemian papers are agreed that the food conditions in Bohemia are extremely critical, and that the limit of endurance has been reached in German-Bohemia. North Bohemia is not an agricultural country, and one of the Mayors who wrote to the Neue Freie Presse was the Mayor of Gablonz. Well, Gablonz happens to be a case in point. It is well known that that district could support itself for exactly two and a half days in the year!

Consequently we find in North Bohemia a bread ration of half a loaf per week, and that half a loaf is composed for the most part of flour substitute. It is enough for one person for a day, but it is intended to last the week! In addition to this so-called bread ration half a pound of farinaceous food is allowed. Nothing else: no potatoes, no meat, no vegetables.

The following picture is drawn by the Prager Tagblatt, 8th May, 1918: "At the railway stations, crowds of all ages and conditions, carrying knapsacks; a crusade of hunger! Happy are those who still possess a shirt or blouse to exchange for a handful of potatoes on Czech soil, since money is scorned. * * * North Bohemia is starving, nay, dying of starvation. And now comes the requisitioning orders. Who does not smile; rather, who dares smile. Weeks ago the distress was such that the Emperor wept, and promised succour."

The remainder of the article in the Prager Tagblatt has been censored. One marvels at so much having been allowed to appear.

Berries and early apples are much more like fresh fruit when canned without sugar.

When necessary to add water to baked beans be sure that it is boiling water.

FORMER ORGANIST OF GEORGE STREET CHURCH IN CITY

Mr. Edmund Jacques, of New York, was in the city to-day looking up old acquaintances of thirty years ago, when he was organist of George street Methodist church.

Mr. Jacques has been enjoying a two months holiday, part of the time at Muskoka, and is now on his way home.

He quite naturally sees a great improvement in Peterborough, which he describes as an up-to-date, progressive little city.

German Experts Praise the Americans, Also Gen. Foch

One Commentor Says Allied Leader is Preparing Rear Attack on Teutons—Not Able to Conceal the French Successes From the German Public.

TELLS GERMANS TO HAVE FAITH

AMSTERDAM, July 31.—The German military commentators have begun complimenting the Allied commander, General Foch, now that they are no longer able to conceal his success from the German public. The Vossische Zeitung, of Berlin, for instance, refers to him repeatedly as an "able leader," while General von Ardenne in the Tageblatt frankly admits that the shortening of the German line had become necessary as the result of the French Generalissimo's impetuous counter offensive."

It is noticeable also that all the German newspapers speak of the recent operations as a "defensive battle," and General von Ardenne credits General Foch with a plan to extend his line northward with the object of attacking the Crown Prince's army in the rear as well as on the flank. This, coupled with the difficult zigzag formation of the German line, where the fighting is proceeding in the wooded wilderness to the southwest of Rheims, he says, makes a concentration of the German forces advisable.

GIVES CREDIT TO AMERICANS

The commentator goes on at great length to explain to his German readers that this means nothing serious, and, if any ground is yielded, it is of course enemy ground.

In Vorwaerts, Colonel Richard Gaedke pays handsome tribute to General Foch for profiting by past experience and gaining his end by launching a flank attack. "He succeeded," Colonel Gaedke says, and he adds what for a German is an astounding admission, "mainly because the armed assistance of the Americans proved effective.

"Tonnage and measures of safety at sea seem to have been provided in sufficient measure for the bringing of hundreds of thousands of Americans across the ocean," continues this writer. "They have rapidly assimilated the art of war, for war is a quick and thorough trainer."

It is incorrect to regard General Foch's undertaking only as a measure for relieving his front under the German pressure, Colonel Gaedke adds. It was rather, he declares, a well-prepared bid for regaining his freedom of action. The writer, however, maintains that after the initial success the course of General Foch's onslaught was spent on the third day, and that since that time he has made no further progress in his dash for Soissons. Thus he considers that General Foch's counter offensive has brought about no radical change in the situation and remains a mere interlude in the great drama.

TELLS GERMANS TO HAVE FAITH

The impression that the Franco-American counter-offensive has made on the Germans at home is perhaps best illustrated by an article written by Deputy Traub, of the Prussian lower house, in the Pan-German newspaper, the Tageliche Rundschau. Traub fiercely lashes the croakers, "who dare doubt the official headquarters reports of victory." He makes a desperate appeal for "more nerve" and "more faith," and blusters thus:

'If 'Der Alte Fritz' (Frederick the Great) walked the streets to-day and saw the people's long faces he would say: 'Remember the Seven Years' War, when fortune was often dead against us. Why grumble because affairs on the Marne are not going as well as expected? Devil take you! You ought to be ashamed of yourselves!' "

GRAIN MARKET

The corn market took an upturn yesterday, the sensitive character of the market at this critical time in the growth of the crop responding to the slightest pressure one way or the other. A slight change in the weather to cooler conditions, along with the war news of the day, which was interpreted by the trade as favourable to their side of the argument, was sufficient to send the market up at the close to 1 7-8c. to 1 1-2c. higher than yesterday's close. Oats at Winnipeg also moved up to 1 3-8c. higher than yesterday. Ontario barley, new crop, is quoted at $1.25 to $1.30.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday 30 cars, with 461 cattle, 141 calves, 411 hogs, and 159 sheep and lambs.

The cattle trade was decidedly dull and slow. Light thin cattle, particularly heifers, are in very poor demand. Several cars of Western cattle of this class just arrived, found a very slow market, and prices very shaky. It was difficult, in fact, to get bids on light medium butcher steers and heifers. Weighty steers are all right, and in good demand for export. Three or four small lots good heavy steers sold around $14 to $14.50. A few fat cows and bulls sold at about steady prices up to $10.50. For the rest little was offering, and less was wanted.

Sheep are steady and lambs a little firmer, a few extra choice selling up to $20.

Choice veal calves steady, but common weak.

Hogs firm and 25c. higher at $19.25, fed and watered. A few were sold at $19, but most at the quarter higher.

OATS PRESAGE VICTORY, MANY FARMERS THINK

Mysterious Sign Appears on Flag Leaves of Oat Plants in Fields—Similar Portent Was Observed In Year of Victory in South Africa.

A QUEER PHENOMENON

Among the list of munitions of war, which are vital to victory, there is none more important than the oat crop of Canada, the food for man and beast and one of the most valuable of the farmer's field crops, and in the oat plants themselves this year many people profess to find a portent of coming victory for the allied arms.

For some weeks, observant people in the agricultural districts, have pointed out a curious phenomenon in connection with the structure of the leaves of the oats, which many claim was observed the year the British arms triumphed in South Africa. The sign or portent is to be found on the flag leaf of the oats. The sign can be variously interpreted as the letter "B" or the figure "8" some of the leaves looked more like the one and some the other.

Does it mean that "victory" is coming to the British arms in 1918? Such is the interpretation given to the phenomenon by the superstitious, who declare they looked in vain for the sign last year and the year before, remembering the portent of victory in 1902.

How to Find It.

The sign may be seen by anyone. It is to be found on the flag leaf, which is the leaf nearest the head of the grain. To find it, pull the leaf, in doing which it is unnecessary to injure the grain, and spread the lance-shaped front flat on a table under a strong light. It makes no difference which side of the leaf is uppermost as the mysterious sign can be seen on either side. About one-third of the distance, from the place where the leaf joins the plant to the tip, there is usually, but not always, an appreciable narrowing of the leaf, and right at this point, impressed through the leaf, as it were, as though with a large type, is the letter "B" or the figure "8" plain to the eye.

An explanation of the sign which finds favour with some, is that it is connected with the new star, for many people believe that astral visitors have a special influence on crops. The grapevine is supposed to be peculiarly susceptible to the influence of comets, and wine produced in the years when comets, in the course of their erratic orbit, pass the earth is supposed to be better than in other years and the supposition during last century has been proved on many occasions, commencing with the visit of Halley's comet in 1811. "Comet Port" was especially sought by connoisseurs of wine.

Influence of Comets.

And comets themselves, whether or not they can influence the growing crops, are believed in many lands to presage war. An old Scotsman who remembers the Crimean war, remembers also the visit of the comet that year.

The strange part of the appearance of the sign on the oat leaf this year is that it should be this year. With the portent of victory in South Africa in 1902 it may safely be assumed that eager eyes scanned the leaves last year and the year before and people there are who see in the sign the interpretation of the recent war despatches which tell of the defeat of the German arms and the discomfiture of the Crown Prince's forces.

Stories of the discoveray of the sign are not confined to any one field or any one locality, but are widely scattered over the farms of old Ontario.

Food Board Flashes

More and more are we realizing on this continent that the efforts being made by the women of Europe to cope with the conditions in which they find themselves are little short of superhuman. Take the case of Paoline Benedini, an Italian widow whose five sons are under arms. She has just received an award from the Agricultural Department of Italy. She was left with three grand nephews and ten nephews and nieces ranging from 1 to 12 years of age. Not only did she provide for this large family but in addition she cultivated a farm of 10 acres and raised 15 head of cattle without any outside aid.

Surely she was as deserving of decoration as the Red Cross nurses whose bravery and devotion to duty have placed them on the country's honour list.

Except on irrigated lands all crops have suffered from drought in the Okanagan Valley, B. C., Alfalfa yield is fairly good, but timothy hay will be a poor crop all over the district.

MOVIES A HIT IN PALESTINE

JERUSALEM FANS THROW STONES AT VILLAIN AND CHEER FOR HERO.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Alan B. Stewart, a Portland business man, returning home after a trip through Palestine, discussed conditions in the Holy Land at his hotel. He said that the movie had hit Jerusalem hard. The cinema introduced to public use by the soldiers of General Allenby's command had filled a want long felt by the natives, and business was booming.

"Many of the natives," Mr. Stewart said, "never had seen the motion picture until recently, and when enthusiastic friends finally persuaded them to go they were at first frightened and then mystified. They quickly, however, became hardened fans, and right now they are developing into serious-minded critics, with pronounced tastes in what they do and don't like in pictures.

"The two favorite brands of reels are Wild West shootings and scenes of ice and snow. The pictures showing Iceland and Newfoundland are prime favorites, and many of the people on hot nights get quite cool watching polar bears eating ice or rolling around in the snow. The Jerusalem patron is a demonstrative fan; he speaks out "in church" when he wants to express approval or disapproval. For instance in the Wild West pictures, when the villain plants himself back of a rock and prepares to draw a bead on the good-looking hero, the crowd is apt to throw a few rocks at the screen; the very least they do is to whoop out a warning in chorus.

"When the villain is finally killed off there is a general nodding of heads and muttering of thanks."

Mr. Stewart said that Jerusalem had only one theatre when he left, but that plans were being made to form a chain of playhouses.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

HELEN GIVES HER HOSTESS PLESAURE

CHAPTER CXXXII

The library was a massively beautiful room with bookcases running about three sides of it, and an immense fireplace. Wonderful etchings was solid and substantial, but so comwas solid and substantial, but so fortable; and the lighting softly subdued, was fascinating.

The business was discussed for nearly an hour, both Mr. Babcock and George occasionally appealing to either Mrs. Babcock or me. I felt so flattered and happy. The unusualness of it all, was stimulating, and I realized that I never had appeared to better advantage.

Mrs. Babcock had told us her niece was dining out, that night, for which I felt like saying "thank goodness!" It was so nice to have just the four of us.

After they had finished discussing the business matters, they asked if I was musical. George did not wait for me to reply, but at once said I had unusual talent.

"You will play for us, then?" Mrs. Babcock asked. I, of course, agreed —not only because I loved to play; had I not, I should have been more than willing to do anything to please them.

HELEN DELIGHTS WITH HER MUSIC.

If the library had been attractive the dining room in perfect taste, I fairly held my breath at the beauty of the music room. The baby grand piano, the harp, and the violin showed a family of music lovers. The dainty coloring of the rugs and draperies—the pictures—all were in perfect taste, perfectly harmonious.

As much as I loved music, as much as I loved to play, I never enjoyed playing more than I did that night —never felt that I was more appreciated. After I stopped, Mr. Babcock took the violin and we played a duet. Then Mrs. Babcock joined us on the harp. It was delightful. When we finished, they explained that the daughter who died was a pianist of wonderful ability. That music had been their great recreation, because they were all so extremely fond of it. Then they asked me to sing.

I sang a cycle of songs, then the folk songs of the Scotch. Mrs. Babcock was of Scottish descent, and had spoken of her delight in the music of Robert Burns.

It was nearly midnight when we left, after promising to dine with them once again before we went home.

"Aren't they delightful?" I said to George, as we drove back to the hotel in their luxurious limousine. I don't know when I have enjoyed myself so much."

"Indeed they are!" he heartily agreed, "And, Helen if I put that deal over, I shall have you to thank for it. They both were charmed with you."

"I am glad, if I have been of help," I returned, rather stiltedly, yet thrilled by the thought.

HELEN BRAGS TO JULIA COLLINS.

The next day, as I was eating lunch, Julia Collins came into the dining room, and, as she did before, joined me without being invited, or even wanted.

"I looked for you and George last night! I had some charming people here to dinner. I wanted him to meet them," she said. (I noticed it was "him" she wanted, not "you.")

"We dined with Mr. and Mrs. Babcock at their home," I returned.

"You did!" her tone expressed surprise. She had not heard the invitation extended to us, the night in the grill; she had been too busy talking to the others.

"Yes, and their home is delightful. It is really gorgeous. The dinner and service were wonderful! We had music afterward; they both play —he the violin, she the harp, and"— —the violin, she the harp, and"— music," she said in a peculiar tone

"I don't know that I shone, but I do know I was glad I could play. It seemed to give them so much pleasure. I sang for them, also, before we left. She is Scotch, and I sang Scottish songs."

"You must have had a nice time. I suppose George was proud of you."

"I hope so," then I changed the subject. I still wondered at her tone.

After I had gone up-stairs, I recalled the conversation, and blushed for shame. I had done nothing but brag; and Julia Collins, much as I disliked her, I knew would not be guilty of such a thing. I was terribly ashamed of myself, and could only hope she would not repeat what I had said.

When George came in, I knew at once he had seen her and that she had repeated it.

"What need to brag, Helen? I don't think either Mr. or Mrs. Babcock would be pleased. And it very bad form."

To-morrow—An Unqualified Success.

THE PERFECT SPELLER.

Test Him by Having Him Write This Jumble From Dictation.

One occasionally comes across a superior person who tells you he can easily spell any word every printed in a dictionary. If ever you meet this type of man just ask somebody to dictate the following jumble to him and see how many mistakes he will make:

"Antinous, a disappointed, desiccated physicist, was peeling potatoes in an embarrassing and harassing way. His idiosyncrasy and privilege was to eat mayonnaise and mussels while staring at the Pleiades and seizing people's tricycles and velocipedes. He was an erring teetotaler and had been on a picayune jamboree. He rode a paltrey stallion and carried a salable, papier mache bouquet of asters, phlox, mullein, chrysanthemums, rhododendrons, fuchsias and nasturtiums.

"He wore a sibyl's resplendent turquoise paraphernalia, an ormolu yashmak and astrakhan chaparejos. He drank crystallizable and disagreeable carnesa juleps through a sieve. He stole some moneys and hid them under a peddler's mahogany bedstead and mattress.

"Like a fiend in an ecstasy of gayety I rushed after him into the maelstrom, or melee, and held him as in a vise. I could not fenze him, however, and he addressed me, with autocracy, in the following imbecile words, which sounded like a soliloquy or a superseding paean on an oboe: 'You are a rotable lunamoth, a salaaming vizier, an equinoctial corypheo and an isosceles daguerreotype."—New York Mail.

THE MAN WHO SWORE

By M. QUAD.

(Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.)

When it became known in the village that George White and Edith Smith were engaged to be married almost everybody said that it was a good match. George was what they termed a model young man, who had just started in the grocery business, and Edith was a schoolteacher and liked by all. The pair were congratulated on all sides, and there was but one doubting Thomas. That was Edith's Uncle John, who was at the home on a visit. When she asked him for his opinion he waited a moment before putting the query:

"Does this young man of yours swear?"

"No, of course not! He never uttered an oath in his life!" was the somewhat indignant reply.

"When he gets mad does he kick things?"

"But he doesn't get mad."

"If he woke up some morning to find the gate open and a hog in the garden would he scramble for a club and try to kill that hog?"

"I don't think so. I think he would drive the animal out without making any fuss about it."

"Then don't marry him."

"Why, Uncle John, how you talk!"

"Don't marry him. My dear, I am sixty-five years old. I have been observing human nature for the last fifty years. There are heaps of good men in this world, but they are men not made of putty. Things vex 'em. Other things make 'em mad. They swear. They kick. They break things. Sometimes they fight."

"And such men drive their wives from home," commented the niece.

"Such men don't do anything of the sort. It's the other kind. They don't swear at their wives; but at the weather, at hogs and oxen, at the ax dying off the handle, at a barrel of cider rolling over 'em as they are getting it down cellar. It's the smooth, placid man who does the harm. Find him and you'll find a nagger. Find him and you'll find a sneerer, a husband that can cut and humiliate and belittle at the same time."

"Uncle John, you've got it all wrong. You are one of the best men in the world, and I never heard you swear."

"Neither did your Aunt Mary. Leastwise, I never swore at her. And yet I swore. Lord, gal, there have been times when I made the shingles in the barn fairly smoke. I've been so mad that I wanted to do murder, but swearing saved me from it. Ten minutes of ripping things up the back quieted me down. One time I hid $200 in cash in the pocket of an old coat. Along came a tramp, and your aunt gave him the garment. I didn't know it for a week. Did I chop her up with the ax? No. I went out behind the barn and jumped up and down and swore; I pounded the barn; I dug up the site; I broke limbs off a pear tree. In half an hour I was back in the house kissing Mary's tears away and telling her not to mind."

The marriage took place, and six months later there was a separation. The husband could and did gibe and sneer and find fault and do it as placidly as a goose pond. He never lost his temper, and his face wore a smile, but he made home a sort of hell. The young wife went to the village where Uncle John lived, while the husband remained at home. People said it was her fault—all but the uncle. He said:

"I told you so. It's only a separation thus far, and there's hopes you may get together again. Let me run things this time."

Edith secured a place in the telephone office, and almost the first voice she heard over the wire after being in charge was that of her husband. He also recognized hers, but they treated each other as strangers.

One day the "Hello, central!" was followed by the announcement:

"Say, Edith, people here are saying that we ought to make up."

"Yes?"

"They say it's too bad that we couldn't get along better."

"Yes?"

"They say I ought to be the first one to make advances, and so I'm going to tell you that I wish you'd come back."

"Who is this speaking?"

"Why, George, of course."

"And you want me to come back?"

"Yes."

"Have you learned to swear yet?"

"What a question! No, of course not!"

"Then we won't talk further. Good-by."

He was hurt, and he waited a week before calling her up again to ask:

"Well, Edith, what do you think?"

"Can you swear yet?"

"But what has that got to do with"—

"Everything. When you can swear, fling axes and break down trees I'll talk to you. I want you to make yourself all over."

This time he waited two weeks. Then the message came:

"Edith, listen to this: —! —! —! —! — —!"

"Yes, dear."

"And to the way I'm breaking boxes and throwing tomato cans around the store."

"I hear, George."

"Today I have licked three tramps, discharged my clerk, kicked in the head of a barrel of molasses and told Deacon Primie to go to Texas. I've made a change, and I feel lovely. Will you come back to me?"

"I'll be there on the afternoon train tomorrow. Oh, George, keep it up! Grow worse all the time!"

And George did, and the people point out the house to strangers as the happiest household in the village.

CHARGE THEFT BEEF FROM STATES ARMY

TWENTY-ONE PERSONS PLACED UNDER ARREST AT NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Twenty-one persons were indicted here by the federal grand jury on a charge of being implicated in the theft of beef consigned to the United States army.

The defendants have been arrested and held in bail of from $1,000 to $10,000 each.

According to United States Attorney Vasolli, the operations of the defendants have been going on for a long time, but the indictments cover specific acts said to have been committed between April 29 and May 24.

The plan, he said, was for checkers to tell foremen at the delivery depots to give receipts to drivers for a less amount than had been loaded upon their trucks. The surplus beef it is charged, thus withheld from the Government was bought by the accused butchers, who disposed of it at a big profit.

NUXATED IRON

The Power Behind Strong, Keen, Red-Blooded Americans

"To help make strong, keen, red-blooded Americans there is nothing in my experience which I have found so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated Iron," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down people in two weeks' time. It is now being used by over three million people annually, including such men as Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, former Secretary of the Treasury, and ex-Governor of Iowa; former United States Senator Richard Rolland Kenney of Delaware, at present Major of the U. S. Army; General John L. Clem (Retired), the drummer boy of Shiloh, who was sergeant in the U. S. Army when only 12 years of age; also United States Judge C. W. Atkinson of the Court of Claims of Washington and others. Nuxated Iron is dispensed by all good druggists everywhere.

Unexaggerated Fishing

YOU should read this story. Usually a fishing tale is deep waters for most people to wade through; but this one deals with dry land, mountains and ripples. So you see it is different from the ordinary tale where the young hero goes forth with a tencent outfit and catches the giant trout of the deep still pool for whom anglers from all parts of the world had cast in profane vain. It is all right to tell about lying on one's stomach with the face against the water, watching the flies to learn what kind the trout were eating. It is all right to then walk to the fishing outfit, sit down and bring forth an inexhaustible supply of flies from which one selects the very duplicate of the insect the trout like at that particular instant. And it is fine to tell how the angler cast his delicate lure on the end of his silken thread, dropping it lightly as a skimming insect on the very swirl of water where the big trout lay hungrily waiting. Then the whir 'of the reel and the three-hour fight, ending in the thrill of victory which comes when a well-manipulated landing net enmeshes the exhausted fish.

t makes good stuff; but many rmen know more of broken leads, d hooks and snappy little ncers. I am undertaking to t a real fishing trip.

They told me I would get good fishing at Banff, so I took the Canadian Pacific westbound out of Calgary and went. On board I noticed an elderly person whose physical idiocynerasies included the lean, leathery, brown characteristics of westerniam. He eyed me and my outfit; he edged closer and he spoke of tobacco and rain. He accepted my pouch, filled his pipe-bowl, tamped it with a horny thumb, cast a weather eye on the approaching mountain peaks, and predicted sunshine. Then he mentioned fishing.

It was not what it used to be he declared, between tobacco clouds. He remembered when seven or ten or fifty casts meant seven or ten or fifty rises of the biggest, bitingist most vigorous fish that ever lived; all cutthroats, none less than a pound and a half, many exceeding five pounds each. "Them days was real fishin'. An' them fish were game fighters. He minded one ole feller what everyone had tried to git. This fish was grandad of all of them, and he lived in a deep hole beside a perpendicular rock. He tuk ever' bit uh bait that anybody cast, but when he found himself hooked he jest naturally run to this here wall of flat rock an' rubbed his nose agin th' stone, wearing out th' gut on freein' himself." But my informant, being more canny and wise than other fishermen of his day, befooled the giant trout by not using gut. He tuk uh hunk uh fine steel wire, jointed it with swivels and hooked the monster. Then Zam! The fish was so astonished that he did not wiggle an inch of his twelve-pound body until he felt himself on the grass above the gravel bar. But those days were over and one did not catch any more big fish.

Eventually I reached Banff, and was told to fish either up the Spray or up the Bow. They added that the waters were rising and fish would not be hungry, but again I might succeed. With weapons rigged I went up the Bow to a promising place I was told about. It had deep water with big eddies and a nice back-drift, a few big rocks, and a submerged ledge just below the feeding rapids above the pool. Fine. Feverishly and eagerly I cast. Then steadily and doggedly. Then slowly and sullenly. Then, glory! The line went out. I had a nine inch fish. Much cheered I went on casting. The sun went down, the sky began to darken, the mountains stood black against the dimming azure. I flagged in my efforts. I sat on a log and let the line drag. B-z-z-z went the reel. A fish flashed in the rapids.

Having a new landing net I was very anxious to try it. It was the kind that fastens to a hook on a belt and comes off with the flick of a hand whenever necessary. I had no hook and had buttoned it on my suspender button. Having passed through much brush on my way to the pool I knew the net was going to require care in getting ready for use. Having hooked a fish I very calmly bethought myself first of bow to land him; so I plucked the net, and the button came, to the consternation of my suspenders.

Now my fish gave the one pound pull and the two pound bite all right. He also was there with the scheduled weight of rush. Things looked good for him to keep up the first scale, too, out when it came to the five pound bend the gut broke and I went home to the hotel.

Next morning with the bright sunlight just tipping the eastern slopes of Mount Rundle and lesser peaks, I went alone up river. Here and there and everywhere I dropped the seductive fly in the rising glacial flood with no results.

"Darn," I remarked. My line fell slack and uncared for into swift water and I looked up the river for some better seeming point. "Bang!" Something hit my rod like an express train, and like an express train the silk ran out and out. Aghast I stood and merely checked. Something was on. Out went the line, straight across the swift water; then I saw a large black streak break far out in the edge of white water. Once, twice, three times the fish took the air, and the reel kept singing all the time. He sounded, he rushed, he drove upstream and then zig-zagged down. Again and again he broke, two feet clear of the current. Forty yards of line was out and I had but five left, so I hopelessly checked tight, deciding that if he was going to break my lead it was no use worrying. But lead, rod, line and hook held, and the fish swung down on the surface, mouth open and gasping. There was brush all around, and no space to either work up or down. The full sweep of the river raced by with no restful eddies. More hopelessly still I reeled in, his troutship putting up frequent but lessening furries. Finally he was close and I tried the new landing net. Praise be to cord and rod and hook and gut the net worked. As the line slackened the hook dropped out, but there was the fish: three pounds of sparkling, spotted cutthroat trout, twenty-three inches long.

There was no more fishing. I went home satisfied. The gentle reader will note that even this story ends in the usual way with the big fish safely netted.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The King's Castles

By JAMES NEWTON

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

In college Yates Barlow had gone in for economics and sociology. When he was graduated and started in law studies, though he did not dub himself a socialist, still he persuaded himself that in the management of the rather comfortable estate left him by his grandmother he would fall into none of those errors of selfishness that too frequently — as he was convinced — characterize the dealings of men of capital with those who labor for them. And although he decided to leave the management of the large up-town apartment house, pretentiously dubbed "King's Castles," that constituted one of his most remunerative investments in the hands of his father's office force until he had finished his law course, he made it perfectly clear that he sought no profits from that undertaking that might be made at the expense of fair play to the folk who worked under the spacious roof of the apartment house.

"Maybe there isn't any eight-hour law for women in this state," he said to his father. "Maybe there isn't—we haven't come to it in law lecture yet. But eight hours is all any woman ought to be asked to work, and I tell you right here that I'm not going to have any woman work longer than the one who works for me."

The genial elder man looked up with a smile, the serenity of which rather annoyed Yates. "She is a nice little girl," he said, with an emphasis on the verb that seemed to betoken that Yates knew to whom the pronoun referred.

"I guess at your age I'd have had the same ideas about working hours for women, especially if the only woman I employed happened to be eighteen and as fresh as a snow apple. She is a nice girl, isn't she?"

"If you mean Miss Sarter—yes. She seems to be a lot better than you usually get to tend an apartment house telephone switchboard. That's got nothing to do with the fairness of making her work nine hours a day or keeping her at the switchboard on holidays."

"But, man alive, she wants to do it," explained the father.

"No girl of spirit likes to show her unwillingness to do what she's got to do," pronounced the son with the air of one who felt that he possessed keen insight into feminine psychology.

"Well, you've got a lot more sense than some boys your age," was the father's only retort. "If you take a fancy to a pure-hearted country girl like Abby Sarter instead of some empty-pated, over-dressed society girl, you're all right."

Yates had taken a fancy to Abby but for some reason he did not like to have the fact taken for granted. He could not explain to himself just why his father's remarks that morning proved so irritating.

As time went on Yates developed a keen interest in the management of his apartment house. He loved to think of the time when—his law course ended—he would take over the entire management of the place himself and not actually needing to net the largest possible income from it, strive to run the house along ideal lines. He even thought of putting the girl at the switchboard on a six-hour schedule but somehow he never thought of Abby Sarter's continuing to sit at the switchboard when he put his plans in working order.

Meantime Abby Sarter sat at the switchboard in the corner of the spacious, many-mirrored, much-begilt entrance of Yates' uptown apartment house, for nine hours a day, and never thought of having a holiday other than Sunday. Sometimes she came in for a few hours even on that day of rest. To Yates that entrance hall was not entirely satisfactory. He could see the cheap plaster behind the thin veneer of marble on the walls. The colors of the heavy plush rugs that lay on the tile floors looked cruder to him every time he saw them. The lights that blazed forth from the chandeliers and were reflected again and again in the long mirrors were glarish and smote his eyes offensively. Yet he knew that it was that spacious, garish hall that attracted tenants and made them willing to pay good rents for small apartments, and he realized that he would be benefiting no one but himself if he toned down the garishness to suit his own taste. He had no way of knowing at first how resplendent it looked to Abby—Abby, who basked in the effulgence of a dozen bright lights now, and in the days on the farm had known only the glow of a single oil lamp as she sat in the farmhouse sitting room. To her the entrance of the apartment house was the sum total of urbane luxury and elegance and the people who came and went through the hall and were bowed to by the hall attendants in proportion to their most recent gratuity were to her among the favored ones of the earth. She did not know that her share of one of the farms at home would put her into the possession of a bank account several times as large as that held by any of these cliff dwellers.

Abby knew none of the tenants well. Why should they bother their heads about the switchboard operator, anyway? But with the curiosity and powers of observation bred in the country, she had made for herself vivid pictures of each individual in the house. Sometimes there were weddings or receptions, dinner parties, or even little dances in the apartments, and then Abby's eyes would be even brighter than usual and her pulses would quicken as she felt the proximity of so much merriment and gaiety.

One of the personages that came under her constant observation was young Yates Barlow. To her he seemed, as the owner of all this grandeur, a veritable modern prince. Whenever he came to the apartment he stopped and chatted with her in a rather shy but friendly way, asking vague questions about her work.

After each of his chats with Abby, Yates Barlow was more than ever convinced that she was overworked. Not that she ever gave any indication of this state of affairs by anything that she said. But how could a charming girl like Abby, he thought, sit for nine monotonous hours making connections for thoughtless tenants, without feeling overworked?

Yates took to calling up the apartment on mythical business matters, just to make sure that Abby's voice sounded as fresh and unfagged as ever. Then spring came. After a hard week at law school, Yates was getting ready one Saturday morning to motor out to a week-end house party in the country. The day was one of those warm and tempting days that sometimes come so early that they seem to be out of season. All his boyish hatred of indoor work made Yates look forward to the two days in the country with enthusiasm. And then he thought of Abby—country bred Abby—used no doubt to wandering about the fields and hillsides at will—tied to that monotonous switchboard.

"I'll stay home myself," thought Yates. "That girl certainly deserves a Saturday half holiday. I can't ask any of the elevator boys to run the switchboard, but I can do it myself, and I am going to."

Yates concocted a hurried telephone excuse to his hostess and then with a light heart started uptown to King's Castles. He could visualize the happy smile that would come into Abby's eyes when he told her that she could take the afternoon off. He looked forward, too, with no small pleasure to the ten or fifteen minutes of instruction that he knew must take place while she showed him how to work the switchboard.

"And if I do make mistakes," he thought, "and the tenants get mad nobody can fire me."

He got up to the apartment house about eleven o'clock and found Abby as fresh and smiling as ever.

"I have nothing to do this afternoon, Miss Sarter," he began, "and it's such a corking day, I thought perhaps you'd be wanting an afternoon off. So I thought I'd stay here and run this switchboard and you could have a little vacation. I don't just know how but I think maybe you could show me, couldn't you?"

Abby looked at him in amazement. "Why, I don't want a vacation, Mr. Barlow. I couldn't possibly do anything that would give me as much fun as running this switchboard."

"But I mean a chance to go some place—out in the country, you know—or something like that," said Yates.

"But I've lived in the country all my life, Mr. Barlow. And this—she waved her hand inclusively about the spacious hall—this is so wonderful. I should think just to own a place like King's Castles would make you happy."

Barlow looked at the girl before him with a new interest. For months he had been growing fond of her, but mixed with his liking there had been a feeling of pity that she should be forced to do uncongenial work. Now he felt a new admiration for her. She was doing the work she liked and getting a full measure of happiness from each day at the monotonous switchboard. "Just to own a place like this"—her words rang in his ears. Well, why shouldn't she own King's Castles? He could give it to her for a wedding gift if that would make her happy. He knew now that it was Abby who could make him happy and perhaps he with King's Castles thrown in could make her happy.

"Well," said Yates, "let me stay with you this afternoon, anyway, and let's go some place for dinner together. I'm going to ask you if you'll help me run King's Castles all your life?"

Screw Borss Its Own Hole.

Evidently Charles D. Woodward, of Providence, R. I., has often had considerable trouble in driving the conventional wood screw into hard wood, for he has developed a screw which bores its own hole as it proceeds. According to his patent claims, says the Scientific American, he has devised a countersinking gimlet-pointed screw having at the root of its point a bulge constituting the largest diameter of the shank, and having across its thread a spiral groove, one end of which forms a cutter at the bulge. The groove goes once around the screw and terminates at the slant of the head and at the root of the gimlet point.

How to Pour Liquids.

In pouring liquid from a jug or bottle, the vessel should be held with the opening downward, rather than horizontally, if convenient, and swung quickly with a circular motion. The liquid will rotate and in leaving the opening will permit air to enter continuously, causing the liquid to run out rapidly and without intermittent gurgling sounds.

If the opening of the container is at one side it is best to hold the container so that the opening is at the highest point of the end, rather than at the bottom. The air may thus enter and permit a continuous flow until the container is empty.

VON BUELOW'S NEPHEW CAPTURED; ASTONISHED AT AMERICAN NUMBERS

PARIS, July 30.—(Havas Agency)—Among the prisoners captured in the Aisne-Marne battle was a nephew of Prince von Buelow, the former German imperial chancellor.

The officer, who was a battalion commander, was astonished to hear that there was a large American army in France. He said he had been convinced, as had all Germans, that the American soldiers in France did not exceed fifty thousand.

Among the heroes decorated by President Poincare in his visit to the battle zone was a nephew of Premier Clemenceau.

War Office Reports Indicate Heavy Fighting on the American and French Fronts

PRISONERS TAKEN

Canadian Press:

LONDON, July 31.— German artillery displayed considerable activity last night in the region of Merris, on the Flanders front, which was taken yesterday by Australians, and on the Kemmel sector, the War Office announced to-day. It was also active on both sides of the Somme. Prisoners were taken in raids and patrol encounters in the Lens region and north of Bethune.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, July 31.—(French Official). —After a heavy bombardment the Germans attacked new French positions east of Oulchy Haile Chateau. Our troops repulsed four enemy assaults and maintained their lines intact.

On the right bank of the Ourcq there were lively combats. Northeast of Fere En Tardenois the village of Seringes-Haile-Nesles passed from hand to hand, but was finally taken by American troops in counter attacks. A number of raids were made by the Germans near Mesnil, St. Georges, west of Montdidier, in La Pretere Wood and on the right bank of the Meuse, and in the Vosges. They were without result. Our troops made a successful incursion into the German lines north-east of Perthes-Hailes-Hurlus, in the Champagne, and brought back prisoners. The night was quiet on the remainder of the front.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

ROME, July 31. — (Official Statement). — In the Daone Valley our troops have surprised enemy advanced posts and captured its occupants. In the Brenta Valley the enemy launched an attack in force against our line in the Cornone. After brisk hand to hand fighting, the enemy was forced to retire, losing machine guns and flame projectors. Few prisoners remained in our hands. Five hostile airplanes have been brought down.

CHAUTAUQUA AT NIAGARA FALLS

Pledge Cards Freely Signed for Return Engagement.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 31.—After Dr. Conwell's lecture last evening pledge blanks were taken through the audience and enough signatures of guarantee received to bring The Chautauqua back to this city in 1919. The signatories guarantee $1,200 in tickets sold. It is felt that it will be easier to sell tickets next year than this, for the Chautauqua in its first visit to Niagara Falls made a host of friends.

Junior Chautauqua activities continue every morning in Victoria park. Under the supervision of Miss Abigail Moore and her assistants, the kiddies play their games, have their sport, and last but far from least, enjoy their story hour. The work of the pageant goes ahead, the children being instructed daily in their parts. In the afternoon, the Tschaikowsky quartette of Boston gave a song recital, and in the evening a song recital was given by Bertha Favner of the San Colorada Grand Opera Co., assisted by the quartette.

GERMAN LOSSES SINCE START OF WAR HAVE REACHED 4,760,000

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, July 31.—German losses since the start of the war have reached 4,760,000 according to estimates published here today in L'Homme Libre, Premier Clemenceau's newspaper. The Germans now have 5,430,000 men, it is estimated, of which 4,000,000 are engaged on the west front.

The paper estimates that since March the German losses have been a million and a half, of which a million, it is said have been put out of action.

A DELAY NOW WOULD PROVE DISASTROUS FOR GERMANS

Allies are Advancing on Fismes—Will Divide Hindenburg's Armies

MUST RETIRE

(By J. W. Mason—United Press.)

NEW YORK, July 13.— In reply to Von Hindenburg's counter attacks north of the Ourcq, Allied troops are now engaged in an advance along the main railway leading to Fismes, which threatens to divide the Aisne-Ourcq salient into two narrow pockets.

Fismes is about midway between Soissons and Rheims. If the Allied advance to Fismes is unchecked, and if Von Hindenburg delays his retreat east and west of the Allied drive too long, he will yet meet with disaster. The possibility that a large bag of German prisoners may be taken has now returned through operations along the Fismes railway.

Laying the Trap.

Gen. Foch's strategy is still directed toward narrowing Von Hindenburg's manoeuvre ground, so that the Germans may be caught in a trap. The east and west sides of the Aisne-Ourcq salient are strongly held by the Germans as to make pushing inward very difficult. Gen. Foch is therefore trying to push northward through the middle of the southern base of the salient. This is the operation in which the Allies along the Fismes railway are now engaged. If manoeuvre succeeds, the Aisne-Ourcy salient would become in shape like a "W," the three tops being represented from left to right by Soissons, Fismes and Rheims. The Germans would be caught in two "V" shaped wedges, with the Allies on the east, west and south and also in the middle within the inverted "V."

Must Retire.

The Germans would thus be caught in two traps. To avoid this development, Von Hindenburg must order a retirement along his southern front. If the Americans continue to move toward Fismes, counter offensives by Von Hindenburg at this time are useless, unless they are concentrated against the American apex along the Fismes railway. This is why Von Hindenburg is thrusting savagely at the American divisions. It is the Americans who are driving him at bay.

AUSTRALIA'S NAVY TO GROW LARGER

Hon. Joseph Cook says Commonwealth Spends £5,000,000 Yearly on It.

London, July 30. — Hon. Joseph Cook, Minister of Australian Navy and former Premier of the Commonwealth, speaking in connection with the launching of the new warship built in Australia, referred to the part the Australian navy had played on the eve of the war in Samoa, New Guinea and other parts of the Pacific. He recalled that an Australian submarine was the first to penetrate the Dardanelles and enter the Sea of Marmora. Splendid work had also been accomplished elsewhere, including the recent raid at Zeebrugge. It was thus seen that the Australian navy, though very young, had already begun its history.

Before the Australian navy was established, said Mr. Cook, it was sometimes most difficult to induce the Parliament of the Commonwealth to contribute 200,000 pounds annually towards a single fleet. To-day, the Commonwealth. Parliament readily accepts a scheme of naval defense involving an expenditure of five million pounds sterling annually Parliament does this, he said, because the proposals appeal to the dignity of the Australian nation. Australia's navy will grow bigger and stronger, and every unit of added strength may be confidently regarded as an addition to the might and power of the British Empire.

Bolsheviki Reach Limit

Russian Masses are About to Rise in Arms Against Bolshevik Tyranny.

LONDON, July 31. — Information received from Stockholm says a correspondent to the Times there, shows that the Bolsheviki regime has come to the end of its tether and Russian masses, workmen and peasants are about to rise in arms against Bolsheviki tyranny. Official representatives of the social revolutionary and social democratic parties in Russia have arrived in Stockholm and issued a remarkable appeal to the socialists from the international commission representative of all social parties to visit and ascertain the direct investigation whether the Russian Socialists are not right in declaring that the Bolsheviki have brought widespread evils on Russia, destroyed industry, caused universal starvation, and are now concerned only in remaining in power at all cost.

POLITICAL STORM CLOUDS GATHER

Wholesale Arrests Have Been Made In the Ukraine.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, July 31.— Political storm clouds are gathering around the Ukrainian government, according to a despatch from Hamburg to the Nieue Rotterdamsche Corrant to-day. GERMAN FIELD MARSHAL KILLED

Bomb Was Thrown Into His Carriage at Kiev.

(Canadian Press)

Amsterdam, July 31. — Field Marshal Von Eichorn, German commander in the Ukraine, and Captain Von Dressel his adjutant, were wounded by a bomb thrown in Kiev to-day, and they later died.

The bomb was thrown from a car which drove close to the Marshal's carriage near his residence. The assassin and cab drove away. It has been established that the crime originated with the Socialists in Moscow.

AMSTERDAM, July 31.—The Field Marshal's assasin is a lad of twenty-three who came to Kiev yesterday from the Rizan province near Moscow purposely to kill Eichorn. Concurrently with news of the death of Eichorn, the Hamburg "Freddenblatt" prints a despatch from Kiev saying that a heavy storm cloud has gathered on the political horizon in Ukraine and that the government is trying toward off threatened unrest by making wholesale arrests. Eichorn had a brilliant record in the army both before and during the war, during which he field command on the Russian front and was decorated for the capture of Kovno. He was sent to the Ukraine last April to supervise the creation of a government for the new republic and had become virtual dictator there.

FAIL TO AGREE

The Turks and the Bulgarians are still deadlocked over the Dobrudja situation, and it is rumoured, without confirmation, that the Turks and the Bulgarians are still deadlocked over the Dobrudja situation; it is rumoured without confirmation that Turkish and Bulgarian soldiers have already clashed on the borders.

Germans Making Desperate Efforts to Keep the Allies From Breaking Through

GERMAN GENERAL STAFF ADMITS FAILURE OF DRIVE

People Back Home are Promised a "Decisive Blow."

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The German General Staff has officially admitted that "the drive upon Paris is a failure," but has promised the people back home that "a decisive blow will be delivered immediately against the Anglo-French front."

In the communique, entitled the "situation on the Marne," which appeared yesterday in nearly every German paper, no mention was made of American participation in the defeat.

MEAT RESTRICTIONS TO BE MODIFIED

Food Situation is Believed to be Pretty Well in Hand.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, July 31. — While Food Controller Thompson declines to make any official statement on the matter, it is fully believed here that the restrictions at present imposed on the consumption of hog products in Canada will be removed shortly, and that those on the consumption of beef will be modified. Present deliberation by United States' Food Controller Hoover and London are to the effect that the food situation so far as essentials are concerned, is now pretty well in hand, and while saving must continue to be practised, there is every cause for satisfaction. Ministers who have returned from England report that coupons are no longer required for pork or bacon. It is known here that the hog production campaign inaugurated in Canada had splendid results and that there are now large stocks in the country and less being shipped out. Therefore the removal of present restrictions is believed to be inevitable, together with a modification of the restrictions on beef.

Whether there will be any further reduction in price remains to be seen.

Decisive Blow Is Postponed

The New Situation is Bothering Hindy.

(Special to Examiner.)

HOUSE STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Every Pane of Glass in the Windows Was Broken.

FENELON FALLS, July 31.—During the severe electrical storm which passed over this vicinity Monday afternoon, the house of Mr. Robert Junkin, who lives about five miles from this village, near Bethel Church, Vegulam, was struck by lightning, about six o'clock. The building was struck in the centre of the roof, the ridge board being torn completely off and the shingles on each side for several feet being demolished. Almost every pane of glass in the windows was broken and inside the house plaster and lathing were badly damaged, being torn off and scattered in every direction. Fortunately Mr. and Mrs. Junkin and the latter's sister, Miss Patterson, were in the kitchen at the time, all escaping injury except Mrs. Junkin, who received a severe shock. Medical attention was at once secured and it is hoped by her numerous friends that she may soon recover from its effects.

Orderly German Retreat Toward Fismes is Still in Progress—Traps for the Americans.

HEAVY FIGHTING

(United Press Service.)

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, July 31.—The stiff resistance the Germans are now putting up indicates that a strong line has been established, and bitter efforts are being made to keep the Allies from breaking through it, but prisoners insist the enemy will make his most determined stand between Rheims and Soissons.

The orderly German retreat toward Fismes is still in progress, screened by heavy rear-guard action along the line from Ville-Montoire, through Parcy-Et-Tigny, Grand Rozy and Fere-En-Tardenois, eastward beyond Seringes and Sergy and on to Ronchères. Americans hold Segy and Hill 212 nearby. They also have stormed and hold Meary Farm. The battle is constantly becoming more fierce. In bitter hand-to-hand conflicts, the American infantry was at grips with the enemy all day yesterday. German artillery is working with infantry for the first time since the retreat started. American artillery is superbly backing up our infantry.

Oppose Advance.

Remnants of the Fourth Prussian Guard continue to oppose the American advance in the region of Seray. In the fighting there, our troops charged up one side of a hill and over the crest into strong German forces massed opposite. American batteries sent a barrage ahead of the columns, which swept on and pushed through the enemy despite vigorous resistance, cleaning out German machine gun nests as they advanced. In their retreat the Boches left many traps for the Americans. On one sector of our line bridges over the Ourcq and roads leading to the river were mined in the expectation that the United States troops would be blown up when they tried to cross the stream. One of the roads was heavily mined, but the explosion failed to materialize.

Routed Enemy.

The Boche also established machine gun pits—two men to each nest —in fields and along ridges north of the Ourcq. Working under cover of darkness the enemy organized strong positions into which the Americans were expected to blunder in their advance. Ine one section, considerable barbed wire was found stretched in front of the machine gun pits. Our artillery did excellent work in destroying these barricades and shelters. Then the Americans rushed in and routed the enemy in hand-to-hand encounters.

GREEK MINISTER PRAISES ITALIAN PARTICIPATION

Athens, July 31. — Foreign Minister Politis of Greece, praised the Italian participation in the war, in an interview published here to-day. He emphasized the fact that Italy is true to her political traditions, proof of which, he pointed out, is her understanding with the Jugo-Slavs, and her sincere effort to come to a similar understanding with Greece.

WAR WIDOWS ADDRESS POPE

(Special to Examiner.)

Rome, July 31. — Two hundred thousand war widows represented by members of the old French nobility, to-day addressed the Pope, asking his help and a benediction in behalf of their fatherless children. Among the leaders who came here were the Duchess of Dezobad, the Princess of Clexmont and Tonneferre, the Princess de Popichac and the Princess Murat.

THE BATTLE SITUATION

It is Hardly Likely That the Allies Will Have Chance to Bag the German Armies.

WIGGLED OUT

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, July 31.—Reviewing the battle situation in France, General March said that Since last Saturday the general salient has flattened considerably. The enemy retirement on Saturday was very rapid, amounting to three of four miles on a twenty mile front he said. So fast did the Germans retreat Saturday that the allied armies got completely out of touch with their front line and sent out cavalry patrols to catch up with the advance fighters.

The extreme west flank of the enemy's line remains practically stable now, while on the extreme east the Germans have been able to reduce the allied salient, March said.

THE OBJECTIVES.

Whatever the German objective may have been at the start and whatever our hope was in the counter offensive it is now evident, said the general that those aims have been set aside, and that the objective of each army is the other army. Both sides want to kill off as many men as possible. The holding back of the jaws of the allied trap by the Germans makes it practically impossible he added, for us to expect to bag the German armies inasmuch as they have had two weeks in which to manoeuvre their way out.

March declared that details of the unification of all the American forces are now being worked and in the future there will be no so-called national guard or national army but that every man serving under the American flag will wear on his collar the letters "U. S." now reserved for regulars only.

SWORN TO AND GUARANTEED

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, JULY 31ST, 1918.

AN APPEAL TO WORKERS.

"It is a fact that the output of Canadian munitions has been a large per centage of the amount used by the British forces. The output, man for man and woman for woman, is now less than it has been, less than it should be, less than it could be." This is an official statement from the Imperial Munitions Board and should come home to the hundreds of Peterboro people who are engaged in the making of shells. The Board points out that the spending of shells saves life and limb and that the spending of shells is limited only by the quantity available. That quantity depends upon the munition makers; if the latter slacken in their work, regarding it only as a money-making job, take a day off every now and then, the output is bound to fall off with the inevitable result that the deficiency will have to be made up in the flesh and blood of other Canadians who are facing the Germans in France. The call to the workers at home to speed up is one that cannot be ignored. Canada's sons at home cannot allow their brothers at the front to be slaughtered because of slackness among those who are making munitions. The shell-maker is not asked to risk his life, he is not compelled to suffer the hardships of active service, he is only called upon to work his hardest to see that Canada's supply of munitions does not fall off.

"Speed up" should be the slogan with every munition-worker.

SOUND ADVICE.

Judging from his address at the opening of the Dominion Convention of the Great War Veterans' Association in Toronto on Monday, Lieut.-Colonel W. P. Purney, the Dominion president, seems to possess the qualifications necessary in the holder of such an important position as chief executive of the association of returned soldiers. Lieutenant-Colonel Purney showed himself not only a man of balance and common sence, but the frank manner in which he urged upon the convention that the agitators and anarchists in the membership of the G. W. V. A. should be controlled indicates that he possesses the moral courage that should be associated with his position.

"Let me tell you," Colonel Purney told the delegates. "We are in danger now of losing the sympathy of the public, upon which so much depends. Even now the Government is not giving all the consideration we would wish to matters of interest to us, but that is not entirely the fault of the Government. We are ourselves somewhat to blame.

'It is because we are harbouring in our membership men who are unreasonable, men who make ridiculous and impossible demands, men who in some quarters have earned the name of anarchists and agitators, and who have managed to bring disrepute upon the name of the Great War Veterans' Association. Sometimes these men may act thoughtlessly, but there are all too many cases where they seem possessed of the idea that they can take constituted authority by the throat and run the country themselves. I firmly believe the time is coming when the returned men will be able to run the country, but that can only happen after they have reached a sufficiently high plane of civilization to be entrusted with that responsibility. I want to warn you that the time has come for us to cure this evil in our midst, for cured it must be. I, for one, will not bear it any longer, and I have come to this convention to do all in my power to bring about a complete change in affairs. If necessary, I will sacrifice my position to regain public confidence. Our members must be controlled, and we must talk with a united voice, rather than through the mouths of individuals. We must conduct ourselves so that never again will any of use be called anarchists or agitators."

The Veterans' president has touched upon a point that is vital interest to the welfare of the Great War Veterans. Backed by the sympathy and support of the public the Association is capable of great things, not only for returned soldiers, but for Canada; without that support and confidence, and branded as a collection of agitators and trouble-makers, the Veterans could not hope to accomplish a great deal of good. Colonel Purney's talk was straight from the shoulder and it is a promising augury that his address was enthusiastically applauded. Public sympathy will be behind the Veterans in every reasonable demand they may make—the returned men should remember the remarks of their president and not alienate the support of the people of Canada by rash, unconsidered action.

THE GRAVITY OF THE LABOUR SITUATION.

The country is reaching a very serious labour crisis and there does not seem to be any remedy in sight. The situation, in fact is, bound to get worse before it can be expected to show any improvement. Strikes and rumors of strikes crop up in all industries and in all sections of the country. To suppose that at this stage any remedy can be found short of absolute Government control of all industry—which is out of the question—would be a species of optimism bred of ignorance of the facts.

Labour unrest is an inevitable part of war conditions. Recruiting creates a shortage of labour and the activity of essential industries sends wages sky-high. Men who work in less essential trades jump to the munitions plants to share in the war wages; and in time the whole wage basis of industry climbs up to munition standards.

The increase in wages makes it necessary for the price of the manufactured article to be advanced; for freight rates to be increased, for service charges all the way along to be added to. In time the advantage of the increased wage is taken away from the worker, is absorbed in the increased cost of living. He demands more and gets it. And so it goes in an endless spiral, continually mounting. Finally it reaches the point where it is difficult, if not actually impossible, for the employer to pay more. This is the time when strikes become a familiar phenomenon and the final stage comes when plants close down through sheer inability to keep up with the pace.

There are two lessons to be drawn from the present situation. The first is that the labour situation has never been treated with the understanding that would have cheated a common ground where capital and labour could meet amicably to settle all differences. There has been mutual suspicion and antagonism between capital and labour. The breaking down of these dangerous barriers should have been accepted by capital as an appointed and vital task.

But not even at Ottawa, where the inerests of the Workingman are supposed to be a first consideration, has any serious effort been made to smooth away the differences and the misunderstandings. No Government has seen fit to put a labour man into office as Minister of Labor, or, in fact, to find for that highly important post any incumbent other than an out-and-out politician. The portfolio of labour has fallen to men who squeezed into the cabinet through political weight and who had to be provided with a post of some kind. The spectacle of a Minister of Labour offering opposite fronts to capital and labour when difficult situations arose has been too common to require specific mention.

No, the labour problem has never been intelligently faced and the result is seen today when we confront conditions that are grave beyond compare.

There is another Point THE POST desires to emphasize. Business men must expect that the labour problem is bound to become increasingly difficult and that, unless a miracle intervenes, such as the early ending of the war, wages must continue to advance. Freight rates are soon to go up and this taken in conjunction with other factors, will make future wage increase certain. The head of every business concern should take it for granted that labour is going to cost him more and shape his affairs with that contingency in mind.—The Financial Post.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The German Government's attempt to sweeten the bitter pill of German defeat by explaining the retreat as "a tactical move" will be hardly more successful than the recent offensive of the German army.

To show the Germans that they are still on the job Canadian troops have pulled off two more successful raids.

Pure-bred cattle on pasture away from home should be watched closely. Open heifers and un-bred cows often get in calf under such circumstances, and the sire is frequently a scrub or a poor grade.

Men seldom follow good advice unless they pay for it.

NEW ZEALAND EELS.

Big Enough and Daring Enough to Kill a Man or a Salmon.

Eels can cause the death of a salmon of considerable weight by the use of strategy. One will obtain the grip between the dorsal fin and the tail and then hold on like a bulldog, while the unfortunate victim in vain throws itself backward and forward, endeavoring to shake off its captor, until at length its strength is exhausted and the eel proceeds to make a meal at leisure.

Worse crimes than these are laid to their charge in New Zealand. A great number of bathing fatalities had taken place at a certain spot, where the current ran with such strength that a powerful swimmer could only just stem it. It was a favorite pastime to have a tussle with the stream, but several times a bather disappeared before help could reach him, and when his body was found it had been eaten by eels.

The cause of the fatalities remained unknown for a long time, but at last it was discovered that while the swimmer was almost stationary in the rapid stream a huge eel would seize him by the foot or leg and drag him beneath the surface. Eels attain an immense size in those waters, twenty to thirty pounds being no uncommon weight.—Pittsburgh Press.

HOLES IN POTS AND PANS.

Quick and Easy Method of Repairing Them at Home.

Pots and pans, whether of iron or tin (which is only iron tinned over), get holes in their bottoms all too soon to please the economical housekeeper. Then it becomes necessary to call in the tinsmith, who puts a lump of solder in the hole. This soon melts, and the hole is there again.

But nothing is easier than to repair such holes at home and without the aid of a tinsmith. First of all make the hole round by inserting the point of a knife and twisting it back and forth. Place the pot or pan upon any firm, flat piece of metal, such as an anvil, a bar of iron or an inverted flat-iron, so that the hole is immediately over and touching the latter. In the middle of the hole place a shot of about the size of the hole. Any piece of lead will serve if the shot is not handy. Now a few sharp blows with a hammer will flatten the shot and spread it out, filling the hole tightly and overlapping enough to hold it in place. A few strokes with a file and a rub with sandpaper complete the operation. The repair is permanent.

It is said that a hole as large as a quarter of an inch in diameter can be mended in this way.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Read the Eternities."

The only large values are those in which our ancestors participated. The oldest of wonders is the greatest—life. An ironclad, as such, is a commonplace beside a ship, and society merely as society is a more stupendous fact than Rome or England. The Iliad is less remarkable than speech, and the aeroplane is only a mote in the sky. Landscape, the family, the nation, religion—their origins are lost in the silence of a gray antiquity. The now—the present—is indeed sacred; but its sacredness is inappreciable to those who are circumscribed by its limits; it is reserved for minds that escape its bounds. "Do not read the times!" said Thoreau, in words that become the more memorable the less they are remembered; "read the eternities."—O. W. Firkins in Atlantic Monthly.

The Lord's Prayer and Druidism.

A curious proof of how tenaciously paganism held its ground for some generations after the majority of the people had become Christians is found in a Gaelic version of the Lord's Prayer, which up to a very recent period existed in parts of Cork and Kerry. Instead of "Lead us not into temptation," "Na Leig sinn a ndraoidheach" was said, meaning "Allow us not into Druidism."—London Times.

Hard Luck.

Husband comes in to find his wife turning everything topsy turvy.

"Gracious, Isabel! What are you doing?"

"I just received a telegram from Aunt Jane saying she'll be here at 6:30, and I can't find her photograph anywhere."—Chicago News.

THE ROYAL DRAGOONS

THE ROYAL DRAGOONS.

Chautauqua Week will bring many delightful entertainers, but none like the Royal Dragoons—a singing band, rich in instrumentation, strong in song, a constant surprise and joy.

DR. T. W. DAVIDSON.

One of the most timely lectures of Chautauqua Week will be that of Dr. Davidson, a native, of Ireland, a graduate of Belfast University, a resident of Montreal, and a pastor of a church that has one hundred and fifty-two members at the front, while his only son is fighting in the trenches. He would be in France himself but for the fact that his church felt that they needed his weekly messages to carry them through the storm and stress of the war, and refused to release him for service overseas.

Dr. Davidson has a wonderful subject: "The Camouflage of Kaiserism," and as the opening gun of Chautauqua Week he is bound to hit the arch-enemy of the world squarely upon the head—with much the same success as the traditional Irishman hits every head in sight with his shillelagh.

In Peterborough during the w eek of August 16th to 22nd.

WORKING OF GERMAN MIND

(By Captain R. P. P. Rowe.)

German mentality is an interesting study. It is not mysterious, but plain for all the world to read. The German does not hide the light of his inner mind under a bushel. He reveals it ingenuously and almost flagrantly. By spoken and written word (vide the German press) no less than by action he proclaims himself for what he is. Also he judges others by himself, a habit which is responsible for his most elementary and dangerous mistakes.

In 1914 the average German was convinced that whoever was guilty of plunging Europe into war it was not himself—by which he meant his paternal if somewhat tryranical government. His credulity may appear astonishing, but it must be remembered that the ground of his mind had been carefully cultivated. His rulers had trained the nation in certain beliefs and, above all, that it must believe whatever it was told by them.

Later on this people suffered increasingly, but as it had been trained to regard privations as necessary, it suffered with steady endurance—if not altogether willingly. Subsequently towards the middle of 1917, the sufferings had become more than ever unendurable at a moment when the prospective benefit seemed less than ever realizable. Then the Germanaaafaena , yyp man, as distinct from his rulers, took matters to some extent into his own hands and raised his voice loudly against the principles of aggrandisement which he had for so long accepted as sacred. "When the Devil was sick, the Devil a saint would be." But Russia collapsed, the great thrust against the Italians prospered, and saintliness appeared poor food for the healthy.

Since that time the revelations of Lichnowski and others have brought doubt even to the most credulous German as regards his government's innocent intentions in 1914. But innocence is part of the despised saintliness, and the German appetite for advantage once whetted, no moral consideration blunts its edge. Western Russia is being rapidly enslaved, Ludendorff promises colossal booty in the West (and his programme has met with some preliminary success) and inevitably the spirit of aggrandisement is again in the ascendant.

But the German mind has this essential weakness. It understands no other temperament than its own, and mistakes itself for a universal standard. When the German is down he is verp much down, which is natural, seeing that material success is the whole end of his endeavour. In consequence he assumes both that his enemy is actuated by similar motives and that he too will be willing to desist from action when fortune frowns. Nothing is more typical of German mentality, than its inability to recognize that the Entente Powers mean what they say and are fighting for a vital principle.

That the victory of his country would be the triumph of a philosophy ruinious to civilization is so little understood by any German that he does not even realize that others believe it. Yet the truth he fails to grasp is a sword with a double edge which will prove fatal to himself. His enemy's purpose is stronger than his own, and no weight of disaster can stay his hand.

It thus comes about that the alternatives which fate holds from sight are not those which the German regards as the choice of possibilities. He considers that either Germany's armies will defeat the forces opposed to them so severely that the enemy will sue for peace, or that they will be defeated and that Germany must sue for peace. Yet nothing is more certain than that a German victory can only prolong the war. The Entente Powers cannot be driven to terms, simply because the cause for which they fight is so important that no terms with a victorious enemy are conceivable. Men can die but once, and conditions that must make life impossible are no better than death. Those are the conditions inseparable from a German peace. The error that afflicts the German mind is fatal, because it hides a truth of great moment. Present-day Germany and western civilization cannot both survive for the survival of principles totally destrucive of moraliy would be the end of all that matters. Of this fact German mind is completely oblivious

Fortunately for the fate of the world the ultimate triumph of the better cause is beyond question, for the conquest of square miles of territory means little when the future of mankind is at stake. The war becomes increasingly a struggle between a small section of humanity and the rest of it. And the weight of numbers no less than of opinion, must in the end prevail against a dangerous minority. The stubbornness of men with their backs against the wall is proverbial, and even now the legions press forward from a new world that refuses to sacrifice its birthright of freedom to the oppressor. The weight of these in mere numbers will at last be irresistible, and their strength of purpose is immeasurably greater than that which it opposes. It is necessarily so, because the will to live is stronger than the will to grasp or destroy.

Yet the German mind alone fails to perceive the significance of the situation. Happily that other characteristic of German mentality, its despondency under defeat, ensures the final result. The acceptance of despair involves the acceptance of an enemy's terms. It may be that even now the war approahes a swift and dramatic climax. Such a climax cannot be brought about by the victory of Germany, for German successes tend merely to postpone an end which in the nature of things is inevitable.

Yes, I Intend To But Not Now

Have YOU any idea what that decision is costing you—even if you live? Of course if you die the cost is much GREATER.

Read the following facts and then decide for yourself:

The premium you would pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 60 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $4,000 of insurance at age 25.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 50 WOULD BUY YOU nearly $2,500 at age 25.

The premium you pay for $1,000 of insurance at age 35 WOULD BUY YOU $1,440 at age 25.

Besides while you may be insurable at age 25 you may not be insurable, AT ANY PRICE, at the other ages mentioned.

The one great fate that touches our lives is the verdict of NOW.

Polarine

FRICTION REDUCING MOTOR OIL

"Makes a good car better"

For Cylinder Walls

KEEP your cylinder walls like new—unscored, and as smooth as glass with a film of oil that withstands heat and cold and maintains effective lubrication.

Scored cylinders cause poor compression, wasted power, lost efficiency that impairs both the performance and the actual value of your car.

DELIVERY OF FULL POWER

depends on a gas-tight piston-to-cylinder contact. Correct lubrication is therefore most essential. It reduces friction to a minimum, prevents overheating, protects the cylinder walls against scoring and so keeps power from leaking past the pistons.

Polarine

has the right body to lubricate every moving part of the motor with a protective film that minimizes wear and friction. It lessens carbon troubles—does not gum in summer nor congeal in winter. It keeps cars in smooth running order the year round.

Polarine is made in two grades—Polarine and Polarine Heavy. It is supplied in one-half, one and four gallon sealed cans, also in 12½ gallon steel kegs, barrels and half-barrels.

There are also Polarine oils and greases for effective transmission and differential lubrication.

Buy Polarine where you get Premier Gasoline—at the sign of the "Red Ball."

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

WHAT HYDROPHOBIA REALLY IS AND HOW TO PREVENT IT

(By Dr. Leonard K. Hirshberg.)

Hydrophobia or rabies, is a fatal disease transmitted from animal to animal or to man by the bite or the saliva of the rabid animal. The virus, the invisibly small microbes, which carry the deadly venom of hydrophobia thrive and vegetate in the nose, throat and spinal cord of almost any animal bitten.

These germs of hydrophobia, or rabies, do not burst forth in full bloom at the time the man or animal is bitten. A period of three weeks, sometimes months, may elapse before they vegetate. This is fortunate because in this interval something may be done to stop the deadly disease.

In a word, the immunity is produced by injecting beneath the skin of the person bitten the preventive vaccine or Pasteur. This requires daily inoculation for nearly three weeks, but if begun at once, after the bitten flesh has been promptly cauterized with nitric acid, it is practically a sure preventive of this 100 per cent. fatal malady.

The Pasteur treatment is a vaccine a preventive. Nothing known to man has ever cured hydrophobia, once it developed. Unless immediate injections of these harmless vaccines are started when you are bitten by a rabid animal, you can do nothing for the affection.

Palsy of Throat.

Popular fallacies and misunderstandings about hydrophobia are the usual "hand-me-downs" of past ages. A mad dog isn't crazy or "out of its head"; it is infected with deadly germs, which will kill it in three or four days; which it will also infect anyone it bites with the deadly microbes.

Another absurdity is the delusion that there is no such disease as hydrophobia. Just as there are atheists who believe that there is no God so there are misguided minds who think there is no rabies. It is useless to talk facts to such persons.

The last census showed that ninety-eight persons died of the three-day fatal infection, hydrophobia. Most of these were babies and children. Yet the sign and symptoms of the ninety-eight, all widely scattered and unknown to each other, were those of this one deadly ailment.

To help to a better understanding of hydrophobia or rabies I give you these facts exactly as they are:

While those ninety-eight choked in the throes of this three-day disease—there is no insanity or madness to it, only a slow palsy of the throat—4,625 other persons bitten by animals erred on the sure and safe side and received the Pasteur vaccine injections. Perhaps some of these were bitten by animals that were well and not infected, but since the Pasteur inoculations are harmless and sure preventions, of the 4,625 bitten the doubtful were saved with the real victims.

Is Easily Preventable.

Rabies, then, is easily preventable. It is a disease as easily extinguishable as smallpox or typhoid fever. It is always fatal if allowed to develop. It does not cause insanity or craziness, and all its victims die within a few days, whether man, child, dog or chick.

The Pasteur treatment should be begun as soon after receiving the bite as possible, and it is successful in preventing hydrophobia in 99 per cent. of cases.

The vaccine matter is prepared from the spinal cords of rabbits which have been given the disease, the germs geing killed in part by drying the cords for varying periods of time. The cords which have been longest dried are weakest and are first used, rubbed up with a little water and injected under the skin.

The treatment is given daily for three weeks. Half a dozen manufacturing firms and the hygienic laboratory at Washington send out the vaccine by mail. Glycerine and carbolic acid are added as preservatives.

No harmful effects whatever follow the use of vaccine in the vast number of cases. Local paralysis has been caused by the treatment in some cases, but it later disappeared In 4,282 persons vaccinated for rabid dog bites by the New York City Health Department, there were seven cases of paralysis and two deaths attributable to the treatment. The latest figures are those of Simon, who find paralysis occurs in one case out of 177 persons treated.

Since but one person in 200 treated develops hydrophobia, and since thirty (untreated) persons in 200 who have been bitten by dogs contract the disease and die, the disadvantages of treatment are negligible.

Animals that have been bitten by supposedly mad dogs should be immediately destroyed. The muzzling of dogs for six months within a radius of twenty miles from the location of the first case of rabies will stamp out the disease.

HULL WOMAN HAS GAINED 28 POUNDS

Improvement of Mrs. McCann is Talk of Entire Neighbourhood

"My wife has actually gained twenty-eight pounds by taking Tanlac and her wonderful improvement is the talk of all the neighborhood," was the remarkable statement wade by John McCann of 197 Laval street, Hull, recently. Mr. McCann, has lived in Hull all his life and is well known.

"Yes, sir, I can say for a fact," he continued, "my wife hasn't been in such good health before in seven years. She had been in a badly run-down condition for about that long and gradually got worse in spite of all she could do. She had no appetite, seldom ate any breakfast, and very little at any time. She was so nervous she couldn't sleep well, and so weak she could hardly get about the house, much less do any of her work. It seemed like she would almost die at times with sick headache. She often had dizzy spells and would get so sick and weak she would just have to give up and go to bed. She looked pale and sallow and had fallen off in weight from one hundred and twenty-eight pounds to one hundred and ten.

"I had seen Tanlac so highly recommended that I finally got a bottle for her and I have never seen such a wonderful improvement in anyone. Soon after she commenced taking it she began to pick up and look better. She has taken five bottles now and she has not only gotten back to her old weight of one hundred and twenty-eight pounds, but she has actually gone ten pounds above that, as she now weighs one hundred and thirty-eight. Her appetite is splendid and she's never bothered with nervous headaches or dizziness any more. She does all her housework besides taking care of five children and never complains of feeling tired. We are both simply delighted over the way Tanlac has built her up and we never miss a chance to boast it. Our neighbors have been astonished over the results and they all tell her she looks like a different person."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.; in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

eterboro Housing Committee Held Meeting Last Evening

nmittee Reports a Demand for Over Two Hundred Houses—Resolution Addressed to the City Council.

he Housing Committee met last ning under the chairmanship of W. R. Breyfogle, discussed the sibility of building from 50 to 100 es.

r. Breyfogle had communicated the different manufacturers with result divided as follows:

to 20 houses—Wm. Hamilton.
to 100 houses—C.G.E.
veral—Peter Hamilton.
later —Examiner.
houses—Peterboro Creamery. houses—Quaker Oats Co.
veral —G. W. Greene Foundry. to 16—De Laval Co.
houses—Bonner-Worth. house —Brinton Carpet Co.

MAXIMUM COST.

enty-five hundred dollars was sum mentioned in the letters to manufacturers as the maximum as it was thought that Mr. achern's figures of $1,200 to $1,- for Toronto city are not applic here because of the necessity of er lots and the higher cost of lab- and material.

r. William Ackerman replied that had canvassed their factory and employees were of the opinion $2,500 was altogether too high a for a workman's house.

r. Richardson, superintendent of Henry Hope Co. reported that use of the temporary character of work going on in the factory now employees did not favourably re- the plan.

DEFINITE STAND.

"Real action is needed," said the chairman. "And nothing can be done unless the city council does something and the city and the people are behind us. We must take a definite stand."

A STONE-AGE PROPOSED.

Mr. J. J. Hartley advocated building terraces as they would be a great deal cheaper but Alderman Langford thought that terraces would be a poor property to sell.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood said,

"We can do something and the city council will be well-advised to take up the scheme."

Mr. G. Dawson thought the houses could be sold before they advanced past the blue print stage.

The chairman finally appointed a committee composed of Mr. J. J. Turner and Mr. Vincent Eastwood to draw up a resolution which follows:

"We recommend to the city council that from 50 to 100 houses be built as soon as possible as from 94 to 100 can be sold at once, and that a committee be appointed apart from the council or this committee to look into it. The terms for the sale of the house would be 10 per cent. down and a fixed monthly rental extending from 10 to 20 years.

Those present at the meeting were: Mr. W. R. Breyfogle, Mr. G. Dawson, Mayor Duncan, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Mr. C. E. Canfield, Ald. Langford, Mr. James Kendry, Mr. J. J. Turner, Ald. Dobbin, Mr. Vincent Eastwood, Mr. J. J. Hartley.

ys a Nuisance at ome Swimming Places re have been many complaints ntly from the unsupervised swim- places along the river, Dalhousie , McDonald's point, Burnham's and further south, that the boys become a nuisance to the public to themselves. Every day's swim- bout ends in a riot that usually s up when some of the clothes are d tied in knots. This afternoon becomes serious to parents when return home with shirts torn, or missing, that has been thrown the water, and with other signs rife that mean more expense. In respects they should be curbed he police, who, it is understood, made numerous trips to the riv- hen the warfare was more serious usual. There are other com- nts growing out of the lack of pro- dressing quarters calling for stern sures that will put an end to the eyance to canoeists and others.

A HINT ON HIGH PRICES.

A Missouri farmer, according to the St. Louis Lumberman, went to the "general store" keeper, an old-time friend, to buy a buggy. It was priced at $80, and the farmer said his father, twenty years ago, bought one just like it for $60. The merchant looked up the record of sale and found that the father had turned in 300 bushels of corn for that buggy. He told the son to deliver to him 300 bushels of corn, and he would give him: A $90 buggy, $75 waggon, $20 suit of clothes, $20 dress, $5 baby dress, $5 crib, $3 worth of candy, $10 worth of sugar, $10 worth of tea, $100 worth of gasoline, $15 worth of lubricating oil. The total figure, $333, is the present value of 300 bushels of corn. The farmer concluded to pay cash for the buggy.

SAVE THE WILD BERRIES.

Every effort should be made this season in the interests of food production to save the wild raspberries and other small fruits which grow in abundance in this neighborhood. Wild fruits of all kinds are most valuable and the crop should not be allowed to go to waste.

It has been suggested that motor-car owners should volunteer to carry people to and from the berry patches, as many persons are unable to reach these spots through lack of some conveyance. Parties of young girls and boys, who are too young to enlist for work on fruit and other farms, could do this work, and might go berry-picking with some older person in charge. Let some patriotic organization take the matter in hand, as no doubt automobile owners will willingly volunteer to carry berry-pickers if it becomes known with whom arrangements can be made.

Save our foodstuffs for our soldiers by doing your utmost to preserve all the fruits and vegetables possible for winter use.

CITY SEARCHED FOR SLAYER OF WEALTHY ARMENIANS

NEW YORK, July 30.—Detectives have combed the city for Mugriditch Mihitarian, the Armenian porter who on Tuesday shot and killed his benefactor, Guilabi Gubenkian, wealthy rug merchant, and shot his nephew, Scrope Gulbenkian, who died later at the New York Hospital.

Inspector Gray, of the Detective Bureau, instructed his men to pay special attention to lodging houses and tenements, as the fugitive had but $20 with him when he escaped. The double crime was ascribed to mental derangement, as no motive could be found.

The bodies of Mihitarian's victims were removed to the Campbell Funeral Church, Broadway and Sixty-sixth street. Final funeral arrangements have not been made. It is expected that large numbers of Armenians will pay tribute to the aged merchant, who is said to have subscribed millions for Armenian relief.

NEW ROOM OPENED IN THE PETERBORO PROTESTANT HOME

Gift of the Waddell Family to the Aged and Infirm—Reception Was Held Last Evening—Rev. Mr. Rowand Occupied the Chair.

Few families in the city have done so much and worked so untiringly towards alleviating distress and giving comfort to the aged and infirm as the Waddell family and last evening a further gift in the form of the refurnishing and decorating of a room in the Protestant Home was made by Mr. and Mrs. Roland Waddell in memory of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Waddell, the latter who was elected to the Board in 1917, having represented St. Andrews Church for several years previous.

The Reception.

To celebrate the opening of the room, a number of the prominent citizens of Peterboro were invited to the Home in the evening, all of who were delighted with the charming appearance lent by the comfortable and luxurious furniture and brilliant lights. To Mrs. F. L. Robinson are due many thanks for her unfailing devotion to the Home and comfort of the old people and to her the credit of being instrumental in bringing Mrs. Waddell's wish to realization. With Mrs. Robinson, Miss Jean Neill, who has lately completed a course of art decorating in New York, carried out a clever and harmonious color scheme of the softest browns and greens in the upholstering and by contrasting with vivid chintz in rose, blue and fawn and rose shaded mahogany lamps. Added to the furnishing the walls are prettily hung with mahogany framed reproductions of the old masters. Conspicious in the new room is the diamond dise victrola which was presented by the business men of the city and Mr. Greene. This alone is a delight to the old people in the room now used not only for the Sunday services, but also for the entertainment of visitors and as a sitting room for the inmates.

The Programme.

Revd. Mr. Roward, pastor of St. Andrews Church acted as chairman for the evening and opened the programme with prayer following which he said it was indeed gratifying to those interested in the aged and infirm to have so splendid a home to soften the last years of the old people whose early friendships have through the ravages of time and death fallen away. The Home makes it possible to discount the possibility of a lonely and pathetic end of life with no one to care for the old person. "It is," he said "gratifying to know that there are those interested enough to add to the Home. Mrs. Waddell's wish was that the new room should be furnished and her wish has been faithfully carried out by her son and daughter-in-law." He concluded with a brief reference to Mr. and Mrs. Waddell's act of generasity amongst which was the building of an hospital in the West and said he expressed the appreciation of the Board for the latest generous gift.

Mrs. Walter Roger, after thanking Mr. and Mrs. Roland Waddell for their carrying out their parents' wish, spoke of the lovely character of Mrs. Waddell who unfortunately was unable through illness to actively carry out her work as director of the board. She also made a brief reference to her work in the missionary field. Miss Flora Davidson, seconded this vote of thanks. Thanks were also extended by Mrs. Robert Hall for the victrola; by Miss Lancaster to Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Robinson for their untiring efforts at the home and to Miss Jean Neill for her assistance in decorating the room.

An enticing programme was then rendered in the new room consisting of recitations by Miss Harvey and Miss Ingall and a solo by Mrs. Middleton interspered by selections of the victrola. Refreshments were served.

Those Present.

During the evening the freedom of the home was given to the visitors amongst whom were: — Mrs. Walter Roger, Mrs. Suckling, Mrs. F. L. Robinson, Miss Flora Davidson, Mrs. Charles McClelland, Mrs. Robt. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Waddell, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Madill, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Johnston, Mrs. Aylmer, Mrs. Morris, Mr. R. Fair, Miss E. Fair, Mrs. Nickels, Mrs. (Dr.) Hartley, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Gillespie, Dr. and Mrs. Middleton, Mrs. C. H. Moore, Mrs. Lundy, Mrs. James Lundy, Mrs. George Gladman, Mrs. Thos. Robinson, Miss S. Robinson, Mrs. J. C. Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rush the Misses Neill and Revd. and Mrs. White.

Saved the Life of a Child in April Last.

For saving the life of Aiden Moore the young son of Mrs. A. Moore, Frank street, Mr. John Pilley, 39 Ware street, has been awarded the medal for bravery by the Royal Humane Society. One Saturday afternoon in April the lad fell into the canal below the locks bridge, where water is very deep. As the boy could not swim he would have undoubtedly been drowned if Mr. Pilley had not jumped in and saved him. Here there is a high wall on either side of the canal and Mr. Pilley had considerable difficulty in returning to shore.

SPECTACULAR CHASE ENDS IN ARREST UNDER HOTEL BED

Austrian's Attempt to Pawn a Ring Leads to an Escape From a Police Station and the Shooting of an Obliging Chauffeur.

NEW YORK, July 31.—The arrest of Rudolph Cruger, an Austrian, twenty-three years old, of No. 319 West Twenty-first street, on suspicion of grand larceny, his subsequent escape from the police station, the accidental shooting of a chauffeur in a private automobile commandeered by detectives in pursuit of the furitive, and final capture of the man in the bedroom of a hotel, caused excitement in the vicinity of Thirty-fourth street and Third avenue just after eight o'clock in the evening.

Cruger was arrested by Detectives Andrews and Leef, of the East Thirty-fifth street station, after he tried to dispose of a diamond ring, valued at $300, in a pawn shop in Third avenue between Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth streets. When questioned at the East Thirty-fifth street station Cruger is said to have stated that he had been to a house in Crestwood, Westchester county, earlier in the day to do plumbing work. He was unable to give the detectives the name of the family for whom he worked.

His escape was made through the front door of the station house while the acting lieutenant was at his desk, and in full view of several detectives who started in pursuit. He ran east to Third avenue and turned south. At the corner was an automobile of a family stopping at the Walcott Hotel and driven by John Burke, of No. 219 East Thirty-eighth street.

Detective Tony Guinea jumped on the running board and ordered the chauffeur to follow the man, who was dodging in and out among pedestrians. As the automobile neared Cruger Detective Guines drew his revolver, and as he was about to step on the curb, he says, he accidentally discharged the weapon. The bullet struck Burke in the right thigh.

Detective Andrews, Leef and McDonald continued the chase for Cruger, who doged into a doorway at No. 205 East Thirty-fourth street and made his way to the roof. From there he led the detectives a roundabout chase to No. 210 East Thirty-fourth street and back again, after a six foot leap across an areaway to a building at Thirty-fourth street and Third avenue. There, under a bed in a room on the top floor, the detectives found Cruger. He was taken to the station where a charge of grand larceny was entered against him.

Burke was removed to Bellevue Hospital after being treated by Dr. Root, who was also called to attend Cruger in the station house, where he collapsed.

MILLION FINE ON ANTWERP

Punished for Beatings of Anti-Belgian Propagandists.

AMSTERDAM, July 30.—Antwerp has been fined 1,000,000 francs and Jan Devos, the burgomaster, has been deposed by the Germans because of recent happenings in the city, says the Belgique Dagblad.

Activists celebrating the 11th day of July were beaten and a number of Activist prisoners of war from Gottingen were half killed by inhabitants for carrying on anti-Belgian propaganda in the city.

Doctors refused to attend the men, whom they called "traitors," and were consequently deported to Germany.

Lieut. Landry Returns Home

Peterboro Officer is a Seasoned Veteran—Home on Leave.

Flight-Lieut. "Billy" Landry is in the city for a few days renewing old acquaintances amongst the host of friends he made during the years he spent while conected with the test department of the C.G.E.

Lieutenant Landry went overseas amongst the first, and bears on his arm gold braid indicating the knock-out he got at Armentieres after which he spent months in England in hospital. Later returning to Canada for instructional work he was stationed at Toronto. Speaking of his experiences overseas he said that he never realized how little a Canadian knows of his own country until he landed in England where educated people spoke familiarly of the interesting spots in Canada, and the Canadians had to either bluff it out or confess ignorance.

The Americans.

"The Americans are going to end the war," he said. "New blood is what was needed to relieve the weary veterans over there, but the initiative will be taken by the seasoned commanders who have had the experience and who will see the boys through. The Yankees will benefit by the four years the Generals have spent in studying what is needed."

Lieutenant Landry is an enthusiastic believer in what women are capable of doing, and recounted what he himself has seen them excel in. In England they not only handle but make engines—in Toronto they all but put together the aeroplanes. In reclaiming a wrecked plane women do all the work of sorting the pieces which may be used again.

"If girls," he said, "will only content themselves, as many are doing, by not knowing it all directly they enter a new field, but study the person with whom they work, gradually picking up ideas and tasks, there is no reason why they cannot take men's places finally."

Lieutenant Landry quoted an amusing sample of femininism he himself ran across lately. Walking into the grim and austere room of a major he asked if Major ——— was at home, to which the pretty stenagropher answered: No, my dear, he just went out. They'll get over that," he said.

Three Russian Grand Dukes Are Executed

Former Commander of Russian Armies Believed to be Among the Number.

(Special to The Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, July 31. — Three Russian Grand Dukes, one of whom is believed to have been Grand Duke Nicholas, former commander-in-chief of the Russian armies, have been executed by the Bolsheviki, according to despatches to the Bayrische Landes Zeitung, from Moscow.

ATTACKED BY A MAD COW.

LINDSAY, July 31.— Miss Irene Smith, of Cameron, was the victim of a painful and unusual accident on Sunday, when she was attacked by a cow in one of the pasture fields.

The beast caught Miss Smith on its horn and tossed her violently in the air. As a result the young lady suffered a fracture of the ankle and a dislocation of the ler.

Dr. W. T. Rich was called in and found the patient to be in bad shape and suffering considerable pain.

VEGETABLE EXPERTS INVESTIGATE BLIGHT

PETROLEA, July 30.—Vegetable experts sent out by the Government are investigating the potato blight in Lambton County. Many fields are found seriously affected. New phases of blight which so far have baffled discovery of cause and origin have appeared, along with the older and better known types. Potatoes are in consequence expected to be impaired in quality and in yield. The remedy is said to be fresh, vigorous seed from New Ontario. It is held that much of the seed used in this country is "run out" by the repeated planting of the same varieties.

PLAZA HOTEL SENDS MANY FLOWERS TO FAMILIES OF SOLDIERS NOW IN FRANCE

Manager Distributes to Poor Each Day Cartloads of Blossoms That Have Served Their Purpose as Decorations—Seeks Out Homes Where There is Illness.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Those who enter the flower covered summer garden of the Plaza Hotel often wonder what becomes of the slightly withered roses and carnations and scores of blooming plants that are replaced each afternoon with fresh ones. Fred Sterry, manager of the hotel, said that ever since the garden was opened, a month ago, he had been sending the flowers to the homes of needy parents and children relatives of American soldiers fighting in France.

"I have had hundreds of persons ask what we did with the armsful of flowers that have to be taken from the vases and from the walls and lamps each night," he said. "They wanted to know if we threw them away. I didn't intend to tell what we are doing with them, but I guess I must. Each night there is a wagon load of flowers, still fresh enough to beautify any home, but not strong enough to last through another day in the stiff breeze that blows through the garden. I have sent them by the cart loads out into the city to the homes of absent soldiers, trying preferably to find the homes where there is illness."

Mr. Sterry said the number of flowers that were used in the summer garden dancing room and on the terrace overlooking Fifth avenue required as much work as that employed in a fair size florist's shop.

General Williams Returning Home

Has Almost Recovered From His Wounds.

(Special to The Examiner)

OTTAWA, July 31—Brigadier General Victor Williams, formerly Adjutant General at Ottawa and during the opening year of the war attached to the Canadian Headquarters in France, is expected back in Canada shortly. General Williams who was taken prisoner at the battle of Hooge, in the Spring of 1916, when General Mercer was killed, was recently exchanged and has been convalescing at the home of his sister in the southern part of England. He was seriously injured during the attack and buried in the debris of a trench and when found his life was despaired of. Reports received here however, are to the effect that he was almost quite recovered and that he expects to be back in Canada shortly.

COULDN'T PROVE MARRIAGE.

TORONTO TRAVELER WITHOUT CERTIFICATE FINED AT STRATFORD.

STRATFORD, July 28.—Wm. L. Orr a commercial traveler of Toronto, was fined $20 and costs in the Police Court yesterday morning for not having a certificate to show he was married. He is out on $500 bail until Monday, when he must return with proof that he is married, or he may be apprehended and turned over to the military authorities.

THIRTY THOUSAND CANS OF PEAS A DAY

Output of One Factory in Durham County—Others Equally Busy.

COBOURG, July 30.—Canning industries in the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham are scenes of busy activity. Canning peas has been extensively carried on the past two weeks. The pea crop is an excellent one, the best that has been known for years in this locality. At the local factory some 70 employees are engaged, including a number of ladies in order to obviate the necessity of bringing in foreign labour, and to aid in food conservation. The factories in East Northumberland are equally busy.

The Durham Canning Factory at Orono is also a busy place. About 60 persons are employed, with a weekly pay shet of $1,000. About 30,000 cans of peas is the daily output.

MAY SHORTLY REMOVE RESTRICTIONS ON BACON

Vast Supplies Now Overseas and Production Enormous on this Continent.

OTTAWA, July 31.—The Evening Citizen today published the following:—

"The Citizen understands on high authority that the restrictions on the use of bacon and hog products in Canada are on the point of being removed as a result of cable advices from England."

Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Agriculture, when spoken to about the report this afternoon, preferred to make no statement at present but intimated that the matter is before the Food Board for consideration. Chairman Thomson is out of the city.

There are immense supplies of bacon overseas, and already the restrictions on the use of this luxury have been removed in Great Britain. The production this year both in the United States, and Canada is enormous.

USED SUGAR RATIONS AND HAS TO CLOSE

WINDSOR CANDY MAKER SUSPENDED UNTIL SEPTEMBER

The Canada Food Board has ordered August F. C. Durdan, 31 Sandwich street E., Windsor, Ont., to discontinue the manufacture of candy and not to purchase any sugar for candy making until after September 1st next, or until permission is granted by the Board.

This penalty follows upon infraction of the regulation which requires that candy manufacturers use monthly, during May, June, July and August, not more than 50 per cent. of the average monthly quantity of cane sugar during 1917.

Durdan was found to have already used his allotment of sugar for May, June, July and August.

THIS IS TOMATOES' CRITICAL TIME

Fruits Not Soon Set Will Not Have Time to Ripen.

This is the critical season for the war gardener's tomatoes. If they were well started in the hotbed and set out fairly early there ought to be a good set of fruit on the lower stems and some of it ripe or ripening. These fruits are fairly safe, but the small ones further up and the blossoms that are now in flower or coming require no end of care. Fruit that is not set soon after August 1 is not likely to ripen in this climate unless the Fall is unusually warm and late, so it behooves the amateur to save as many blossoms as possible on the upper branches of the vine; the descriptive "upper" is used under the supposition that the gardener has his tomato vines trained to a single stem and neatly tied up to stakes. The greatest danger to the well-cared-for tomato patch will be plant lice. They attack the blossom stems, leaves and even the smaller branches sucking out the life juices and reducing the vitality for the plant. But the greatest damage is done by the lice that congregate on the fruit stems just back of the blossoms. Half a dozen midget lice will drive their beaks into the tender stem, and in a day or two what was a most promising blossom will wither and fall off. The only remedy is to spray the lice with a contact poison such as nicotine or diluted whale-oil soap.

By far the worst disease is the leaf-spot. It appears first on the lower leaves as small grayish circular spots with black or dark brown borders. As the disease progresses the leaves turn yellow, shrivel, and die. As the lowest leaves die those next above become diseased, and if the trouble is not checked by spraying the whole plant will, in time, be killed. The spores or seeds of leaf-spot may be carried from plant to plant if they are hoed or cultivated while wet with dew or rain.

The remedy for leaf blight is to spray with Bordeaux mixture every ten days or two weeks, beginning when the plants are small. Spray the under side of the leaves as well as the upper side. If possible, get some resin fish oil soap and dissolve an ounce to use in each gallon of Bordeaux mixture to make the spray stick to the foliage.

The late blight is very destructive also and comes later in the season. It not only attacks the leaves, but also causes the fruit to rot. On the leaves it shows as water soaked spots, and in moist weather quickly kill the diseased foliage. The fruit begins rotting at the stem end. This disease is the same that causes late blight of potatoes. The spraying for leaf blight will take care of this disease also.

The trouble known as Mosaic Disease sometimes attacks tomatoes. This causes the leaves to become crumpled and distorted with light green spotted portions. The plants are unfruitful, some have very narrow leaves. If a diseased plant touches a healthy one it will spread the disease to the healthy one, insects, especially plant lice, carry the disease from plant to plant. There is no remedy except to pull up and burn all diseased plants.

A most peculiar affection of tomato fruits is called blossom-end rot because it appears at the blossom end. It is not a real disease, but seems to be the result of either too wet or too dry soil. Have the soil well drained, cultivate well, and in case of a long dry spell water the plants. If possible work some manure or decaying vegetable matter into the soil. If plants wilt rather suddenly and die pull them up and burn them, for there is no remedy.

MR. AND MRS. J. T. BRAUND CELEBRATE ANNNIVERSARY

About Seventy Friends Participated in the Event.

THOSE PRESENT

To celebrate the twentieth anniversary of their wedding which took place on July 28, 1898, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Braund entertained about seventy of their friends at their summer home, 'Braundport," on Monday evening. The occasion of the twentieth anniversary, being popularly known as the china wedding, gifts of all descriptions were brought to the popular "bride and groom," numbering amongst these a handsome china dinner and tea service from Mr. Braund's sisters and brothers.

Under the trees about the cottage the table laden with good things to eat presented a fascinating appearance with its gay decorations of green and white, interspersed with sweet peas. Here after a dainty repast had been served, congratulatory speeches were made by Messrs. Nelson Routley, Tromos Routley, Brooklyn; Mrs. W. B. Anderson, Commandant and Mrs. McElhiney and Major Jennings, of Toronto. To these Mr. and Mrs. Braund made graceful replies. After supper selections on a diamond-disc Victrola were enjoyed.

Those Present.

Those who attended from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Found, Bowmanville; Miss Alice Found, Charles and Mrs. John Found, Bowmanville; Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Gale, Oshawa; Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Routley, Brooklyn; Major Jennings and Miss Ethel, Toronto; Miss Joy Beer, Toronto.

The evening closed with heartiest congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Braund, and the wishes of all for many years more of life as happily spent as the years already past, after which 'God Save the King" was sung.

KAISER REFUSES TO RECEIVE LUXBURG

Apparently Not Interested in Former Minister's Report.

LONDON, July 30.—Emperor William has refused to receive Count Luxburg, so that the former German Minister to Argentina might justify himself, says an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam. The Count handed in his report on his mission to Argentina to the Foreign Office, Thursday. After the Emperor had refused to see him he conferred with Admiral von Hintze, the Foreign Secretary.

Count Luxburg, it is added, has withdrawn from the diplomatic service.

MOTHER LEAPS FROM ROOF WITH 3 MONTHS OLD BOY

NEW YORK, July 31.—Clasping her three months old boy in her arms Mrs. Jennie Friedman, whose home was in Newark, N.J., leaped from the roof of a three story tenement at No. 118 Eldridge street. Both mother and child were killed, and it required the police reserves of the Clinton street station to restore order and three ambulance surgeons to attend to the hysterical women in the vicinity, which is one of the most densely populated sections of the east side.

Mrs. Friedman had been stopping for several days at the home of her sister, Mrs. Isador Schater, at the address in Eldridge street. She had been ill for many months and the child was suffering from an ailment which specialists had been unable to diagnose.

DE LAVAL WINS A HIGH SCORING CARNIVAL FROM MATTHEWS-BLACKWELL

Score Was 16 Runs to 14 and Constitutes a Record for the City League —Nearly Every Innings Was a Big One and Pitchers Had a Bad Night.

De Laval	2	4
Matthews	1	5

Next game—Riversides vs. Thistles, Thursday night.

In the wildest and woolliest game of the season, the De Laval team beat Matthews-Blackwell in a Twilight League fixture at Riverside Park last night by 16 runs to 14, sending the Packers down into the cellar. The game was called on account of darkness by Umpire Kay at the end of the eighth, but even with one innings missing the teams managed to pile up a total of 30 runs, 26 hits and 13 errors, which is a pretty fair night's work. With all the doings there was plenty of excitement and many fans went away peeved because His Umps did not see fit to see the fray go on to the bitter end.

De Laval started out early to score. They bagged one in the first and three in the second, but Matthews chased four over in their half of the second and the teams were even. Back came the De Laval with three in the third and four in the fourth, so that when the Packers went to bat in their half of the same innings they were down seven runs. A few runs more or less were nothing in a game like last night and before De Laval got the side out the score was only 11-8 in their favour. Carson took Close's place on the rubber for Matthews and De Laval were blanked in the fifth while the Packers grabbed off four perfectly good runs and were in front 12-11 at the end of the innings.

The sixth saw De Laval hang up another tally and it was even—Stephen with twelve runs each at the end of the sixth.

De Laval won the game in the seventh when, after two were out they fell upon Carson for four sound hits in a row, which, with an infield out, brought the figures up to 16-12. Matthews made a game effort in their half, but could only score twice, and both teams were blanked in the eighth.

None of the pitchers were a mystery. Sharpe, for De Laval, was found for twelve hits, gave two walks, hit two men and uncorked three wild pitches, while Close yielded nine hits and twelve runs in four innings for Matthews. Carson, who succeeded him, was hit hard in the seventh and also uncovered a wild streak.

It was a real old-time free-hitting affair, with the batters having the best of the argument. To tell how all the runs were scored would require a page or two. The box score and summary tell their own story:

Fulton Looked Anything But a Fighter When He Entered Ring Saturday

He Seemed Frightened, and Majority of Critics Were Not Surprised When He Was Knocked Out.

NEW YORK, July 31.—"There goes a bale of hay," said somebody in a box behind us at Harrison Saturday evening, as Fred Fulton, under the control of Jack Dempsey, volplaned his full height of 6 feet 4 inches to the cosey canvas below. We do not know just who emitted that pungent observation—Lew Fields, Sam Harris or one of the other occupants of the stall, but whoever said it, he got a whole hayloft full out of his system, albeit it might have been an unwarranted slam at the well known and historic bale of hay. Not for one moment in his short stay in the ring did Fulton make an impressive move nor did his plastic countenance take on a look even verging on agressiveness, confidence or anything else that belongs to the getup of a fighter in the midst of his most important test.

There was no question about Fulton having been knocked cold, but we are inclined to believe that his psychological make up was altogether too receptive for such a result. When Fulton came into the ring his yellowish countenance, his carefully combed hair a la matinee idol, and his unwillingness to look straight at Dempsey somehow or other made us confident that the plasterer was to be plastered ere the sun sank very much lower. Every now and then Fulton scowled at Dempsey but only when Jack was looking away from the Rochester Riot. As for Dempsey, he sat with determined mien, knit brow and impatience at the delay that kept him from starting the real work at hand.

FULTON'S PAWING SHORT

They came to the center and Fulton pawed with his left. He pawed with his right and his pawing for the day was over. Dempsey led with his right for the body and followed with his left to the same place. That left really was the knockout blow, for no sooner had it found its mark than Fulton winced, flinched and drew away. It was purely reflexive, but that drawing away showed that Fulton was not long for the ring. Once a fighter pulls away like that it usually may be decided that he is through. The plasterer evidently was not thinking thoughts of aggressiveness and combat. Just at that moment he might have been speculating as to what he was going to do with his $12,000.

Just as he was spending his first hundred several things followed in quick succession to Fulton's jaw and just as his right hand landed the Minnesotan dropped with his eyes shut. Dempsey stood near his own corner, confident that his work was over. Fulton rolled to the ropes, hung over as if to fall to the ground, opened his eyes for then once and shut them quite soon against the strong raps of the lowering sun.

Twenty-three seconds of so-called action and ten of repose, and $12,000 in return. We imagine that Fulton's salary of better than $363 a second—counting his ten seconds of quietude no doubt was the highest yet paid any ring performer.

We can say without fear of contradiction that it was the quickest knockout on record among heavyweights of any standing—especially contenders for title. The nearest to it was the quick knockout of Gus Ruhlin by Tom Sharkey at Coney Island in 1918. They sparred for just a minute and Tom landed a blow that sent the Swiss to the land of nod. Another quick result was that in the bout between Tommy Burns and Boshter Bill Squires, the Australian champion, at Colma, Cal., in 1907. One punch sufficed for Squires. The next year Stanley Ketchell stopped Mike Twin Sullivan with one punch.

NELSON HOLDS RECORD.

Fitzsimmons figured in a one round knockout over Peter Maher at Langtry, Tex., in 1896. Fitz always said that Maher hit him the hardest blow he ever had been struck. The Irishman made the first move after shaking hands, and it shook Bob from head to foot. Fitz backed away for a moment or two to get his bearings and then launched a counter wallop. That was the second and last blow of the fight, for Maher rolled over, dead to the world.

As we made our labored way out of the Harrison park, the general conversation hinged on speculation as to whether the knockout was the quickest in the annals of pugilism. While it may be accorded that position in heavyweight history, there have been a great many shorter results in the lighter divisions. The quickest knockout was that registered in two seconds, by Battling Nelson against Billy Rosser at Harvey, Ill., sixteen years ago. The record usually is accorded to Dal Hawkins, who stopped Martin Flaherty in four seconds in the preliminary to the Fitzsimmons-Corbett fight at Carson City in 1897.

The shortest championship battle was that between Terry McGovern and Pedlar Palmer, then England's bantamweight title-holder at Tuckahoe in 1899. That fight was a good deal like that of Saturday. Palmer had been expected to give the Terrible Terry quite a contest because of the Briton's vaunted cleverness. They went to the center and McGovern immediately set out to annihilate the little fellow from overseas and he succeeded in jig time. One terrific wallop and Pedlar was through. Poor Pedlar had come here primarily to fight George Dixon and was inveigled into taking on McGovern as a "preliminary" bout. Another short champ ionship fight saw Joe Gans take the lightweight title from Frank Erne at Fort Erie in 1902. One punch sufficed there, too.

Double Umpiring System For the Twilight League

Executive Met Last Evening and Settled Matter in Dispute.

The executive of the Twilight League held a meeting last night when it was decided to adopt the double umpiring system.

Henceforth umpire Kay will be umpiring on balls and Will Andrews an old and well known baseball fan will be the umpire on bases. Civic Holiday promises to be a big day in the Twilight League. Two teams will be picked from the whole league and will play on the morning of the holiday, August 12th.

The game on Thursday promises to be a scorcher. The Thistles and Riversides the league leaders, will clash at Riverside Park.

JACK CURLEY LOST HEAVILY---DEMPSEY GOING INTO ARMY

Promoter is Said to Have Dropped About $12,520.

NEW YORK, July 31.— Dempsey won his battle with Fulton like a real boxer, and doubtless he will challenge Willard, who is quoted as saying that he will make a match with Fulton's conqueror after the war ends. If Willard refuses to box for the title, however, Dempsey can justly claim it, and the public will recognize him as the best heavyweight in the world.

But while Dempsey made a stunning impression at Harrison by scoring one of the quickest knockouts on record in this country, it must be remembered that he whipped one of the poorest boxing specimens ever seen inside the ropes. Fulton would have been jus tas easy for such great boxers of olden times as Fitzsimmons, McCoy, Jeffries, Johnson, Corbett, Sharkey and Maher. Since Willard defeated Johnson in Havana the heavyweight crop has lacked the usual quality, although Dempsey looms up to-day as a first-class man. Dempsey soon will be called to the colours, which means that he will have to fight with rifle and bayonet instead of with padded gloves. But he should make a fine soldier, if only for the reason that he has plenty of courage.

Promoter Curley ran the Dempsey-Fulton fiasco at a heavy loss. He guaranteed a $25,000 purse and split it on a 50-50 basis, the principals receiving their money several hours before they entered the ring. It is said that the gross receipts did not exceed half the amount of the purse.

CUPID'S QUEER PRANK.

A Wedding Blunder That Furnished a Curious Climax.

The other evening we were talking to Mr. Bransby Williams, the delightful impersonator of Dickens' characters, and he told us this story:

The scene was a London parish, and the period recent. The vicar was sitting in his study one morning when in burst the verger in a great state of excitement.

"Mr. ——" (mentioning the curate's name) "wants you at once, sir," he exclaimed. "He has married two couples and married the two men to the wrong women, and he does not know what to do!"

"Have they signed the register?" inquired the clergyman.

"No," was the verger's response.

"Then they can be married again," said the vicar. "Tell Mr. —— I will be at the church in a minute or two to perform the ceremony."

In due course the incumbent made his way to the church and found the parties gathered at the entrance.

Before he could say anything one of the bridegrooms approached and said:

"We have been talking it over, sir, and we have made up our minds to remain as we are."

And they did so.—Pearson's Weekly.

Hard to Miss.

"I overs-w and overheard this delightful little thing in an alley running north from Payne avenue yesterday," says a more or less cryptic correspondent. "Two boys were fighting. One was a very fat boy and the other was very skinny. The thin one had a backer, however, who seemed to be very wise to all the technicalities of the manly art of self defense.

"'Hit him in the solar plexus, kid,' shouted the second. 'Hit him in the solar plexus, an' you'll put th' big fub out!'

"'Where's his solar plexus at?' panted the thin one.

"'Aw, hit him anywhere—you can't miss it!' answered the backer."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Breaking Out the Colors.

A pretty sight aboard ship is the breaking out of the flags on reaching a port. At the appointed time a seaman takes his station at the forward mast and another at the rear mast. In his hand is a small silken bundle, tightly rolled. This is sent aloft. When the signal to break out the colors is given a cord is pulled, the bundle unrolls, and a splendid silk flag flutters out into the breeze. At the foremast is that of the nation whose port the ship is entering, while that on the rear mast is the flag of the steamship company, the ship's nationality being advertised by a large flag at the stern. The latter is lowered or dipped by way of salute when another steamer is passed out in the ocean.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Unbearable Perfumes.

The perfume of flowers can make some people shiver. A member of the London Spiritualist Alliance tells of a woman who dreads the smell of hyacinths. Once at a party the hostess, knowing her visitor's horror of the flowers, hid them behind a screen, yet although they were concealed from view the woman detected them and fainted shortly after entering the room. The Princess of Lamballe, a friend of Marie Antoinette and a victim of the French revolution, would always turn pale at the sight of a violet, and Vincent, the painter, swooned at the smell of roses.

Insanity.

There has never been a satisfactory definition of insanity, the best, that of Sir William Hamilton, that it is "the paralysis of the regulating or legislative faculties of the mind," leaving us far from being satisfied. Like sleep, like dreams, like life itself, insanity is a mystery that no man understands; its causes lie in the "De profundis" that no science has as yet explored.—New York American.

EMPEY IS UNDER WEIGHT.

This or His Renunciation of Citizenship Probably Caused His Discharge.

CHICAGO, July 30.—Friends of Arthur Guy Empey are still awaiting for an explanation from Washington as to why the War Department discharged the author from the army soon after he had been commissioned a Captain in the National Army. Empey was here when press despatches told of the War Department's action. He immediately telegraphed the War Department for an explanation.

There were two possible reasons for his discharge, Empey said. First, when he joined the Canadian forces and swore allegiance to the King of Great Britain he automatically renounced his American citizenship, and he had not as yet been repatriated. This, however, is merely a technicality. Second, he is under weight, as regards American army standards.

President Wilson has authority to issue honourable discharges without assigning reasons, and it is believed this was done in Empey's case.

SAILORS SUCCUMBED TO STRANGE ILLNESS

QUEBEC, July 30—Six sailors from various ships died while on the St. Lawrence some time ago from a strange illness, thought to be the Spanish influenza. They came on different vessels, one of which arrived with three dead sailors, another with two dead, and the third with one dead. A number of other sailors were taken off sick at the quarantine station and are now doing well.

BENEDICTS TO GET LEAVE

Youths between 20 and 22 who married after Exemption was Granted Get Special Treatment.

One more loop-hole for those who are not over-anxious to serve with the Canadian forces has been discovered by the Departmen of the Adjutant-General at Ottawa.

Men who were granted exemption for one reason or another, and who subsequently married, but whose exemption was cancelled by the Order-in-council dated April 20, calling men between the ages of 20 and 22 to the colours, may now be granted leave of absence. This will only apply to such men as were actually married before April 20th.

The leave which will be granted to them is not stated but it will vary according to the nature of the case. The men will likely be granted leave by the local authorities for such a period as will enable Ottawa to give due consideration to the merits of each particular case.

Financing the Western Crop

Different Interests Were in Session To-day.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, July 31.—Representatives of grain, milling and banking interests had an interview to-day with Sir Thomas White, and Hon. Mr. Crerar, respecting the matter of financing the western wheat crop. As a result the question of a fixed price will immediately be taken under consideration by the Grain Commission. The matter of financing will be taken up by the Minister of Finance with the Imperial authorities and the Bankers' Association. It is likely that to give financial and commercial stability to the grain situation, the Government will give its guarantee fixed price upon the whole new crop. This will enable the banks to extend needed credits to grain and elevator firms so that buying may promptly commence when the grain is ready to move.

FUEL COMMISSIONER AND COAL DEALERS TO HOLD CONFERENCE

A conference between Fuel Commissioner Edgar and the local coal dealers will be held a the City Hall on Friday night. Ald. Edgar has suggested to the dealers the advisability of a more general distribution of coal following the plans adopted in Guelph, Stratford and other cities of this province. Whatever agreement is reached, it is particularly desired by the several parties concerned that the relations will remain as amicable as they have been heretofore. In Guelph the dealers decided to supply all the citizens to the extent of twenty-five percent of their requirements, before any home received a further allotment.

This, it is understood, is the proposal Ald. Edgar broached to the dealers, with the hope that they would consent to it.

Discussing the situation, Ald. Weir remarked this afternoon that nearly all the dealers reported as much or more coal received up to the present as of the same time last year, and intimated that the dealers might not consider that there was any emergency here, or even the probability of one materializing. He pointed out that on October 1st the dealers will be required by the Governmen to reduce deliveries from the present limit of 70 percent to the 25 per cent requested by citizens who have not yet sechred any coal. Doubtless Ald. Edgar's rejoinder will probably be that the months of August and September are as valuable to the general public as to the customers of the dealers.

"And if the dealers refuse what then." Ald. Weir asked, leaving the impression that to each answer would follow successive "what thens" with the dealers still on top.

WAR VETERANS LIMIT MEMBERSHIP TO SERVICE IN FRANCE OR ENGLAND

Very Long Discussion—Western Delegates Favour Association of Men Actually in War Areas.

Membership in the Great War Veterans' Association, it was decided yesterday afternoon by the Dominion convention meeting in the Technical School, is to be limited to men who have seen service in England and France, or equivalent service in the navy, with provision for exceptional cases and for preserving the status of present members of the association not included in the category of men who have been overseas.

The decision was made after a lengthy debate, which commenced on Monday afternoon, when rules were suspended to allow the introduction of a motion by Vice-President James Robinson of Vancouver to confine the membership to men who have seen actual fighting service. They were described as "France men". The debate was broken to allow the introduction of the report of the committee selected to deal with the status of Mr. J. J. Shanahan, Second Vice-President.

STRIPPED OF HIS UNIFORM HE NEARLY NEEDS BARREL

NEW YORK, July 31. — When James Owens, of Atlantic City, pleaded guilty in Newark, N.J., to wearing unlawfully the uniform of a sergeant in the Medical Corps of the army, Judge Haight, of the United States District Court in Newark, sentenced him to three monhs in the Essex County Penitentiary and ordered that the uniform be taken off the man immediately.

"But, your Honor," the prisoner has no other clothing here," said a Marshal.

"I don't care," said Judge Haight. "He has pleaded guilty to wearing that uniform unlawfully and he is not going to to disgrace it further by wearing it to jail."

"I'll get a barrel somewhere," said the Marshal.

"Get what you please so long as you get that uniform off him," replied the Judge.

Owens was taken to the prisoners' pen outside the courtroom until a suit could be obainable for him.

LIFE OF REICHSTAG EXTENDED YEAR AS NO PEACE IS SEEN

NEW YORK, July 31.—The Berlin Tageblatt, a copy of which has been received here, says it learns that a bill will be submitted to the Reichstag prolonging the life of that body another year. The legislative period of the present Reichstag, which would have terminated in January of this year, was extended for a year in 1917.

A further extension now is to be made "because the end of the war is not yet to be foreseen," says the Tageblatt.

"HOW MANY OF YOUR SONS ARE WOUNDED?" WAR LORD IS ASKED

GENEVA, July 30. — "How many sons has Your Majesty lost? How many have been wounded or mutilated?"

These questions, incorporated in a telegram, were sent to the German emperor by Pastor Dryander, founder of the New Liberal German-American paper Friedensruf (Peace call) of Zurich.

"In the event that there have been no casualties in the Imperial family," the telegram continues, "we demand an immediate explanation."

Emperor William has not replied.

CAILLAUX TRIAL IS NEAR

PARIS, July 29.—The preliminary investigation in the case of former Premier Joseph Caillaux, charged with treason, is now virtually completed. It is understood the ex-Premier is to be tried not by a court-martial, but by the Senate sitting as a high court, as in the case of Louis Malvy, the former Minister of the Interior. No official decision has as yet been reached on this point, however.

How does your voluntary allowance compare with the British ration? Figure it out and see.

The adult is allowed a pound of meat per week and the child half a pound. The bacon ration is the same, with a supplementary allowance for heavy workers and adolescents. Five ounces of butter and margarine and two ounces of lard per head are allowed. The sugar ration is half a pound per head. The milling extraction for bread is now 90 per cent in Britain as compared with 94 per cent in Germany.

DEEP DUGOUTS ARE TOO SAFE FOR HUNS

They Hid There, So Ther're Being Filled In.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, August 1st.—It is said that the Germans are beginning to fill in a number of their deep dugouts, those classic caves twenty to thirty feet below the surface of the ground. The Germans realized that these are too comfortable, and that in past battles too many officers and men have remained in them in safety until the British had passed overhead and made them prisoners. Shallow trenches and slightly fortified shell holes are now the mode even on old fighting ground.

A Baby's Skin

What is so beautiful as baby's soft, smooth, velvety skin? And how is it to be kept free from chafing, irritations and distressing eczema? This is every mother's question.

Many have found the answer in the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Applied after the bath, this soothing, healing ointment overcomes irritation of the skin and prevents the development of eczema and other annoying skin diseases.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts to-day 51 cars, with 4,900 cattle, 311 calves, 1,345 hogs and 552 sheep and lambs.

Ben Kirk (Harris Abattoir) fought 300 hogs, fed and watered, $19.90.

The cattle market never was so badly demoralized for a long time as it is just at present. There is practically no demand for the ordinary offerings of light and medium butcher steers and heifers, particularly heifers. Nothing but weighty steers of some quality and choice fat cows and bulls are in demand. All the rest is a heavy drag on a weak market.

A sudden change for spring lambs is evident, the market going up a dollar to a dollar and a half in the past two days.

Calves are weaker.

Hogs made a big jump of 50 to 65 cents to-day. The run was light and there was keen competition.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, July 31.—The offerings of live stock at the Canadian Pacific yards for this morning's market amounted to 200 cattle, 325 sheep and lambs, 400 hogs and 200 calves. There was an active trade at this market, which cleared all offerings. The market was better in some lines, notably butchers' cows, which hold up to the $10 per 100 pounds under a good demand. The choice cows were not over plentiful, which accounts for the firmness. The market for hogs continues very firm, and choice selects were sold freely at from $19.50 to $19.75 per 100 pounds off cars. The demand for this line seems to be improving a little, after the recent lull. Calves continue in demand, and milk-fed stock sold from $7 to $14.50 per 100 pounds, according to quality. Some are very poor. Choice steers sold at $11.50 to $12 for the best. Butchers' bulls were from $7 to $8.50 per 100 pounds, a weak spot. Butchers' cows sold from $8 to $10 for choice per 100 pounds, while canners were $5.50. A very fair business was done in this line.

FALL WHEAT IS TURNING OUT BETTER THAN EXPECTED

Intense Heat of Last Week Hastened the Ripening of Spring Grains—Corn Crop is Looking Better—Harvest Season Has Been Good so Far.

FEW CALLS FOR EXTRA HELP

The following is a summary of reports made by Agriculturist Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Hay is practically all cut and housed. The crop is barely an average one, but the quality is generally good, as the weather was favorable for curing. The second crop of clover has started well, but the fields now need rain. Alsike is reported to be yielding plenty of seed. Many farmers have already cut their second crop of alfalfa.

Fall wheat is turning out better than was expected, both as to yield and quality, although Essex reports that early threshing has found some rather soft grain.

The intense heat of the past week or two has hastened the ripening of spring grains—perhaps too quickly in some instances. Considerable barley has been cut in a number of counties and is yielding heavily, although there are some complaints of loose smut. Spring wheat is coloring rapidly, and also gives good promise despite the great heat and drouth which has recently prevailed. Oats are also turning—perhaps too soon—and there is danger of the heads being light. Buckwheat is growing very fast and looks uncommonly well.

THE PEA CROP.

Peas are podding and filling. The early sown promise unusually well, but the later fields are being forced too rapidly for the best results.

Corn has come to its own weather, and is leaping into growth, although rain is needed for even this crop.

Tomatoes have also made remarkable growth during the hot spell, and those raised for the canneries are expected to give satisfactory yields.

Late potatoes have so far been less affected by disease than was feared a few weeks ago, but the hot weather and the drouth have resulted in much blight in the early potatoes, causing greatly decreased yields. On the whole, however, the prospects are still good for a fair yield of clean tubers.

Roots of all kinds are looking well. Beets are especially promising. A number of farmers in the County of Durham are experimenting with the production of mangel seed this year, some of which is proving to be exceedingly good.

Cherries have been a comparatively light yield. The raspberries have yielded well, but the very hot weather is shortening the season. The northern counties report a generous yield of huckleberries.

Between the hot weather, failing pastures, and the scarcity of mill feeds, live stock are hardly keeping up to condition. Cattle, generally speaking, are going on the market slowly, although Lambton reports a free movement of beef animals during the week. Between the flies and drying pastures the milk flow is decreasing. Milch cows continue in demand at from $100 to $140 each.

Many hogs are running on pasture, as feed is so scarce and dear. Prices for bacon animals range from $17.75 to $18.40 a cwt.

Requests from farmers for help have been fewer than was expected. The harvest season has been almost ideal so far and very little time has been lost. Some after harvest plowing has been done already in Essex, although the ground was found to be rather dry and stiff for the work. A large number of threshing machines are reported to be in operation.
